Officials advise against bus plan for commuters

by BILL HILL
Arlington Heights officials have recommended village trustees decide against establishing a shuttle bus service for commuters because funding from the Regional Transportation Authority would not cover the program.

A public transportation feasibility study recently completed by the village's planning department recommends that two commuter feeder bus routes be started as the first stage of a public transportation system. The service would take commuters to the railway station in downtown Arlington Heights during morning and evening rush periods.

THE PROJECT would require seven buses, but the RTA is willing to provide only two used CTA buses.

"Utilizing the RTA Service Development and Demonstration Grant would be too costly to the village," Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson states in a memorandum sent Wednesday to village trustees. "Preliminary estimates are that the program would cost $145,000, of which a maximum of $100,000 is available in grant support."

The Arlington Heights Village Board will review the recommendation Monday.

The deadline for applying with the RTA for the special grants is July 30.

THE PLANNING department's report suggests that the stage-one service use five 20-passenger buses and two 33-passenger buses. The proposed fare is 40 cents for a one-way ride.

With the RTA providing full funding of fixed and operating expenses the first six months and then 45 per cent funding after that point, the village would have to contribute $34,000 in 1976 and $57,000 in 1977 to pay for the program, according to Hanson's letter to the board.

CBers wage war against crime here

The Arlington Neighborhood Watch will provide "an extra set of eyes and ears" to combat vandalism and other crimes without becoming an arm of the police department, according to the group's steering committee.

About 50 persons representing 17 homeowners' associations attended the group's organizational meeting Wednesday and were told that through active citizen involvement, the vandalism and crime rate of the village can be reduced.

Richard Pease, of the steering committee, said the group was formed several months ago around a core of Citizen's Band radio operators, but will be expanded "to blanket the community."

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thou-

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later

Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a duce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said. "It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff-

Man critical after being hit by auto

A 19-year-old Wheeling man was in critical condition from injuries he suffered early Wednesday when struck by a car at the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue and Strong Street in Wheeling. William Walker, 129 Coral St., was taken to Evanston Hospital with head and internal injuries after he was struck by an auto driven by Kenneth Grutza, 47, of Northbrook. Police said Grutza reported Walker "suddenly appeared" in the street. Police said the investigation was not complete and no charges have been filed.

40 teachers may get jobs back

Forty of 54 first-year teachers recently released by Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 may be rehired Monday. Al Stone, associate superintendent, said Wednesday he expects the other 14 fired teachers will be rehired before the upcoming school year starts. The 54 teachers were released in March because of budget cuts. Stone said, however, that the attrition rate in the district has been "about normal." He said the district usually loses between 70 and 80 teachers each year through retirements and resignations. The 54 first-year teachers were told they would not be rehired in March because state law requires the school board to give teachers notification 60 days before the end of the school year if they will not receive a contract for the following year.

Chicagoan indicted in slaying

A Cook County Grand Jury Wednesday indicted Marion Logan, 30, of Chicago, for the murder Sunday of Phyllis Anderson, 51, of Buffalo Grove. Logan was charged with two counts of murder in the slaying of Mrs. Anderson, one count of attempted murder for the wounding of Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, and two counts of aggravated assault. Logan pleaded not guilty in connection with the shootings Sunday night on Chicago's South Side. The Andersons were stranded in their car with three of their six children after they were forced off the Dan Ryan Expressway onto 69th Street because of heavy rains. State's Atty. Bernard Carey said investigators believe Logan acted alone, and not as part of a gang. Logan is being held in the county jail in lieu of bond and is scheduled to appear in circuit court July 17.

50 to watch for vandalism

About 50 Arlington Heights residents representing 17 homeowners' associations attended an organizational meeting Wednesday of the Arlington Neighborhood Watch. The watch is designed to provide "an extra set of eyes and ears" to combat vandalism and other crimes in the village through the use of Citizens' Band radios, according to the group's steering committee. "We don't want to be a vigilante group," committee member Charles DeAndrea said. "All we want to do is report." The group was formed several months ago and will be expanded to "blanket the community," committee member Richard Pease said. "We need a flock of white knights out there" to report traffic accidents, crimes in progress, fires and vandalism, Pease said.

House kills 'no fault' divorce bill

A bill that made efforts to amend the state's divorce laws to modernize some procedures and allow for "no fault" divorces, which took over a year to draft, was killed by the Illinois House Wednesday.

The House voted 78-76 on the legislation, but 89 votes were needed to approve the bill and send it on to the Illinois Senate for consideration. Most opponents attacked the legislation, charging it would weaken the family unit.

The proposed law would have permitted a couple to use irreconcilable differences as grounds if the couple had been living apart for one year, require a marriage counselor if either partner thought the marriage could be saved, and allow judges to appoint child guardians if they believed the divorce decree did not adequately take care of them.

STATE REP. Richard Mugalian, D-Palatine, a member of the House Judiciary I committee that approved the bill, said he was disappointed by the House action.

"I think the bill was misunderstood, it would not have encouraged divorce. It would have changed a lot of technical features and generally modernized the state divorce laws," Mugalian added.

He added that the legislation is now dead for the remainder of 1976 and could not be reintroduced until next January, at the earliest.

"The bill would have ended a lot of perjury," Mugalian said. Other supporters of the bill noted the current Illinois law forces couples to lie in court so they can qualify for a divorce under the state's present acceptable grounds.

$2 bills here to stay, and you better like it

man, director of mutuels for the race track.

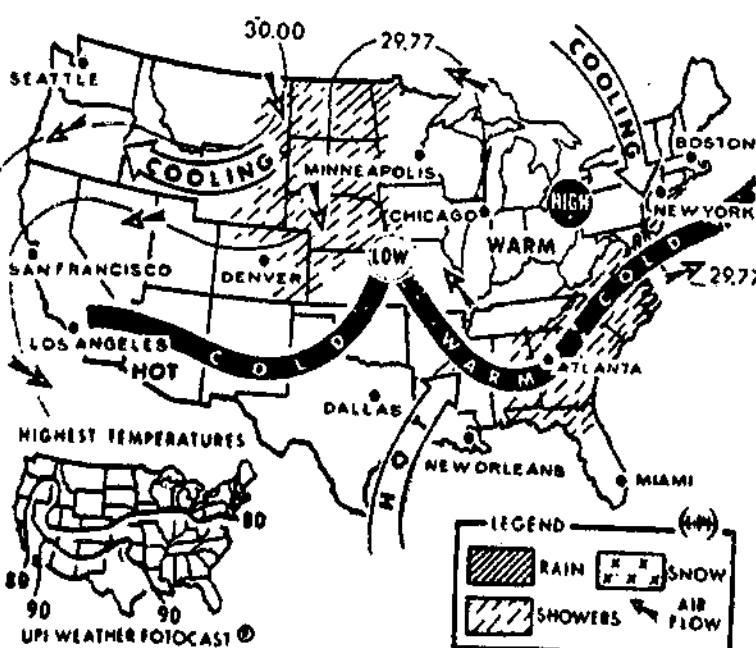

By this time, those who missed seeing the bill in the 1960s and 60s when it was last circulated, know that a portrait of Thomas Jefferson by Gilbert Stuart flanks the face of the bill while John Trumbull's painting, "The Signing of the Declaration of Independence," is on the back.

If anything, the crisp, green bills have been worn somewhat by the superstitious who believe that tearing off a corner of the bill will ward off any bad luck the deuce carries.

"I don't think most people have given it much thought," said one Des Plaines resident who was cashing her pay check one afternoon.

"I suppose everyone has their reasons for not wanting to use the $2 bills. But, when you think about it, it's still money. And it's worth twice as much as any old single."

10,000 blacks, whites battle in S. Africa

A mob of 10,000 black students battled police and whites Wednesday, stabbing and stoning to death some whites and setting police dogs on fire. Police fired into the crowd, killing some blacks. Police said at least six persons were killed, including four whites and more than 70 persons were injured. Some 20 blacks were treated for gunshot wounds. Police surrounded the town of Soweto where some 1 million blacks live about 15 miles south of Johannesburg, and brought in reinforcements, including black and white riot squads and extra dog teams, from surrounding towns.

Helicopters flew over the riot area where the rampaging students, protesting being forced to learn the Dutch-based Africans language, set cars and houses on fire. The students sang the black nationalist anthem "Nkosi Sikelele Africa" (God Bless Africa) and gave the clenched fist salute.

Christian Dems. favored in Italian poll

The ruling Christian Democrats are running narrowly ahead of the Communists in voter preference just four days before Italy's national elections, but their support is slipping, according to a poll published Wednesday. The poll showed the Christian Democrats favored by 34 per cent of the electors and the Communists by 32.9 per cent. The independent left-wing Rome newspaper La Repubblica, which published the survey, said the Christian Democrats have lost a full percentage point since May 23 while the Communists have gained slightly and the Socialists have jumped ahead even more.

Philadelphia mayor faces recall election

An investigation by three Philadelphia commissioners opened Wednesday to determine if 212,000 persons who signed a petition to recall Mayor Frank L. Rizzo voted in November's election. If 145,000 of them did, the mayor will either have to resign or face a recall election. The election would be a straight "yes-no" referendum to retain Rizzo in office. The signatures were presented to the commissioners Tuesday by The Citizens Committee To Recall Rizzo. Under the city charter, they were required to obtain signatures of 25 per cent of those who voted in the last election — or 145,000 voters — to force a recall election.

Shotgun bandits rob Brinks truck

Four men armed with sawed-off shotguns and wearing black masks held up a Brinks armored truck Wednesday outside a bank in a crowded Newton, Mass. shopping plaza. They escaped with $20,000. The bandits hit the truck at about 11:18 a.m. while Brinks guards were making a regular delivery to the Newton Waltham Bank at the Chestnut Hill Shopping Plaza. One bag of money was taken. Two of the bandits jumped the guards as they approached the entrance of the bank pushing a cart loaded with ten bags of money. "The bandits made the men lie down on the ground. They went through most of the bags and took one of them," a Brinks spokesman said.

FBI probes tick disease letters

A second company late Wednesday reported receiving a letter containing alleged disease-bearing ticks, an indication FBI fears of a nationwide extortion plot may have substance. The latest target, a technical center of Mobil Chemical Co.'s plastics division located in Macedon, N.Y., received the letter Monday and opened it Tuesday. The letter was forwarded to FBI headquarters in Washington which already was studying a similar letter to an insurance company in Denver. The Denver letter claimed the ticks were infected with disease agents the FBI said could cause illnesses "up to and including rabies" if the claims were true. There have been no reported ill effects from the letters.

Two dead, 17 hurt in 'river of fire'

A gasoline explosion that erupted into a stream of fire at a street construction site killed at least two persons, injured 17 and laid waste a block of buildings on the west side of Los Angeles Wednesday. Police said three persons were unaccounted for and the wreckage of buildings was searched for more victims. "Flames were like a river of fire in the gutter," said one survivor. One man was killed when the flames engulfed his car as he drove by. Four of the injured, burned on at least 45 per cent of their bodies, were reported in critical condition.

sands. "In our civil war, more than 30,000 people have died, many of them in the same way as the ambassador," one Lebanese official said. "Nobody has ever been caught. Nobody ever will be. There is no one to catch them."

In New York, the Palestine Liberation Organization said it had conducted an "extensive investigation" and found that neither "Palestinian Resistance nor the Lebanese National Movement had anything to do" with the deaths of the Americans.

Reliable diplomatic sources said the diplomats were shot several times in the head with a small caliber pistol. Their bodies, wrapped in bloody carpets, were dumped on a sidewalk in the Ramlet El Braida sector of the capital, controlled by leftist and Palestinian forces, the sources said.

But while calling for apprehension of the killers, Ford said, "At the same time, we must continue our policy of seeking a peaceful solution in Lebanon." He said this "is the way we can best honor the brave men who gave their lives for their country and for the cause of peace."

The White House, State Department and Pentagon meanwhile reviewed contingency plans for an emergency evacuation of the estimated 1,400 Americans in Lebanon, including 53 embassy staff members, a State Department spokesman said.

Confirmation the three were dead reached the President as he sat with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and other advisers in a White House conference on the disappearance.

Ford said, "These men were on their way to meet with President-elect Sarkis. They were on a mission of peace, seeking to do what they could in the service of their country to help restore order, stability and reason to Lebanon."

The assassination was "an act of senseless, outrageous brutality," Ford said, adding he had ordered Kissinger to reach "all governments in the area and with the Lebanese leaders to help identify the murderers and to see that they are brought to justice."

"I have also ordered that all appropriate resources of the United States undertake immediately to identify the persons or group responsible for this vicious act," he said. He did not elaborate on "all appropriate resources."

Ford said he would shortly name a new ambassador to Lebanon to succeed Meloy, who had taken up the Beirut post only five weeks ago.

Meloy was summoned from Guatemala, where as U.S. ambassador he earned official plaudits for his cool-headed administration of U.S. aid in February's catastrophic earthquake, to take over Ford's mediation efforts in Lebanon from special envoy Dean Brown.

Ford heavily stressed that despite the official grief and anger at the diplomats' deaths, "we must continue our policy of seeking a peaceful solution in Lebanon."

Kissinger said the men "served the cause of peace and died for that cause."

CLOUDS OF black smoke billow over ruins of Beirut's port district during new battles between Lebanese Christians and Moslems. In other action

Wednesday, U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr. and an aide were kidnaped and killed while driving to a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis.

Top-secret documents revealed

CIA—29 years of covert activity

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Documents made public Wednesday show the CIA for 29 years has engaged in covert operations ranging from subversion and sabotage to aiding guerrillas — although nothing in its charter authorizes such activities.

Morton H. Halperin, a former Pentagon official and once an associate of Henry Kissinger on the National Security Council, discussed at a news conference the top-secret documents obtained under the Freedom of Information Act.

Halperin and the American Civil Liberties Union have been seeking CIA and NSC documents the government has kept secret because it says "they would seriously jeopardize national security" and even the lives of agents abroad.

But Halperin said Wednesday there was nothing in the material released that could have endangered anyone's life or told any foreign government what it did not already know.

From the material made available, a clear pattern emerged that — unknown to Congress or the American people — the CIA from its inception 29 years ago specifically engaged in what a 1948 agency document defined as:

"Covert operations" (which) are understood to be all activities . . . which are conducted or sponsored by this government against hostile foreign states or groups or in support of friendly foreign states or groups but which are so planned and conducted that any U.S. government responsibility for them is not evident to unauthorized persons and that if uncovered the U.S. government can plausibly disclaim any responsibility for them.

"Specifically, such operations shall include any covert activities related to: propaganda; economic warfare; preventive direct action, including sabotage; antisabotage; demolition and evacuation measures; subversion against hostile states, including assistance to underground resistance movements, guerrillas and refugee liberation groups, and support of indigenous anti-Communist elements in threatening countries of the free world. Such operations shall not include armed conflict by recognized military forces; espionage, counterespionage, and cover and deception for military operations."

A Feb. 17, 1970 directive signed by President Richard Nixon and addressed to the secretary of state, secretary of defense and director of the CIA, said "I have determined that it is essential to the defense and security of the United States and its efforts for world peace that the overt foreign activities of the U.S. government continue to be supplemented by covert action operations."

"By covert action operations, I mean those activities which, although designed to further official U.S. programs and policies abroad, are so planned and executed that the hand of the U.S. government is not apparent to unauthorized persons."

Nixon directed that covert action operations "shall include any type of activity necessary to carry out approved purposes except that they will not include armed conflict . . ."

House Dems postpone Hays ouster vote

WASHINGTON (UPI) — House Democrats agreed Wednesday to wait a week before voting whether to remove Rep. Wayne Hays from his powerful position as head of the Administration Committee because of the Capitol Hill sex scandal.

Some first-term Democrats wanted a vote on the issue Wednesday. But at the urging of Speaker Carl Albert, who noted Hays still is recovering in his home state Ohio from an overdose of sleeping pills, the party caucus agreed to the one-week delay.

Rep. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., himself a freshman member, said the Democrats decided "overwhelmingly" by voice vote to go along with Albert. He added, however, that "if there is an effort to postpone it beyond that time . . . there will be a fight in the caucus."

Hays remained at the Barnesville, Ohio, Medical Center, where administrator James Peters reported the congressman is still nauseated and vomiting.

There were these other developments in the sex scandal, which began unfolding with a charge by 33-year-old Elizabeth Ray that Hays kept her on the government payroll purely to have sex with her:

• Spencer W. Kimball, head of the Mormon church, said in London that Rep. Allan Howe, D-Utah, should consider resigning because of charges he solicited two policemen posing as prostitutes in Salt Lake City. Howe, to be arraigned on the misdemeanor charge Monday, still is deliberating whether to take that course. He returned to his Salt Lake City home Wednesday.

• At the Southern Baptist Convention meeting in Norfolk, Va., newly elected denomination president James L. Sullivan told a news conference he believes the public and private lives of elected officials cannot be separated.

• Rep. Charles Vanik, D-Ohio, responding to a story in the Cleveland Plain Dealer, said he acted purely out of compassion in keeping a woman with a police record for prostitution on his home district office payroll.

• The Washington Star reported that Colleen Gardner has given federal prosecutors tape recordings to substantiate her charge that Rep. John Young, D-Tex., hired her at $26,000 a year primarily for her sexual favors.

Ford, Reagan head for same event

by United Press International President Ford will appear at the same campaign event as rival Ronald Reagan in their next showdown this weekend in Iowa, it was announced Wednesday.

The two candidates for the GOP presidential nomination will appear and speak at a dinner in honor of Republican National Committee chairman Mary Louise Smith in Des Moines Friday night before the two-day state party convention begins selecting 35 national delegates.

Democrat Jimmy Carter, relaxing and fishing off the Georgia coast Wednesday, got the formal support of former opponent Henry Jackson, who urged his 232 remaining committed delegates to support Carter on the first ballot.

In a telegram to them, the Washington senator said, "In view of his successes in the primaries, he is, I believe, the strongest possible candidate our party can put forward for the November election. I intend to campaign hard for him."

The day before Jackson released his delegates, Carter picked up enough delegate commitments to put him over the 1,505 needed to win the nomination.

Ford leads Reagan 1,009 to 893, with 1,130 needed for the GOP nomination. The Iowa contest is considered by both sides to be close. Other states selecting Republican delegates this weekend are Delaware and Washington. Democratic delegates will be chosen in Utah and Texas.

White House Press Secretary Ron Nessen said Ford will fly to Des Moines Friday afternoon.

Carter's successful campaign for the nomination cost him almost $6 million so far, but he ran up a $1.2 million debt. Reagan, who last month had a $1 million debt, paid off most of it through contributions. Ford showed a $330,000 surplus.

Lady Bird sees Bicentennial spirit

• The Bicentennial spirit has opened a new era of challenge to Americans, according to Lady Bird Johnson. "I believe that thousands of Americans, from sea to shining sea, are trying and giving us cause to rejoice, and more than that, defining the challenge of what we have yet to do," said the widow of President Lyndon Johnson.

• Former President Richard Nixon is asking a federal court to allow a flag made by a former prisoner of war and given to him in 1974 to be displayed in Philadelphia's July 4th parade. Fashioned from scraps of clothing and towels by Lt. Col. John Damesel while a POW for six years in Hanoi, the flag is being held with other material Nixon received while President by the General Services Administration. The material is being held to assure that no Watergate-related evidence is destroyed.

• A survey released Wednesday shows the average young Russian wants his future bride to be loving, faithful and hardworking. . . and in that order. Young Russian girls, on the other hand, want their husbands to be just as loving, good with children and modest. Take that, Gloria Steinem.

• The Duchess of Windsor, for whom King Edward VIII gave up the British throne, will turn 80 Saturday. The American-born duchess is ailing and confined to her bed, still weak from two months of treatment for perforated ulcers, members of her household said.

• Princess Grace of Monaco is returning to the motion picture world, but not before the cameras and hot lights. She will become a member of the board of Twentieth Century Fox studios, board chairman Dennis Stauf said. As Grace Kelly she won an Academy Award in 1954 for her role in "The Country Girl." She left acting when she married Prince Rainier of Monaco in 1956.

• The personal physician of J. Paul Getty said the late billionaire contracted cancer during the last months of his life. Dr. Clive Mackenzie said prostate cancer was diagnosed two months ago. Getty died June 6 at the age of 83. "Mr. Getty knew he had cancer," Dr. Mackenzie said. "I discussed it with him and he took it very well. He was one of the few people I'd tell outright."

• Senate Republican leader Hugh Scott plans to go to Peking next month to gain a first-hand report of the Chinese political situation for President Ford.

Scott's interest in China dates back to the pre-World War II days when he was a lawyer in Philadelphia. Scott is the author of "The Golden Days of Chinese Art."

Ghettos called best for public housing

Chicago urbanologist Pierre De Vise says low-density public housing should be built in the city's black ghettos instead of in the suburbs, where it would possibly weaken the private housing market. De Vise, in a speech prepared for delivery Thursday to the Chicago chapter of the National Assn. of Housing and Redevelopment Officials, said many of Chicago's housing problems result from a glut of inner-city housing created by excessive housing construction in the suburbs.

De Vise said his most recent findings indicate that the "location of low-density public housing in the black housing market has the virtue of supplying the housing that can best adjust to the downward pressure on prices that results from the housing glut in older black areas. "Even if it were politically feasible," he said, "dispersing public housing to selected suburbs would tend to weaken the private housing market in these areas."

Two face rifle stealing charges

Lawrence King, 28, Skokie, and Stanley Stann, 34, Chicago, were indicted by a federal grand jury Wednesday on charges they conspired to steal M-16 automatic rifles from a U.S. Marine Corps Reserve armory on Chicago's West Side. An undercover Treasury Dept. agent met Stann last March 19 to determine whether Stann had weapons and explosives to sell. Stann allegedly said he could get about a dozen M-16 automatic rifles and could arrange to "hit" an armory for more guns, according to the complaint filed with U.S. Magistrate James T. Balog.

Mom pleads innocent to shooting

Esther Clay, 29, Chicago, accused of shooting a man who allegedly raped her 8-year-old daughter, pleaded innocent Wednesday. Mrs. Clay is charged with attempted murder and aggravated battery in the shooting of Patrick Williams, 27, on June 1 when Williams was handcuffed to a wall in a police station.

Police said Mrs. Clay, the mother of seven, shot Williams in a "fit of anger or rage" because her daughter had been attacked allegedly by Williams. Williams, charged with rape, was shot five times in the chest and arms. He was listed in fair condition Wednesday at Cook County Hospital.

Keane won't get early release

Former Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane, imprisoned and reported ailing, lost a court battle Wednesday to have his five-year prison term reduced. Keane's lawyer, John Powers Crowley, made the request on grounds that Keane's health was deteriorating. He said the 70-year-old politician is suffering from coronary arteriosclerosis, gall stones, cardiac enlargement and hypertension. "The likelihood of him surviving any length of time in prison is problematical," said Crowley.

Circle teachers ask pay hike

About 400 of 1,000 faculty members at the University of Illinois Chicago Circle signed petitions and sent them to state and university officials Wednesday, seeking a bigger pay increase. The group threatened to stage a job action this fall if their demand for salary increases — higher than the average 2 per cent hikes being offered — is not met. The professors sent the petitions to Gov. Daniel Walker and University of Illinois Pres. John Corbally Jr.

Senate panel OKs 3 malpractice bills

An Illinois Senate committee Wednesday approved a three-bill package designed to cut the rising costs of medical malpractice insurance and correct legislation thrown out by the Illinois Supreme Court. All three bills (H3967, H3968, S1952), sponsored by Senate Pres. Cecil Partee, passed the Senate Insurance and Licensed Activities Committee by an 11 to 10 vote and now go to the Senate floor for consideration.

The bills include provisions that:

- Give judges the authority to reduce malpractice awards if patients also receive compensation for their injuries from other sources.
- Deletes a 10-year statute of limitation for filing suits in cases where foreign objects are left in the patient.
- Relaxes requirements for doctors to file countersuits against patients and attorneys who file groundless suits.
- Eliminate a dollar figure from the plaintiff's complaint when filing a malpractice suit. The legislation would not place a limitation on the amount of suit.

84 airport projects set

The Illinois Dept. of Transportation said Wednesday it plans 84 improvement projects costing $103.3 million at 36 airports during the fiscal year starting next month. The $103.3 million includes $69 million in federal money, $24.4 million in local funds and $9.9 million in state funding. State transportation officials said there are no improvements plans scheduled for airports in the Northwest suburbs. The state plans calls for more than $42 million to be spent on O'Hare, Midway and Meigs airports in Chicago. The proposal, which must be approved by the Illinois General Assembly, also calls for a $210,000 runway rehabilitation program at DuPage County Airport.

RTA to discuss ouster

Pikarsky debate starts Monday

Directors of the Regional Transportation Authority Monday are expected to discuss whether Milton Pikarsky will continue as head of the six-county agency.

The suburban board members Wednesday said they plan to call an executive session, tentatively scheduled for Monday. Although the controversy over Pikarsky's chairmanship of the RTA has raged for three months, the meeting will be the first called for discussion of that matter.

"I think it is time for an executive session to discuss the subject of the chairman's tenure," said D. Daniel Baldino of Evanston.

The suburban directors have threatened to block passage of the budget for the fiscal year beginning July 1 unless Pikarsky resigns. They charge the chairman is an inept administrator, a liar and unfair to the suburbs.

BALDINO SAID THE suburban directors have been considering the need for a closed door discussion for a couple of days. He said the meeting may be one of many, noting that the law requires passage of the budget by June 30.

The suburban directors also charged that a recent proposal by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry for an independent study of the RTA may be designed to buy time for Pikarsky.

Baldino said he supports a public inquiry into RTA operations if the study is designed to help restructure the RTA. He said he opposes any study designed to postpone Pikarsky's ouster.

He said, however, he would welcome input from the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry in finding a replacement for Pikarsky.

Pikarsky has endorsed the association's call for public inquiry, and plans to ask the board to hire a management consultant firm.

Plan to limit control of RTA fails

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (UPI) — The Illinois Senate Wednesday defeated three amendments designed to kill a bill that would reduce Chicago's control in the Regional Transportation Authority.

The bill moved to passage stage despite fights at each level of the legislative process.

In other RTA-related action, state Rep. Don Deuster, R-Mundelein, Tuesday introduced a bill which would make the RTA chairmanship a non-voting post. Deuster said the bill would give suburban and collar counties the same number of votes on the board as Chicago.

The first fight on the Senate bill occurred earlier this month when the bill was passed out over the objections of the Chicago Democrats, who said Downstate Democrats and Republicans had conducted "a rump" committee session to pass the bill.

THE THREE amendments rejected by the Senate Wednesday included two introduced by Sen. Philip Rock, D-Chicago, which would have killed the bill. Sen. Thomas Hynes, D-Chicago, also offered an amendment to allow the five collar counties to "opt out" of the authority by special referendum in an attempt to make the bill unpalatable at passage stage.

Rock and Senate Pres. Cecil Partee said the bill should not be taken up this late in the session, which is scheduled to end June 30. He also said the manner in which the bill moved out of committee did not allow for testimony.

The bill would change the method of selection of the members and the chairman; guarantee that RTA tax revenues would be spent in the service area in which they are collected; and allow the RTA board to impose taxes selectively, thus drawing money from Chicago without necessarily taxing the suburbs.

Bills on dangerous cargoes delayed until January

by JOE SWICKARD
Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January. State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing." HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centreville and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

"We literally do not know what toxic substances are manufactured, stored, used or moved throughout the state. We do not even require that emergency contingency plans be prepared by those who store or ship hazardous materials," Briceland said.

Urging the increased controls, he said, "Most of all, we need to take steps to prevent future . . . incidents . . . It would be tragic indeed if some catastrophic accident must occur before we recognize the full magnitude of the hazardous materials danger in Illinois."

Regner said one major problem that must be overcome in the legislation is the federal preemption in governing interstate shipments by rail. He said finding a means of overcoming this "conflict" is one reason for the delay.

REGNER SAID another problem to be overcome is the lack of awareness of the problem by public officials and the citizens.

"We need education on both sides. As far as public response goes, there hasn't been much," he said.

"I feel certain that something will pass" in the next session Regner said.

"It may be a weak piece at first, but I hope not," he said, adding that once legislation is on the books it can be strengthened later.

committee, said "there are just too many facets for just the CBs" alone. DeAndrea said homeowners' representatives and members of the business community will round out the program.

"WE DON'T want to be a vigilante group," he said. "All we want to do is report."

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. has been monitoring the emergency channel of the Citizens' Band radio for several months with desk personnel. The Neighborhood Watch group hopes to augment this with volunteer monitors stationed around the clock at the police department.

Residents attending the initial meeting said persons many times are afraid to report crime to the police for fear of retaliation.

The steering committee said members will be assigned secret numbers through which they can identify themselves when reporting crimes, vandalism or other suspicious activities. The steering committee also said the use of the identification numbers will enable the monitors to discriminate "reliable sources" from potential crank callers.

PEASE SAID, "We need a flock of white knights out there" to report situations such as traffic accidents,

Two youths caught in school break-ins

Arlington Heights police have arrested two village boys who allegedly broke into an elementary and junior high school at least five times during the past week.

Police said the two youths, ages 12 and 13, burglarized the St. James elementary and junior high school complex, 821 and 800 N. Arlington Heights Rd., at least five times between June 9 and Monday.

A custodian caught the boys after they reportedly used a glass cutter to break into the junior high school's gymnasium shortly after 9 p.m. Monday, police said.

The youths, who were charged with delinquency, but gave no reason for the repeated break-ins, police said.

The youths allegedly stole books, office equipment, an intercom button, and a movie screen. Police said the youths, who do not attend St. James, also vandalized blackboards and switches while inside the school.

The stolen goods were recovered at the homes of the juveniles, police said.

In all the break-ins except one, in which youths walked through an open door, the boys used a glass cutter to gain entry. Police said the youths Sunday also broke into the St. James parish center, 821 N. Arlington Heights Rd., but took nothing.

The juveniles were released to their parents and will be petitioned to the Skokie Juvenile Screening Division prior to trial in Cook County Juvenile Court, police said.

crimes in progress, curfew violations or fires.

He said by use of the Neighborhood Watch identification numbers, CBers will be able to check their effectiveness.

Pease said the program receives no funding from the village or the business community and will be supported for the time being through its membership. However, he said the group may in the future approach businessmen or the Chamber of Commerce for supplemental funds.

Although the group has no formal ties with the village, the police department is cooperating with them through Deputy Chief Paul Buckholz and the department's crime prevention bureau.

Monthly meetings will be held at the village municipal building.

Dist. 23 stalls gifted program ruling

A decision on providing education for gifted children in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 was delayed Wednesday night by the board of education until the Illinois General Assembly decides what funds will be allotted for gifted programs.

The board discussed five possible programs presented to them last week by Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern. The board had asked for gifted program alternatives after members were told that many of the teachers trained in gifted education had left the district.

All the programs provide some kind of training for "our major resource, which is the classroom teacher," McGovern said.

"THERE IS a tendency to think of a gifted program as something isolated from the school," McGovern said. "When a district employs a specialized teacher for the gifted, classroom teachers tend to be less aware of a gifted child's needs," he said.

McGovern said the district now "covers the waterfront very well" in some areas of gifted education, but suggested a gifted program next year concentrate on intermediate grade children and intellectually gifted children.

Because several of the programs involve some type of reimbursement from the state, the board decided to delay its decision on the programs until the state legislature determines what state aid will be provided for gifted programs for the next school year.

The state will decide on its allotment in late July or early August, McGovern said.

McGOVERN SAID that when the state runs low on money, gifted education is the first to be cutback.

"Part of the problem is that parents of gifted children haven't organized to pressure the legislature the way parents of other children have," he said.

Board member Vincent Battaglia said he feels "we have to do something in the gifted area, but considering the financial condition of the district, I don't think we can do anything but wait for the state."

program calls for three more commuter feeder routes requiring nine additional buses to be added in the fall of 1978.

Future recommendations in the planning department report call for collector routes along Arlington Heights Road from Dundee Road to Golf Road.

Bus service has not been provided in Arlington Heights since 1974 when the system run by the Metron Systems Corp. failed to develop sufficient ridership to pay for itself.

Utility tax might stay in village

The village utility tax may have to be continued if Arlington Heights is to avoid deficit spending during the next five years, Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson told the fiscal policy planning committee Wednesday.

"It's quite obvious that if we don't do something, we will have to continue to use the utility tax in the general corporate fund to run the community," Hanson said.

The utility tax or another alternative will be necessary to balance the village's budget because the assessed valuation of village property is not increasing at the same rate as inflation, Hanson said.

THE 5 PER CENT utility tax has been a political football since it was put into effect in 1970. Several village trustees and Village Pres. James T. Ryan have already announced they will fight to repeal the tax when it is reviewed this fall.

All obligations on projects funded by the utility tax will be completed by Dec. 31, 1976, according to Finance Director Kenneth Bonder.

The average Arlington Heights homeowner pays about $75 a year in utility taxes, Bonder said. The controversial tax nets the village about $1.5 million annually, he said.

A major complaint against the utility tax has been that it is not tax deductible, but municipal finance managers recently have urged the Illinois Atty. Gen. William Scott to attempt to convince the Internal Revenue Service to change that policy, Bonder said.

IF THAT MOVEMENT is unsuccessful, Bonder said he probably will recommend that the village retain the utility tax at one per cent. At that level, the tax should be tax deductible because municipalities are now allowed to levy a one per cent sales tax, which is deductible, Bonder said.

But a one per cent utility tax will not be enough to avoid a spending deficit, Hanson said. "We're going to have to have some other new sources of revenue to operate," he said.

Other possible sources mentioned Wednesday were a real estate transfer tax and parking and permit taxes on Arlington Park Race Track. The legalities of such taxes will have to be checked, Bonder said.

Townhomes, apartments planned

Seniors housing project proposed

The Lutheran Home and Service for the Aged will submit plans for apartments and townhouses for the elderly to the Village of Arlington Heights for approval early this fall.

Paul Hauer, executive secretary for the nursing home facility, said construction of the single-story townhouses and low-rise apartments should begin early next year. They will be built north of the building at 800 W. Oakton St.

The 50-acre site will be developed on demand, Hauer said. The area has the capacity for approximately 1,000 units, he said.

The plans are the third phase of the Lutheran Home's long-range master plan to develop a "continual care" center, he said.

Under the new concept, elderly residents will live in the apartments and townhouses until constant medical care is necessary.

Transportation and medical services will be available, Hauer said.

"Our goal is for them to keep their individual living status as long as possible. With these supportive services, they will be able to maintain this status longer," he said.

Picnic sites may be reserved for fest

Warnings fail, police to ticket sprinklers

Arlington Heights police have been directed to begin issuing tickets to residents who violate the village ordinance limiting lawn sprinkling to Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

Schools

Arlington Heights Dist. 25

The Kensington PTA, Arlington Heights, sponsored a free screening program for foot maladies June 3 at the school, 201 S. Evans-ton.

More than 300 students participated in the screening which was done by the Illinois College of Podiatric Medicine.

Foot screening consists of a brief but thorough examination of foot skin and nail conditions, foot structure, foot and leg posture, wear of foot gear for any irregularities and a gait analysis.

Doctors Louis Sorta, Des Plaines, and Jerome Mann, Floyd Nightlinger and Donald Cosley, all of Arlington Heights conducted the examinations aided by students from the Podiatric College

High School Dist. 214

The North High School Dist. 214 Symphony Orchestra, directed by Bruce Fowler, has been invited to perform at the 30th annual Midwest National Band and Orchestra Clinic in Chicago in December.

Only three high school orchestras were selected through taped auditions for the clinic, the largest of its type in the United States.

The Dist. 214 orchestra is composed of 81 students from Arlington, Buffalo Grove, Hersey and Wheeling high schools.

A memorial scholarship fund has been established in honor of Michael Caruso of Prospect Heights, a former senior at Hersey High School. He died in a canoe accident in New York in April.

His family established the scholarship, to be awarded annually to a graduating senior from Hersey, Arlington Heights. The scholarship will be awarded by a committee of faculty members on the basis of intellectual, social and emotional growth during high school.

Contributions to the fund may be sent to the Michael Caruso Memorial Scholarship, c/o Robert J. Hannon, Hersey High School, 1900 E. Thomas St., Arlington Heights, Ill. 60004.

The Rolling Meadows High School Jazz Ensemble was selected to play with the Notre Dame band at the recent Notre Dame Collegiate Jazz Festival.

Rolling Meadows and a group from Lorain, Ohio, received recognition as the outstanding jazz bands in the high school competition entered by bands from Michigan, Indiana, Illinois and Ohio.

Dave Mester, a junior, was named best trombone soloist.

The jazz ensemble, directed by Len King, consists of students Al Fuglestad, Sandra Vana, Mike Pagels, Jeff Zoellick and Kevin Hill, saxophone; David Mester, Jeff Jay, Doug Harry and Nick Betzold, trombone; Tom Olson, Dave Hill, Bob Kuhn, Brian Germano, Don Ewald and Dave Dunham, trumpet; Karen Kasen, piano; Steve Schreiner, bass; Mark Livingood, tuba; Deanna Linke, vibes; and Rod Jay and Jim Brankin, drums.

Linda Shoemaker and Howard Hollander, students at Buffalo Grove High School and the director of student activities, Paul Mueller, will attend the 40th annual national conference of the National Assn. of Student Councils, June 20-24 in Portland, Ore.

Hollander was selected by the NASC program committee to lead a seminar-discussion entitled "Communication — The Key to a Successful Student Council." He graduated in June and was active in student council, debate, wrestling, tennis and swing choir and state and national student council conventions.

Miss Shoemaker will attend the Oregon conference as a delegate and a candidate to the NASC advisory committee for region five. Region five includes Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Ohio and West Virginia. She is one of two Illinois students who will compete for the position of regional representative.

Reunions

The 23rd annual Steinmetz High School Alumni Assn. picnic will be held at noon June 27 at the Lake Avenue Woods East, Euclid Road between Milwaukee Avenue and River Road. There will be games for everyone.

The board of governors of the association recently elected the following officers for two-year terms: Louis Houkal, president; Earl Herzog, vice president; May Nelson, treasurer; Marge Graham, corresponding secretary; and Carol Machowski, recording secretary.

In general...

Diane Kallgren of Buffalo Grove is one of 24 students chosen nationally as recipients of four-year Archdiocesan Scholarships to the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C.

To qualify for the scholarship, applicants must be recommended by a high school counselor, attain a high class rank and obtain high college entrance examination board scores.

Miss Kallgren will enter the school of arts and sciences in the fall.

Pam Calcatera of Mount Prospect is a recent graduate of St. Mary's Academy in Nauvoo, Ill. She also is a graduate of River Trails Junior High School and plans to major in business at Harper College. Pam ranked in the top five of her Academy graduating class.

Reinstate special ed director, parents ask

by JUDY JOBBITT

A group of more than 60 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 parents with students in special education programs has protested the decentralization plan for the special services department and has demanded reinstatement of the former director.

In a letter given to the school board Monday, the parents stated their "primary demand is that Merle Nevenhoven be immediately reinstated as head of special education and student services departments." They stated that he is the "only individual" responsible for developing the current special education programs.

Nevenhoven was demoted from the director of the department to a psychologist's position in the district this year as part of a reorganization of the central administration. Merlyn Swanson currently is director of pupil personnel services.

"The parents told the board their 'second demand is that you immediately reject your decision as to the decentralization of the special education and students services department. It is unacceptable to us in every way.'"

THE PARENTS also asked that they be "included in any future decisions as to changes" in the special education program department.

Mary Kay Canupp, wife of board member Charles Canupp, who presented the letter to the board on behalf of the parents, said the parents were not satisfied with the answers they received from Supt. Roger Bardwell.

The goal of the decentralization plan is to place more people directly in contact with the students, Bardwell said Tuesday.

"The decentralization has not affected special education at all," he said. Bardwell said the instructors in the special education department are now assigned to a group of schools rather than to specific cases throughout the district as under the former system.

HE SAID this places more responsibility on the principal who, with the help of the teachers, must decide the number and type of special instructors needed in his building.

Bardwell said Swanson is responsible for overseeing the principals' decisions and ensuring that students are receiving the services they need.

Board president Judith Zanca said she sent a letter to the parents group stating the board hopes to have "better utilization of our staff" through the new plan. She said the board is "proud of our special education program" and that each school will have a full special services staff.

Mrs. Zanca said the board does not intend to reinstate Nevenhoven or change the current organization of special education staffing.

The long look down Navy Pier leads to an impressive view of Chicago's skyline.

One good way to p(i)er at the skyline

by KURT BAER

Visitors to Chicago this summer will not need a boat for an off-shore view of the city's spectacular skyline, thanks to the renovation and reopening of the 660-foot-long Navy Pier.

The city has spent six months and $7 million remodeling the five-eighths mile pier at Ohio Street and the lake. A promenade has been constructed along the north side for a walk or bicycle ride out to the end of the pier where three buildings have been restored to their pre-World War I condition.

The main objective has been to fix up the 60-year-old pier as a recreational facility, said Jerome Butler, architect for the city of Chicago.

"THEIR PRIMARY activity has been to get the pier once again usable so people can get out on it. For the past several years it has been accessible only from a second-floor walkway on the dock side where people could see the ships.

"From the far east end, the view of the skyline is really spectacular," Butler said.

Navy Pier reopens next month as the site for the Chicago International Trade Exposition, July 1-18, sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry.

On the event of the trade show opening, June 30, the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation will sponsor a benefit ball inaugurating the glass-walled auditorium at the eastern tip of the pier.

"WE'VE MADE AN honest attempt to restore the buildings. We've re-installed the original streetlights and gone to great lengths to match the existing building materials," Butler said.

Old-fashioned trolley cars will run along the north side of the pier for persons who do not want to walk or bike the distance.

A floating stage is being constructed on a barge south of the pier with grandstand seats positioned on the south deck.

There are plans for a restaurant on the second floor of one of the buildings with a sheltered picnic area below.

During the International Trade Fair a carnival will be in operation.

"THIS IS BY NO means the complete restoration of the entire pier. It still requires upgrading of the exhibition halls (west of the auditorium)," Butler said.

Navy Pier was built in 1916 at a cost of $4.5 million. It was part of a 1912 master plan that called for five piers to make Chicago an inland port and to divert water from the Chicago River.

At the time it opened, it was the largest structure of its kind in the world.

Navy Pier's golden age ran from 1918 to 1930 when excursion boats, ferris wheels, penny arcades and dancing in the auditorium made the facility one of the city's best known attractions.

DURING WORLD WAR II, the pier was base for a series of Navy training schools that educated some 60,000 recruits from 1941-46.

In the 1950s, pier buildings functioned as the two-year campus of the Chicago undergraduate division of the University of Illinois.

Shipping activity at Navy Pier declined in recent years. Windows in the buildings were broken and the environment was generally inhospitable to visitors.

Shipping will go on at Navy Pier, principally along the west half of the south dock. There are also plans to relocate the Naval armory on the pier.

Butler calls Navy Pier "Chicago's answer to Boardwalk in Atlantic City." During the Bicentennial year he said he expects it to be the scene of numerous shows and special programs.

Cops check letters for bombs

by DAN BARREIRO

Two persons, concerned by the recent letter bomb scares, turned in suspicious packages to the Arlington Heights Police Dept. in the past two days, but neither contained explosives.

One package consisted of a wedding invitation and the other contained a commemorative Bicentennial penny ring.

Although both cases turned out to be false alarms, the current scare is causing problems for both law enforcement and post office officials.

"The problem is that it causes people to look at every piece of mail they get and wonder if there might be a bomb in it," said George Head, assistant postal inspector for much of Illinois, including the Chicago metropolitan area. "The important thing is that people should be able to determine whether or not they would be likely targets."

HEAD WOULD not elaborate on any special procedures that the post office is undertaking as a result of the scare, only saying, "This is really the FBI's investigation and we are cooperating fully with them in the matter, trying to identify any suspicious pieces of mail."

Other area police departments said no persons had contacted them or brought in suspicious pieces of mail.

But Elk Grove Post Office branch manager Charles Coyne said he had received a call from a worried secretary "It wasn't about a package or anything," he said. "But she was just worried about the possibility of her boss getting a package with a bomb in it. I can see where people would be concerned. There's a lot of big industry around here."

Coyne said he has received no directives from the postmaster relating to special procedures for uncovering possible letter bombs. "It would be very difficult to discover anything containing a bomb unless we had a pretty detailed description of the package," he said.

MOST OF THE letter bombs were postmarked from Atlanta, Ga. or Texarkana, Tex., said FBI Director Clarence J. Kelley.

The FBI reported that the bombs were enclosed in manila envelopes either 9 by 12 inches or 10 by 13 inches, and about three quarters of an inch thick.

In Washington Tuesday, Postal Inspector P. G. Coe said his department could not screen mail due to privacy restrictions. He added that, "If you're suspicious at all, don't open it, call us. We'll bring portable X-ray equipment to you."

Three letter bombs were intended for persons and companies in the Chicago area. One was sent to Beatrice Foods in Chicago and a second to the headquarters of McDonald's Systems Inc., Oak Brook.

A third letter bomb, intended for Dr. Leroy Pesch, former president of Michael Reese Medical Center and son-in-law of Chicago millionaire W. Clement Stone, was mistakenly delivered to Roger Pech, of Chicago.

Head tax to end home rule: official

by WANDALYN RICE

A Republican member of the Cook County Board Wednesday predicted a referendum to repeal the county's home-rule power will pass if the county adopts the proposed employee head tax.

Comr. Mary McDonald of Lincolnwood said she is willing to predict passage of the home-rule repeal referendum "as a result of the cavalier attitude of the city (of Chicago) commissioners stripping suburban Cook County of its leverage and if unfair taxes are levied with a result of driving businesses out of Cook County."

County Board Pres. George W. Dunne has proposed the $3-a-month employee head tax as a way to relieve the county's financial problems. A public hearing on the tax is scheduled Monday and is expected to draw opposition from businessmen who say it will drive business out of the county.

DUNNE IS EXPECTED to have the support of the 10 Democrats on the 16-member county board for the new tax.

Petitions to place home-rule repeal on the November election ballot have appeared in county liquor stores during the past week. Liquor dealers have been threatening to support the referendum since last year when the county board adopted a liquor tax.

To succeed, petitioners will need 143,000 signatures by Aug. 16. Once the issue is on the ballot a majority of those voting in both the city and suburbs is needed to repeal home-rule.

Mrs. McDonald said she would support a home-rule referendum if it is clear there is no other way for suburban Republicans on the county board to gain any leverage.

REPEALING HOME rule, she said, would mean no new taxes could be imposed without referendum and also would restore the county board rule requiring a two-thirds vote on the county budget, a rule which gives the six suburban commissioners a vote over county spending. The 10 Chicago Democrats removed the two-thirds rule, using home-rule power, last October.

Mrs. McDonald is uncertain whether she will support the present home-rule petition effort because she said she is not sure the drive is well organized.

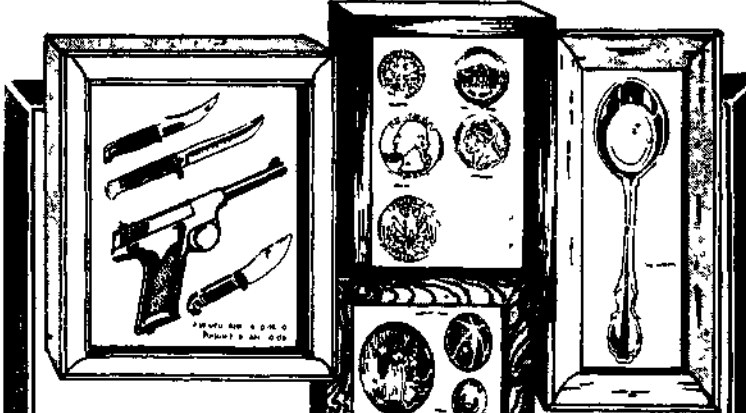

Two of Mrs. McDonald's fellow Republican commissioners said Wednesday they are skeptical of the present home-rule repeal effort because they are not sure backers of the referendum are well enough organized to pass the referendum over the sure opposition of the Chicago Democratic machine.

Comr. Carl Hansen of Mount Prospect said passing the home-rule-repeal referendum "is a massive political undertaking" and said "it is difficult to predict what would happen with a home-rule referendum."

Comr. Harold Tyrrell of LaGrange Park said he is afraid the present petition drive on home rule is premature and is not backed by sufficient planning to ensure victory.

Tyrrell said the worst thing that could happen would be to get home rule repeal on the ballot and then have it defeated by poor organization. "I'm afraid it's just going to be slaughtered and then the enthusiasm won't be there when it has a chance to win," he said.

The way we see it

Need reason on both sides

Responsible public officials and public employees usually do not encounter the problems faced by Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 last year and the Village of Wheeling this year.

Less than a year ago, teachers were on the picket lines, classes were disrupted and finally were shut down because the board and teachers simply didn't communicate. As a result, a contract agreement was reached only after a strike.

In Wheeling, public employees including policemen are picketing village board meetings to dramatize their contract problems and failure of the village board to recognize the police and employees unions. The problems continue in that village, and it remains to be seen what ultimately will be decided there.

It seems to us that there are two solutions to the problem in Wheeling.

The first solution would come from the Illinois General Assembly, which should address the problem of public employee negotiations and pass legislation creating ground rules for collective bargaining.

There currently is no provision for collective bargaining by public employees, and a well-conceived bill would define the rights of both employees and employers. With the legislation, there at least would be ground rules from which to negotiate, and a disruptive strike such as the one in Dist. 54 would seem less likely.

Such legislation has not been received favorably in the General Assembly, and we have no reason to believe a collective bargaining law will be forthcoming during this session. However, as strikes continue and the force of unions overtakes responsible public employers, the need for such a law becomes apparent. Simply look at Chicago where the teachers union is so powerful that the school board has lost any leverage in negotiations.

In the meantime, a solution is needed in Wheeling before the issues become so complex that neither side listens to the point of view of the other. When employers and employees discuss problems — many of them revolving around the mutual problem of finances — an equitable agreement normally can be reached. In Dist. 54 this year, reasonableness prevailed on both sides, and an agreement awaits ratification of the board.

It shouldn't take a strike in Wheeling for officials and employees there to realize that a solution ultimately will be reached and that the people of the community — the taxpayers — are the ones who must be satisfied that they are getting their money's worth.

With that in mind, we urge Wheeling officials to discuss the village's financial plight with the employees; to tell them that there will be no raises because the village cannot afford to give them. To take the matter a step further, the village's finance officials should document the situation fully, and the village board should at the very least listen to the employees, for there always are two sides to every disagreement.

We suspect good employees will understand that they will be rewarded, if not with a raise this year, then at a future date. The village realizes that competitive salaries are necessary in order to keep employees.

It seems to us that these adversarial relationships should never become so distorted that neither side acts reasonably. Those on the public payroll, officials and laborers alike, must realize that they work for a third party — the public — and that the public confidence will erode in the midst of continued union struggles when both sides appear to be using less than sound judgment.

It's flattering to have one's real talents recognized!

We socked 'em

And two public officials take us to task

The May 3 editorial which agreed with Trustee Bryan Coughlin of Palatine that it shouldn't take seven public employees and three trucks to tackle the project of planting a 2 1/2 inch tree didn't follow your aim: "To fear God, tell the truth and make money."

Put me down as one public official who will publicly agree not with paying but with production.

Let us explore the facts and seek out the truth on Coughlin's so-called example of governmental waste which you swallowed hook, line and sinker, obviously without checking.

Is it responsible for an elected official to criticize village employees without the facts? Is it responsible for a newspaper to do the same? Just because a public official says something doesn't mean the matter should be accepted at face value. It should be evaluated, researched, verified and then if evidence indicates — printed.

You should have called Coughlin and dug for some facts. Who saw the tree planting? Who called and complained? How does the village plant trees? One person who didn't have the facts called a trustee who didn't care about facts, who told a newspaper that didn't check the facts.

I QUOTE from a memo from our director of public works and engineering:

"The goal of management is to obtain maximum production with the minimum amount of personnel to safely complete an activity. The crew size however, will not always be the minimum number of people required to complete the job. It has been found that under some conditions more people can accomplish more work-up to a certain point. The concept of providing enough manpower to accomplish maximum production is called 'gang type maintenance.' Maximum production is measured in terms of units accomplished per man-hours expended. For example: two men may repair 20 square yards of pavement in one day (20 divided (2x8) equals 1.25 square yards/man-hr.). However, four men may repair 50 square yards of pavement in one day by performing repetitive functions (50 divided (4x8) equals 1.56 square yards/man-hr.)."

The incident mentioned in the newspaper recently regarding planting of parkway trees is disturbing to me because I have continually instructed the foreman to be aware of public criticism which may arise when public works employees are not actually working. I did check with the forestry foreman and our records indicate the following men were assigned to the planting program:

April 21
PERSONNEL — 2 Forestry, 1 Street, 2 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 13 trees.

April 22
PERSONNEL — 2 Forestry, 1 Street, 2 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 20 trees.

April 23
PERSONNEL — 2 Forestry, 1 Street, 2 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 17 trees.

April 28
PERSONNEL — 2 Forestry, 3 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 17 trees.

April 29
PERSONNEL — 2 Forestry, 1 Street, 3 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 14 trees.

April 30
PERSONNEL — 1 Forestry, 3 CETA.
ACCOMPLISHMENT — 9 trees.

Of the two forestry people working on tree planting, one was not available full-time for this activity. I had Lloyd Wright, foreman, making inspections of other subdivisions during these six days. The citizen who complained indicated there were seven men on the scene, which may have occurred when mechanics were repairing the auger or when one of two supervisory people were checking on the progress of the crew. In general, there should have been no more than five people assigned to this crew. One working foreman part-time, one forestry laborer, one street department operator on the auger, and two very unskilled CETA employees. It should also be noted that 100 trees had been delivered to our yard by Klehm Nursery and due to weather conditions, we had to plant the trees as soon as possible.

The village planted 90 trees at a cost of $1,008.88 to the village taxpayers. If Klehm Nursery had planted the 90 trees, they would have charged $25 per tree or $2,250. Klehm Nursery would charge individual homeowners $45 per tree or $4,050.

You said you suspect I would agree with your position. I do not agree. We have a very small public works staff (28) compared to similar size communities which average 46. I do not condone paternalism or payroll in village government. Successful corporations and successful governments do use the same principles. Palatine is a living example of that fact.

WHEN I SAID government is not business, I meant what I said. Government operates on the service motive and business operates on the profit motive. However, we both use sound management principles. Very few businesses run police departments, fire departments, water utilities or sewers. Those businesses that do run these departments cost more than village-run systems. Government does something right, doesn't it?

Being anti-government is fashionable today, especially for newspapers or those in the frustrated minority.

All governments are not bad just as all businesses are not good. Palatine has a good government.

Simplistic overgeneralization by newspapers or anti-government government officials should be watched very closely.

I challenge your newspaper to report any loading you observe anywhere in village government. Show us a loafer and we will show you an employee. Show us a payroller and we will show you an ex-payroller. Show us how to do something cheaper and better and we will do it.

I challenge The Palatine Herald to answer this editorial response. Do you have the guts to apologize? The public works men who planted 90 trees in six days deserve better.

What seeds do you sow?
What trees do you plant?
I ask you "whose proposal would be a manpower waste?" Coughlin's, Klehm's or the Village of Palatine's?

On that editorial your aim was way off. Evidently you feared God and made money. Next time tell the truth.

Wendell E. Jones
Village President Village of Palatine

(Editor's note: The Herald editorial was not aimed at whether Trustee Coughlin was right in his charge but whether Village Pres. Jones was right in his response. As we said in the editorial, we agree with Wendell Jones that public waste should not be condoned. Our comment focused on Jones' remark that public employees cannot be laid off as is done in business because "a village is not a business." We continue to believe that business and government should use the same sound management principles, that waste should be cut to the bone and that business and government must strive for maximum return on the investment of their resources.)

'Representatively ignorant'

A few comments about your representatively ignorant editorial, "Buffalo Grove uses the KISS theory."

Your principal objection to the one-paragraph ethics policy we adopted would appear to be its failure to proscribe "other conflicts that are not financial." In a flight of Paddockian rhetoric you ask the profound question, "What about other conflicts that are not financial?"

Fair enough. But what specific kinds of conflict that are "not financial" do you mean?

You also condemn our rejection of "an excellent three-page ethics ordinance." Just, however, as you did not attempt to spell out what you meant by non-financial conflicts of interest, similarly you made no effort to explain why you deemed that proposed ordinance as "excellent."

In actual fact, the ordinance in question was a hopelessly inept piece of draftsmanship. Among its many flaws, apart from its burdensome and unreasonable requirements of personal financial disclosure, it never even attempted to define its terms, including the fundamental concept of just what constitutes "doing business" with the village. To be charitable about the whole thing, as a document intended to have legal consequences, that ordinance is best described as a joke.

Paddock has taken the editorial position that residents who serve our village in such areas as our blood donor program, civil defense, flood control and environmental protection should have to make public their personal finances. By contrast, it is interesting to note the thrust of your own organization's recently touted ethics code. Its focus is principally upon Mickey Mouse items in the category of free cups of coffee for your reporters; the people who set your editorial policies are strangely immune. You maintain secrecy about the personal finances of your directors, officers and controlling stockholders, i.e., the people who set your editorial policies. Why?

The Paddock editors are a pack of hypocrites. Your organization is truly well-named; what, after all, is a paddock, if not a gathering place for horses' asses?

Thomas F. Mahoney
Buffalo Grove
Village Trustee

(Editor's note: Trustee Mahoney's knowledge of Paddock Publications editorial policy-making is as grievously lacking as is his understanding of a policy on ethics. All members of the Paddock editorial board, which develops, determines and writes all Paddock editorials, are covered by the firm's ethics policy. Personal finances of the firm's directors and officers are not public; but then Paddock Publications is a private business enterprise, not a municipal government spending tax monies. The Paddock ethics statement doesn't even mention cups of coffee and is not intended to cover trivia.)

Payments balance dips in 1st quarter

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. balance of payments slid from a sizeable surplus in the final quarter of last year to a near balance in the first three months of this year, the government said Wednesday.

But economists were quick to say the falloff in the U.S. current account from a fourth quarter surplus of $3.1 billion to a minimal deficit of $80 million in the January-March quarter this year was not necessarily bad economic news.

At the same time, the Commerce Dept. released two other economic reports. One indicated another significant increase in Americans' personal income in May, while the other showed only slight growth in housing starts and building permits during the same month.

New office for job firm

Glenn Sheets, owner of Sheets Employment Service, announced the July 1 opening date for an office in Schaumburg.

The agency office will be located at 120 W. Golf Rd. Sheets has been in the private employment agency business for 22 years. In addition to the Schaumburg and Arlington Heights locations, the company has offices in Des Plaines and Chicago.

Fitzsimmons reelected

Teamsters Pres. Frank Fitzsimmons was re-elected by acclamation during a raucous union convention Wednesday in Las Vegas. With the union under renewed scrutiny for alleged corruption, he warned of "difficult times ahead."

Fitzsimmons, 68, was unopposed for a second term and the carefully orchestrated election took only seven minutes. He was nominated by Sec. Treasurer Ray Schoessling and two vice presidents — one of them a convicted felon — supplied the seconds.

Energy unit gets extension

The U.S. Senate voted today to give the Federal Energy Administration 15 months more life and to exempt marginal and expensive oil production from federal price controls that the agency manages. The vote was 81 to 12 on the Senate bill. The House earlier passed an 18-month extension of the agency past its June 30 expiration date, but the House bill differs in several ways from the Senate version.

Pass tax bill quick: Long

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., urged the Senate Wednesday to quickly pass a major tax revision bill to prevent tax cuts from expiring at the end of the month. Long, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, is unlikely to get his request, made in remarks prepared for the opening of debate on the bill. Liberals, the Senate Budget Committee and numerous senators are waiting with dozens of amendments to revise the 1,536-page bill, to give away tax dollars to various special interests, or to take away advantages that some already enjoy.

Trade board tabs woman

The Board of Directors of the Chicago Board of Trade Wednesday announced it had elected Margaret A. Oesterle its first woman officer in the exchange's 127-year history. Ms. Oesterle, 34, a native of Muncie, Ind., was elected assistant secretary of the exchange effective immediately.

Oil rush in South Korea

Oil fever has reached epidemic proportions in South Korea and Taiwan and could result in a rash of "dramatic announcements" of oil finds in either or both countries before the year's end, a Chicago oil industry analyst said Wednesday. Herb Hugo, the editor of Platt's Oilgram, said he recently made a 16-day fact-finding tour to both countries.

Banks decline Soviet loan

The two largest American banks and several major European lenders unexpectedly have declined to participate in a $250 million loan to the Soviet Union, according to Western business sources. The sources said Tuesday the refusal to participate in the loan may mean the Kremlin will begin encountering difficulties in borrowing Western money at low rates to finance its widening trade deficit with the West.

Ex-con expert at 'The Sting'

Bank rip-off artist tells it like it is

by LEA TONKIN

ROBERT LEWIS

Robert Lewis is a charmer, a good conversationalist, a student of political science who plans to continue studies at Oxford. He also is a convicted forger.

He drew suburban retailers and bankers to the Palatine National Bank, 50 N. Broadway St. for a discussion Wednesday of proven bank-fraud schemes.

The conservatively-dressed Lewis bears no resemblance to the raunchy con man often portrayed in television and movies. A winning smile, charm and respectable manner are assets in the bank-defrauding business, the reformed forger said.

BEFORE LEWIS took to cashing forged checks in U.S. and foreign lending institutions, he had earned a doctorate degree in political science from the University of California at Berkeley. Lewis served six years as assistant director of research for the Center on Research for Political Institutions.

Then, he said greed overcame his other ambitions. Lewis bilked banks of sums ranging from a few thousand dollars to $500,000. Armed with phony credentials, references who were in cahoots, the help of occasional sidekicks and "useful information" gained at Berkeley, he traveled from city to city in search of gullible bankers.

Staying in one place too long was Lewis' downfall in the forgery business. He served two terms at Stateville prison near Joliet and in a federal penitentiary in Pennsylvania.

Now that he's lowered his sights for financial gain, Lewis is telling bankers and storekeepers that it pays to be careful when a newcomer asks to do business. His advice to bankers is that local references should be demanded and checked before cash is forked over to the newcomer.

"MOST BANK officers, I've found, are more accepting than tellers," Lewis said. Using fake identification such as passports, driver's licenses, forged securities and checks, a gypsy can convince a bank officer that he's a newly transferred executive in need of cash to conduct business.

There are sources of information which will back up a forger's story, for a price. Lewis estimates 40 to 60 per cent of his earnings during a 9½-year stint as a forger were eaten up in "operations costs."

Describing a variety of techniques which proved successful in defrauding banks, Lewis again emphasized the importance of checking local, known references.

Slayings halt rally; Dow up 2.70

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices managed a modest gain Wednesday in active trading on the New York Stock Exchange, but the slaying of the U.S. ambassador to Lebanon and his aide blunted a full-fledged rally by raising fears of a major Middle East war.

A 0.2 per cent spurt in May housing starts and a 0.8 per cent rise in personal income had triggered considerable buying, but the market lost its momentum when the White House announced Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr. and his aide were shot to death in Beirut.

The shooting intensified Wall Street's fears the civil war in Lebanon could erupt into a major Middle East war that would result in an inflation-breeding oil embargo such as that imposed in October 1973.

AGAINST THIS background, the Dow Jones industrial average managed to gain 2.70 points to 988.62. The blue-chip average, off a point at the outset, had rallied seven points higher before Meloy's death was announced.

The closely-watched blue-chip Dow average had fallen 5.32 points Tuesday, after climbing 33.15 points the three previous sessions in a rally that demonstrated investor confidence in Federal Reserve Board efforts to contain inflation while maintain enough stimulus to keep the economic recovery going.

On a broader scale, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index gained 0.55 to 102.01, and NYSE common stock index added 0.32 to 54.36 and the average price of an NYSE common share increased by 20 cents.

Advances topped declines, 882 to 532, among the 1,843 issues crossing the tape. The 429 unchanged issues reflected investor uncertainty.

VOLUME TOTALED 21,620,000 shares, up from the 18,440,000 traded Tuesday and the heaviest since 22,555,100 changed hands May 20.

Transamerica led the Big Board actives, up 5/8 to 10 7/8 on 446,360 shares, including a block of 203,000 shares at 10 5/8. Continental Oil followed, up 1 3/8 to 39 3/8 on 297,300 shares. Tenneco was third, up 1/4 to 30 on 284,300 shares.

Prices closed higher in moderate trading on the American Stock Exchange. The average price of an Amex share increased one cent. Volume totaled 2,080,000 shares, compared with 1,940,000 traded Tuesday.

Tobacco industry launches attack

Smoking ban proposed to clear air in train depots

by KURT BAER
An Illinois Commerce Commission proposal to ban smoking inside suburban train stations is part of a national trend to prohibit public smoking for the health and happiness of those who don't smoke.

Reported health hazards from "second-hand smoke" are prompting new ordinances and regulations aimed at segregating smokers from others.

The plan to ban smoking inside all the 191 suburban stations on five commuter railroad lines, including the Chicago and North Western Ry., is the result of a complaint from a nonsmoker, ICC representative Anne Dowling said Wednesday.

UNDER THE proposal, only the three downtown depots would be exempt from the ban. The ICC will have a public hearing on the plan at 10 a.m. July 14 in the State of Illinois Building, 160 N. LaSalle St., Chicago.

Ms. Dowling said all five railroads support the ban and have agreed an ICC order is the best way to institute the policy.

In response to such public smoking bans, the tobacco industry has launched a counterattack to convince local lawmakers and enforcement officials that the bans are unrealistic and unnecessary.

Police chiefs in the Northwest suburbs recently received a letter from the president of the Tobacco Institute in Washington that stated, "It doesn't make sense to enact laws which will divert law enforcement manpower from the task of apprehending the real criminals."

"I FIRMLY BELIEVE that measures of this type destroy the proper priorities in law enforcement and are not in the public interest," wrote Horace R. Kornegay, president of the Tobacco Institute.

Kornegay offered police printed materials and speakers for a "strictly noncommercial presentation intended to make the public aware that the passage of unenforceable laws can only weaken respect for the law and those who enforce it."

Further evidence of the tobacco industry's assault on smoking bans comes from the R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., one of the nation's largest cigarette makers.

Reynolds is preparing a brochure of editorial comments, scientific reports, views on various state restrictions on smoking and opinions from lawmakers and law enforcers in what amounts to a "smoker's rights campaign."

Reynolds board chairman William D. Hobbs said if left unchecked, anti-smoking "zealots" and "fanatics" could bring about "an almost total ban on smoking."

Until recent publicity over the second-hand smoke issue, most no-smoking designations were based on fire marshal regulations. Bans on smoking in elevators and movie theaters are examples.

THE NEW LAWS recognize cigarette smoking as a threat to the health of nonsmokers as well as smokers.

Health-related public smoking bans have not been discussed in the Northwest suburbs. But local ordinance proposals can be expected if this area follows the national trend.

North suburban Skokie a month ago enacted a ban on smoking at public meetings, in hospitals, nursing homes and medical waiting rooms, in elevators, retail stores and other public places. Violators face a fine of $10 to $100.

West suburban Downers Grove also has public smoking restrictions as does the City of Chicago.

The Chicago Lung Assn. and the Tobacco Institute disagree over the danger smoke-filled rooms pose to nonsmokers.

"THERE IS no proven health effect to the average healthy nonsmoker," said Anne Duffin of the Tobacco Institute. She cites a statement by former U.S. Surgeon Gen. Luther Terry that medical evidence is "inconclusive."

The Chicago Lung Assn. said that cigarette smoke affects the nonsmoker in much the same way as the smoker, causing a faster heart beat, higher blood pressure and increased carbon monoxide in the blood.

"Sidestream or second-hand smoke has been proven to be more hazardous to the person in the room with a smoker than the smoke inhaled by the smoker himself," said Dr. Bertram W. Carnow, medical director of Chicago Lung Assn.

"One of the major components of cigarette smoke is carbon monoxide. It can accumulate in a room in very high quantity. It is no mistake that airline pilots have become very concerned about this because carbon monoxide in the blood reduces discrimination functions, slows reaction time and interferes with depth perception," he said.

THE ICC'S proposed ban seems certain to produce outspoken statements on both sides. "I have a feeling, considering the amount of interest in the proposed general order, that there will be a very lively hearing July 14," Ms. Dowling said.

Questions on enforcing the proposal need to be answered.

"Generally speaking, (no smoking) signs would be posted and people would complain to the railroads about violations. There would have to be a lot of voluntary cooperation," Ms. Dowling said.

Problems of enforcing public smoking laws are another argument in the Tobacco Institute's opposition to no smoking laws.

"We feel that you cannot legislate courtesy or public behavior in this instance. What is really needed in cases where the nonsmoker feels himself annoyed is more common courtesy," Ms. Duffin said.

Mid-Suburban stars

Seven repeat in softball

by PAUL LOGAN

This year's second annual Mid-Suburban League all-conference girls' softball team is loaded with interesting features:

- Seven repeaters from last year's star-studded list.
- Five players representing Forest View, which finished second in the South Division.
- Four players leading MSL champion Hoffman Estates.
- Two freshmen among the 21 athletes honored by the head coaches.
- And the first sister act ever to be singled out.

Clare Dowling, a senior catcher, landed her second straight berth on the team. This Hoffman Estates standout led the South Division with a .556 average. She had 13 runs batted in, three doubles, a triple and a homer.

Three other Hoffman stars who made the team were senior Carol Willuweit, junior Lorrie Kountz and sophomore Tracey Farrish. Willuweit was brilliant at the plate — .538 average — and on the mound — 7-0 in conference play.

Kountz, one of five first basemen selected, hit .400, knocked in 15 runs, stole 11 bases and didn't commit an error. Farrish, a center fielder, excelled on defense. She also scored 13 runs and batted .273.

Nancy Lachus, who recorded the area's first two no-hitters ever in softball, paced the Falcon contingent. Lachus, a repeat all-star, had a 7-0 conference record. She only allowed 12 earned runs for a 1.70 ERA, averaging four strikeouts and less than three hits per contest.

Lachus, a junior, also excelled with a bat, driving in 14 runs with two doubles and three homers, scoring 21 runs, walking 13 times and carrying a .385 average.

Sue Artemenko, a senior first baseman, led Forest View in hitting with a .519 average. She also had 17 RBIs, two doubles, a triple and a homer.

Seniors Kim Smid and Cindy Andrist and freshman Linda Butzen also represented the Falcons' team. Smid, a repeat all-star, hit .432 with 20 runs scored, 17 RBIs, 4 doubles, 2 triples and 2 homers. She played third base.

Andrist, a left fielder, hit .371 with 13 RBIs and 16 runs scored. Butzen, the right fielder hit .419 with 13 RBIs and 16 runs scored.

Prospect was paced by two girls — Low Ann Sandstrom and Jeannine Hahn. Sandstrom, who also made the team last year, averaged .341. She had 3 doubles, 2 triples and 11 stolen bases. The junior first baseman made just one error all season. Hahn, a sophomore center fielder, hit .435 with 11 RBIs, 18 runs scored, 2 doubles and 2 triples.

Pam Klein was Rolling Meadows' star third baseman. The junior led the South players with 19 RBIs while batting .466.

The North Division champion Fremd Vikings were led by senior third baseman Heidi Giesler. She topped the division in RBIs with 19 and was among the leaders in hits (15), batting average (.535), doubles (3), and runs scored (14).

Hershey, which finished second to Fremd in the North, was paced by two repeat all-stars — senior Cathy Weadley and junior Kim Cashmore — along with Terry Clifton.

Weadley led both divisions with a .633 average. She topped the North hitters in hits (19) and triples (4). She also was among the leaders in RBIs (18), runs scored (13), doubles (3) and also had a homer. Weadley was also a talented pitcher, recording a 6-2 record.

Cashmore averaged .548 with 17 hits right-handed hitter struck out his first time up, then tripled his next time up. He went down twice more, both times on sharply hit balls.

Cuellar had knocked down 13 Sox in a row before Jim Spencer and Bill Stein each singled after two out in the ninth. Cuellar was touched for 10 hits, eight of which came in the first five innings.

The Sox fortunes don't look any brighter and as the Orioles leave town to make way for the Eastern-Division leading New York Yankees, who are in town for night games tonight, Friday and Saturday and a single game Sunday. Jim "Catfish" Hunter will pitch the series opener for New York and Terry Forster will go for the Sox.

Cubs break Cincinnati hex with abbreviated 5-3 win

From Herald Wire Services
CINCINNATI — Ending what was nearly a two-year victory drought, Manny Trillo and Steve Swisher each drove home two runs during a five-run first inning and the Cubs went on to beat the Cincinnati Reds, 5-3, Wednesday in a game called because of rain in the bottom of the seventh.

Bill Bonham picked up the victory, his sixth against three losses. He was tagged for seven hits, including Joe Morgan's 12th homer with no one on in the first inning.

Rookie Pat Zachry was the victim of the Cubs' five-run spurge in the first inning and suffered his second loss against five victories.

Trillo's bases-loaded single and a two-run double by Swisher were the big hits in the inning. Before the game was called there were three rain delays totaling two hours and 47 minutes.

The game finally was called after Cesar Geronimo led off the Cincinnati seventh with a single.

Free halter tops attract fans

The Cleveland Indians have a promotion night that isn't for 13-and-under fans.

Instead of the usual helmet, bat or jacket giveaways, last year the Indians' promotional director dared to be different with "Halter Top Night."

Although this sounds like a male chauvinist idea, it was masterminded by a female — Jackie York.

"We wanted to appeal to the women and weren't sure how to do it," said York. "Finally, we settled on the halter top."

The big challenge was to design a one-size-fits-all halter. York succeeded.

Over 33,000 fans — more than half of them women — turned out on this special night. Some came for the freebies, some came for the view and a few came just for the game.

"We'd give the ladies their halters at the door and then they'd run into the johns and put them on," said York.

"As a yoke, I was going to have the announcer have the women stand up in the seventh inning and then he'd say, 'Okay, ladies, show your halters.' But I was afraid a few of the ladies might take them off and start waving them."

The crowd would have become a little rowdy if the seventh-inning stretch turned into a strip. Kind of like some of the fans got in 1974 when Cleveland had its infamous 10-cent beer promotion.

You might recall the riot that took place. Fans ran wild in the stands as well as on the field. Too much cheap beer got into the hands of people who couldn't handle it on that muggy summer night.

Now Cleveland sells two 15-cent tokens at the gate on "Beer Night." After enjoying a couple of 15-cent brews, a fan has to buy the rest at the full price.

Bill Veeck — called by some the "patron saint of promoters" — won't be using booze gimmicks to pack Comiskey Park. The only giveaway the White Sox have promoted is this Sunday's bat day. (The 25,000 bats were supposed to have been given away to youngsters on May 2, but the game was called by snow.)

"I don't like to advertise anything in advance," said Veeck. "I think the publicity after the fact will have more impact. We reserve the right to do nothing or something. All we're trying to do is add to the enjoyment of the people who come to the park."

"We had the smallest crowd in major league baseball this year (1,100 on April 23). It was even smaller than some of those crowds we had in St. Louis for the Browns."

"Anyway, I decided that day to give away a car. Those were the real baseball fans 'out there so I made the chances one-in-1,000 instead of one-in-30,000."

Some major league teams, such as the St. Louis Cardinals, have had to revamp their promotions programs.

"We had to knock off the bat days because they (manufacturers) starting charging more for the bats than the lowest priced ticket and that's no way to get ahead," said Ken Daust, the Cards' promotion director.

Last Sept. 14 the Cards played host to the Mets in a game that would normally draw 12,000 to 15,000. Since it was jacket day, over 50,000 turned out. The cost was shared by three sponsors.

For the first time in six years, the Cubs held a big promotion day earlier this season. Although it rained the night before and all morning, 12,000 fans showed up. The game was called by rain, but half the jackets were given away to youngsters.

Part of the reason for the giveaway is to make money. Since the Cubs' game was rained out, the jacket day was a money loser.

The Cubs will be giving away the remaining jackets (over 7,000) on July 8. McDonald's is a co-sponsor.

Sometimes promotion nights backfire.

"We gave away a real inferior ball and there was an argument around first base," recalled Daust. "This was a couple of years ago. There must have been six dozen baseballs thrown on the field."

The White Sox had a similar problem a couple of years ago. Quite a few fans decided to sail their seat cushions onto the field. It disrupted the game and also brought some bad publicity.

Last year the Sox avoided that problem by putting numbers on the cushions. At the end of each inning, a cash prize was given to a lucky fan. And at the end of the game, an even larger money prize was awarded.

Can you imagine what might have happened if Cleveland had given away inferior halters and a bad call angered the Indians' female fans?

It would have been un-bare-able.

Orioles hand White Sox 6th consecutive defeat

by BOB GALLAS

The Baltimore Orioles, powered by home runs from Doug DeCinces and Lee May, walked all over the White Sox Wednesday night in a 10-2 win at Comiskey Park that extended the South Siders' losing streak to six games.

Mike Mueller, who went into the game with a 2-7 record and a hefty 6.76 ERA, pitched the distance for the Orioles, who swept the short two-game series.

Sox pitching gave up a total of nine walks, five of which turned into Baltimore runs.

"The Orioles got all the offense they needed in the fourth when they scored four runs, three of which came on DeCinces' home run with two on."

The rally chased starter Francisco Barrios and brought on Jesse Jefferson, who didn't have much better luck.

The Orioles scored six runs off Jefferson who worked the final 5-2/3 innings, walking five while striking out three. Jefferson had given up only a run going into the ninth, when Baltimore batted around and scored five runs, three of which came on May's home run, his second in two days against the Sox.

The Sox touched Cuellar for single runs in the first and fourth. Jorge Orta hit a solo home run in the first. In the fourth, Kevin Bell, just up from Iowa, got his first major league hit, a triple, then scored on a single by Chet Lemon.

Bell, a third baseman who was hitting .285 at Iowa, looked good both in the field and at bat. The 20-year-old

Deep South hosts Open Nicklaus 'playing well'

DULUTH, Ga. (UPI) — In the end, it all keeps coming back to one name.

Hubert Green may be the leading money winner, Hale Irwin the hottest, Tom Weiskopf confident and others merely hopeful, but still the inescapable name on everybody's mind at the U.S. Open is the same one it always is.

"If you were going to bet," said Weiskopf, who doesn't, "Who are you gonna bet on?"

"He's always there," added Tom Watson. "How can you go against a guy who's won 14 major (professional) championships, hasn't missed a cut in four years (almost six years, actually), and always finishes in the top 10?"

The guy they're all talking about, of course, is Jack Nicklaus.

"I'm playing well," said Nicklaus, who until now has not had, by his standards, a particularly outstanding year with "only" one victory in seven starts. "But I'm in a good frame of mind, and now I've got my tournament (his new Memorial Tournament at Dublin, Ohio) behind me."

Frame of mind — the mental part of the game — is always so important in the U.S. Open which begins today. The course is set to exacting standards with its narrow fairways, tangled rough that has the consistency of steel wool, and slick, hard, fast greens, and nobody can survive without some bogeys and an occasional double bogey. But few people have the ability Nicklaus has to forget misfortune and get back to work.

In fact, a lot of people think the mental side of the game is all that separates Nicklaus from Weiskopf, his former Ohio State teammate who many consider a superior shotmaker.

"Weiskopf hits the ball as good as anybody," one pro said. "Why doesn't he win more? There's got to be more to it than just hitting the ball. When I watch Nicklaus playing I just like to think of what's going through his mind."

The site of this Open, the first time the national championship ever has been played in the deep South, is Atlanta Athletic Club, Bobby Jones' old club but not his golf course. The 7,015-yard, par-70 layout was built nine years ago along the Chattahoochee River, and it's one of the few times the U.S. Open has been played on a relatively untested golf course.

Some controversy had been expected about a few of the holes, such as the notable 460-yard finishing hole which features water to the left of the fairway and in front of the green, and could provide the setting to a spectacular finish. But the only hole that seems to have sparked much discussion is the 11th, at 480 yards the longest par-4 in U.S. Open history.

"That will be a par-5 for most people," Watson said.

It requires a drive of approximately 290 yards to reach a small, flat landing area for the second shot downhill to the green. Anything less than that will leave players facing a long iron or fairway wood from a downhill lie.

Kuhn restrains Finley's trades

NEW YORK — Baseball Commissioner Bowie Kuhn Wednesday night restrained Oakland A's superstars Vida Blue, Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers from joining the active rosters of their new clubs in lieu of a hearing Thursday on the stunning $3 million dispersal sale held by owner Charles O. Finley.

Kuhn called a 1:20 p.m. Thursday meeting among Players Association chief Marvin Miller, Finley, plus representatives of the New York Yankees, who acquired Blue for $1 million and the Boston Red Sox, who obtained Fingers and Rudi for $2 million, to review the controversial deals.

"The Blue, Fingers and Rudi assignments by the Oakland club raise questions which I feel require a hearing," Kuhn said in a letter to the 24 major league clubs. "As such, the three players involved will remain on the active list of the Oakland club, but may not appear in uniform or participate in Oakland games."

Will $$$ save All-Star walkout?

NEW YORK — The 24 major league baseball clubs told the Players' Association Wednesday that $890,000 will be deposited in the players' benefit plan provided that the players or their association do not prevent the All-Star game from being played. It has been reported that labor disputes between the players and club owners might prompt a player walk-out of the July 13 classic.

Should a walk-out occur, the owners say they will not deposit the money. The owners proposed in April to deposit $7.7 million, in each of the next four years, to the players' benefit plan. However, in the absence of a binding agreement between the parties, the owners say they will only deposit the $890,000 provided that the All-Star game is played.

Owner representative John Gaherin, in a letter to player representative Marvin Miller, said this is the "same deposit and conditions which prevailed" between the players and club owners last year.

NBA-ABA negotiation on upswing

HYANNIS, Mass. — The attorney for the ABA Players Association was called into merger talks Wednesday between the National and American Basketball Associations as discussions took a positive turn.

Prentiss Yancey, who had threatened on Tuesday to file suit if all six ABA teams were not included in a merger, flew to this resort community late Wednesday to talk about the NBA's plan to allow just four ABA teams into the league. Under instruction of the ABA Players Association, Yancey has insisted the teams in Utah and Kentucky be included in the merger. His flexibility during talks with the NBA advisory committee could determine whether a merger takes place.

"The result was that we feel some progress has been made in the negotiations," said NBA Deputy Commissioner Simon Gourdine. "But there still are some difficult issues. We want to see if we can sit down and explore (all possibilities) in an atmosphere most conducive to resolution."

"That's why we want to invite the general counsel of the ABA Players' Association to the discussions."

Brenner leads Chicago classic

Barb Brenner, Willoughby, Ohio, had a five-pin lead going into the final round of match play Wednesday in the Professional Women's Bowlers Association Greater Chicago Classic.

She won three of six matches and tied one to move into the lead in front of Donna Adamek, 19, of Los Angeles, who is in her third professional tournament.

Adamek finished 3-3.

There are 18 women left in the tournament.

Kelly paces Sting over Dallas

The Chicago Sting upped its North American Soccer League to 7-5 Wednesday night by trimming the Dallas Tornado, 1-0 on a goal by Jimmy Kelly 57 minutes into the game. John Webb assisted on the winner.

The Sting increased its second-place point total to 59 points, three behind the division-leading Toronto Metros. In other games, St. Louis beat Rochester, 3-1, and Boston defeated New York in a 3-2 tiebreaker that was protested.

Arlington tips Lions in overtime

by DON FRISKE

With two outs in the bottom of the eighth inning, Tom Barnard smashed a long single to right field which ended a close battle between Arlington Heights and Logan Square Wednesday night.

Barnard's hit drove in Guy Tenuta with the winning run as Arlington edged the Lions, 2-1, in the first encounter of the summer for the two American Legion teams.

Lion starter Jim Simmerman retired the first two Arlington batters easily in the eighth, but then ran into trouble.

Tenuta reached on a single to center and then Mike Mayerck was helped to first on an error by the Lion shortstop, setting up Barnard's hit.

In the sixth, with the score at 1-1, Barnard collected a triple down the left field line with two outs, but failed to score. The Lions were aided in that inning by two quick throws to second from catcher Kevin O'Brien which nailed would-be Arlington base stealers.

Mike Dooley, the first batter of the game, scored the only run for the Lions after leading off with a single. Following a groundout, Pat Rooney singled.

A passed ball advanced the runners and then Dooley scored when the Arlington catcher threw the ball past the third baseman.

Arlington picked up their first run in the fifth as Brett Frase led off with a double, moved to second on a groundout, and scored on a sacrifice fly by John Igrasek.

Igrasek was the winning pitcher as he held the Lions scoreless after their unearned run in the first. He gave up nine hits, striking out five while walking only one.

Simmerman allowed only six hits and four walks. He struck out six Arlington batters.

The Lions had a chance to win the game in the top of the eighth when O'Brien hit a bloop double into short right field with one out. But the next two batters popped out to end the inning.

In the sixth, they loaded the bases with one out, but a force at the plate and a flyout ended that threat.

Walks hurt Lions in 12-6 defeat

Logan Square lost to the Oldtimers 12-6 Tuesday night as they were plagued by giving up too many walks.

The Oldtimers used two big innings to defeat the Lions. In the second they scored six runs on four walks and three hits. They added five in the fifth when the Lions allowed four walks again.

The Lions did their scoring with two runs in the first and four in the fifth, just before the game ended because of darkness.

They played three games during the past weekend, winning two. Their record after Tuesday's game was 4-3.

Bell's 'Take and Save' plan snips job, union says

by LEA TONKIN

To snip or not to snip?

That decision faces families who plan to move and who are served by Illinois Bell Telephone Co. They can claim a $5 credit for taking their telephone to their new home in Illinois under the utility's Take and Save program.

But at least one group — the union — views the cost-cutting program as a job-cutback plan.

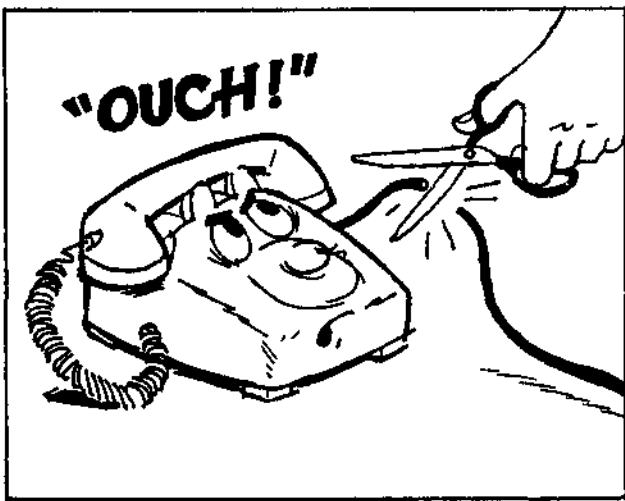

"The problem has been that people snip telephones, then they don't turn them in," said Donald Servatius, president and business manager of Local 105, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers (IBEW) in Chicago. Servatius is chairman of the IBEW System Council T-4 representing some 15,000 telephone industry workers throughout Illinois.

SERVATIUS concedes that a primary reason for the IBEW objections to Take and Save is that it eliminates service work otherwise done by union members. "We're trying to provide work for our members, not let everyone else do our work," he said.

The company has been concerned about the loss of phones, Servatius contends. "I don't think it saved them a nickel," he said. "The public just isn't interested in snipping their phones." Of those who snip, there are many who also keep, said Servatius. "Frankly I'd rather see a workman do the job."

The Take and Save program is one of several problems confronting communications industry labor, Servatius believes. The recent 1973-1975 recession blunted telephone sales and the prospects for new jobs.

TAKE AND SAVE is a popular and effective cost-cutting program, said Howard Hammer of the Illinois Bell Arlington Heights staff. "Four out of five of our customers who move use this service," Hammer said. "It's successful, but we'd like to see more people include this in their move."

The idea behind Take and Save is to eliminate service calls for phone removal. Hammer contends it is more convenient for customers who don't want to wait around for phone service employees on moving day. Take and Save is used throughout most of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. (AT&T) system.

HAMMER ADMITS Illinois Bell does lose phones through the Take and Save program. No exact figures are available on the number of customers who pack up their telephones and neglect to return them to the utility. "But most people don't keep their sets," Hammer said. No estimate of the cost savings to Illinois Bell as a result of the Snip and Take program is available, Hammer added.

"We're encouraged by it, although it's pretty hard for us to tell how much we're saving by it," said AT&T public relations representative Dave Sullivan in New York. The program will be continued in the Bell system, he said.

Telephone removals and installations reported by Illinois Bell during 1975 reached a record 3.25 million sets. For each set the company added, utility employees installed or removed another 12 telephones.

Landowners may slate property to save wildlife

by LEA TONKIN
Area landowners can participate in the Acres for Wildlife program sponsored by the Illinois Dept. of Conservation, said Tom Kwak, district wildlife manager for the department.

The program is designed to protect wildlife habitat on private lands. The land must be at least one acre. The only restriction is that the land must be left undisturbed for at least one year.

When a landowner becomes a participant in the Acres for Wildlife program, the department furnishes a sign to mark the tract. Application forms are available from the Lake County Soil and Water Conservation District, 560 B. Main St., P.O. Box 555, Lake Zurich, Ill. 60047.

CITIZENS AND public interest groups from Cook County communities near Salt Creek are invited to participate in an advisory committee that will aim to end pollution in Salt Creek and nearby waterways. The first meeting of the Salt Creek Advisory Committee for Cook County will be 8 p.m. June 22 at the Hoffman Estates Village Hall, 1200 Gannon Dr.

Several advisory committees are working with the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission to develop a plan for water pollution control in the Chicago metropolitan area. The June 22 session will be hosted by Hoffman Estates Mayor Virginia Hayter and Thomas Hamilton, chairman of the U.S. Soil Conservation Service advisory committee on Salt Creek.

THE EFFECTS OF motor-vehicle pollution in Illinois should be studied exclusively, said Richard Briceand, Illinois Environmental Protection Agency director. Briceand said he asked the state pollution control board to schedule public hearings on the pollution problem. "The fact that we have had to issue ozone yellow alerts so early in the season in Chicago and Metro East areas underscores the urgency of getting additional information about the contribution of vehicular emissions to this and similar problems," he said.

hearings will include discussion of national energy policy.

INTERMITTENT control systems for sulfur dioxide emissions will be discussed at a June 22 hearing planned by the Illinois Pollution Control Board. The 10 a.m. meeting will be at Chicago Circle Campus, 750 S. Halsted St., Room 605, Chicago.

THE TRUE FIBER OF THE FLAG

Through the subtle and pledge take place countless times in countless classrooms no single American school child can be forced to do either.

For years, state legislatures and educators tried to make these acts compulsory, and even passed laws and instituted rules to that effect. For a time these actions were upheld by the United States Supreme Court.

But then on June 13, 1955, the Supreme Court, in a 6 to 3 vote, reversed its earlier decision.

Among the many statements written by the Court in handing down its decision was this by Justice Jackson: "If there is any fixed star in our constitutional constellation it is that no official, high or petty, can prescribe what shall be uttered in public places, national or otherwise, or other matters of opinion or force citizens to confess by word or act their faith therein."

In short, those liberties for which the early colonists fought were the real substance of the flag. Compulsory recitation was a denial of the Pledge itself. It seems most fitting that this ruling came when the country itself was at war with tyranny abroad. While other banners were being used to bend people's will to the wishes of a few, the Stars and Stripes was reaffirmed as the symbol of individual liberty.

High cost of lumber stirs builder to try luck at steel-frame homes

by LYNN ASINOF

The clanking coming from the construction site at 81 E. Stone Ave., Lake Forest, is announcing the end of the wood-frame house. The steel age has arrived.

Just ask the people at U.S. Gypsum, who made the steel joists and studs for the house. They are building five plants across the country to produce material for steel-frame construction.

"With steel there is no shrinkage. You can't have termites with steel, and it's non-combustible," said Martin Z. Karson of U.S. Gypsum.

IN ADDITION, Karson said the steel is lighter, easier to handle, quicker to assemble and stronger.

There's nothing new about steel-frame construction, but in the past it has been too expensive to use in residential construction. The building industry has been toying with the idea of steel-frame-home construction for several years, but until recently the relatively low cost of lumber kept the idea on the drawing boards.

Jack Edwards of U.S. Gypsum said the company started working with steel on a trial basis in 1973 when lumber prices skyrocketed. The construction slump in 1974-75, however, brought a drop in lumber prices.

"The reason we are coming back to it is lumber prices are going up," Edwards said.

COMPANY OFFICIALS are predicting as much as a 60 per cent increase in lumber prices because of new housing starts, tighter government controls in cutting lumber and a new export market in Japan.

Right now there is about a $130 savings using steel-floor joists instead of high-quality wood, according to Don J. Emelity, technical consultant for the firm. He said the savings include the fact that one-third less material is needed to build a steel frame and that fewer hours are needed to put the frame together.

The savings on steel studs, which support the sides of the house, are not as well documented since their use is much newer.

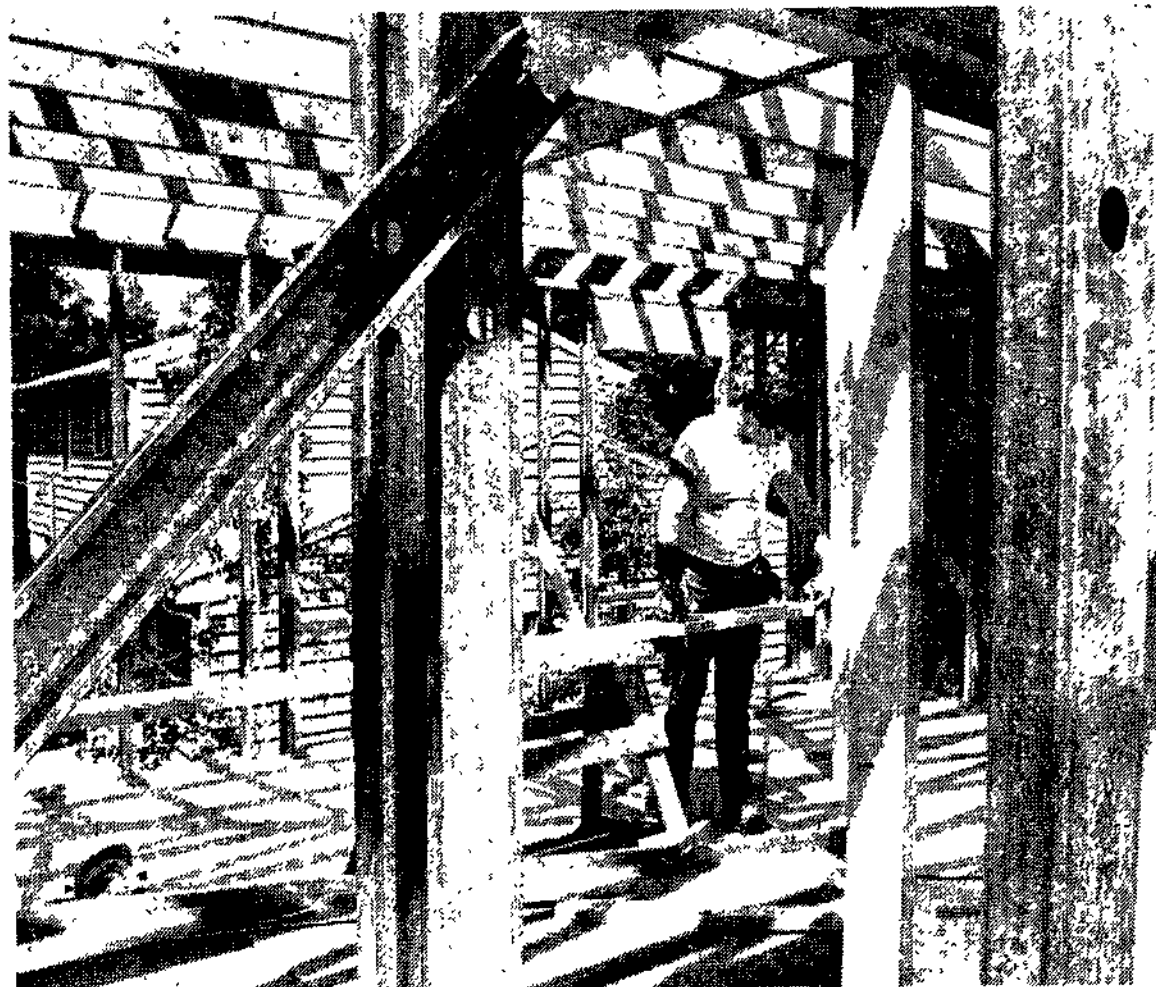

The Lake Forest house is only the fourth in the country to be built with the U.S. Gypsum steel framing. The first was built in Omaha, Neb., and the next in South Holland.

EDWARDS SAID the houses are designed by taking a wood house and adapting it to steel. He said most of the houses have parts of the frame made of wood, noting that the two materials can be used in almost any combination.

"They can still build wood trusses cheaper," Karson said, explaining why the Lake Forest house has a wooden roof support.

The Lake Forest house started with the efforts of builder Werner and Wilke Inc.

"With the increasing lumber prices we felt that this would be a system worth looking into," said Jerry Wilke. Noting that the steel is glued and screwed together, he said the result would be "a straighter and truer house."

THE UNIONS look favorably on the use of steel in house frames because carpenters will not be displaced. The biggest difference between the two materials is that less steel is needed to support the buildings. The steel is also lighter and quicker to assemble.

Wilke said the steel market also is more stable than the lumber market. He said lumber prices are guaranteed for as little as 30 days, while steel prices are guaranteed for a year in many cases.

THE BUILDER WENT to M. Ecker Co., an area wall and ceiling contractor, which in turn contacted U.S. Gypsum for materials.

Lake Forest officials gave the house special attention, calling a meeting of the village codes commission before approving a permit for the house.

"The house will be studied as it progresses," said Byron Prais, chief building inspector, noting that the concept is completely new in the area.

The unions have not opposed the steel-frame construction because carpenters have not been displaced. They work with steel much as they would with wood.

WILKE ADMITTED that the first few houses will probably be more expensive since the carpenters are unused to working with steel. He said construction time will decrease once they are comfortable with the metal work.

Educating the public is also going to take work. Wilke said that the people who purchased the Lake Forest house are in the construction field and thoroughly studied the pros and cons of steel-frame construction.

"The people who bought it are builders and they are well educated in building systems," he said.

Wilke said he is not sure if he will be building more steel-frame houses.

"When the house is done we can answer that question," he said.

Prais, however, said he had few doubts more will be built. "It's the coming thing," he said.

Edwards said he, too, is confident that steel-frame-home construction will become accepted.

"Hopefully, the price will be competitive, but you will get a better product as well," he said.

With five plants in the works, U.S. Gypsum seems pretty sure, too.

STEEL HOLDS UP the house at 81 E. Stone Ave., Lake Forest, but wood is also used in areas where it is easier and cheaper.

Thanks to earning power

Single woman now can compete in loan market

The earning power of today's single woman places her on a par with her male counterpart as an acceptable candidate for a home mortgage loan, according to a study released by the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

The study, "Women in the Mortgage Market," also shows that a working wife's contribution to family income is much higher than mortgage bankers estimate, based upon underwriting guidelines used to discount the wife's earnings.

The study was begun in 1974 by Ketron, Inc. of Philadelphia, working under a HUD contract. Research on the labor market experience of a national sampling of 5,000 women, age 30-44 showed:

- The income growth and stability for single women was on an even par with the industry standard — or the traditional male-headed one-earner family.

- Projected 1970 income for two-earner families in which the wife makes a 30 per cent contribution to family income was 25 to 125 per cent above mortgage bankers' estimates, depending upon the underwriting guidelines used to discount the wife's earnings.

- Income growth patterns for women family heads fell within 8 or 9 percentage points of their male counterparts.

Findings of the study support both the Equal Credit Opportunity Act of 1975 and those provisions of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 which extend fair housing lending practices to women borrowers.

HUD Assistant Sec. Charles J. Orlebeke, whose office funded the study, said that two sex discrimination suits were filed this spring by the U.S. Department of Justice, contesting mortgage industry standards in assessing women's income.

In one suit, a New Jersey mortgage banker is alleged to have required letters of "intention to work" from married women applicants. In the other, a Utah Savings and Loan Association has been charged with discounting a wife's earnings and failing to count alimony and child support income in mortgage credit analysis.

In carrying out the study, Ketron representatives talked with nine federal, quasi-federal and industry associations to determine the best format for the actuarial tables which are the heart of the work.

These tables on women's projected income during the crucial early years of a mortgage show that, even in the late 1960s, women accumulated substantially more earnings and other income over an extended period than today's mortgage banker would expect. The study documents a rapidly changing work and income growth profile for American women.

"Women in the Mortgage Market" contains both narrative and statistical discussions of the actuarial tables which project income growth and income stability for various loan applicant categories. It will be distributed widely to mortgage lending institutions, insuring agencies, and banking associations in an effort to promote loan decisions based on the "merits of each case" rather than outmoded generalizations about women as a class.

Construction, labor costs rise 7.9%

The cost of construction materials and labor across the nation increased an average of 7.9 per cent during a 12-month period, slightly below the 8.2 per cent gain registered a year earlier, reports the Dodge Building Cost Services Department of McGraw-Hill

Information Systems Company. Accounting for the increase was a 7.3 per cent boost in wages for building trades craftsmen and an 8.2 per cent rise in the price of building materials.

The cost information released by the Dodge unit, covering a twelve-month period ended March 31, is based on a semi-annual survey of building trades unions, contractors and material suppliers in 183 cities in the continental United States.

In the six months since the completion of the last survey in September 1975, cost hikes have lessened; it was reported. Construction costs went up 2.5 per cent, against 5.2 per cent in the earlier six-month period.

During the latest twelve-month period covered by the survey, the Western region accounted for the largest cost hikes. Leading the nation was the Pacific Coast and Rocky Mountain States. Costs there were up an average of 11.1 per cent, followed by an 8.9 per cent increase for the Mississippi River and West Central States. The New England States posted the smallest year-to-year increase, 5.3 per cent.

There's never been a better time to develop the habit of investing in yourself.

Everyone is a creature of habit — bad habits and good ones. At First Federal Savings we've observed the habit of saving in our customer friends for 42 years. It's very satisfying to watch the habit working for those who invest in themselves. Regular savings of even small amounts soon prove that it is all worthwhile. And the habit of saving has never worked better than now. The figures here show you why.

How to plan for your financial future

Persistent among questions from the mail bag is, "Where can I turn for completely honest, unbiased information on financial planning?" Unfortunately, no reasonably priced information source meeting these criteria is available. Registering for courses in financial planning and investments at a high school, university or college or studying on one's own, one affords one approach. There is really no adequate substitute for personal knowledge.

A new book, "Wealth: How To Achieve It!" by two Seattle public accountants, Thomas Porter and Durwood Alkire (Reston, 1976) covers the full course beautifully — and in language you can understand. "Wealth," despite its title, is not a "get-rich-

Managing your family's money

by MERLE E. DOWD

quick" book. You can use it as a do-it-yourself guide for planning your own financial future.

Developing your own money plan — and I'm using that term here for more than figuring how to stretch yesterday's paycheck through next week's grocery shopping — involves three steps:

Determine where you are. You can't move from square one to square two or 20 until you define square one — your current financial position.

Square one involves two halves. One half defines your personal net worth, the difference between assets and liabilities.

The second half is a weekly or monthly record of current spending. "Wealth" provides worksheets plus an example of one family's records for use as a guide.

Discover your personal goals. Personal goals may be short-term or long-term, but unless you define them in terms of money and effort necessary to achieve them, time will continue to pass and few will be accomplished. Establishing personal goals does two things: 1.) Simply by examining and writing down various goals, your thinking crystallizes. You sort out important goals from the frivolous goals 2.) Once your goals are firmly in mind, you will be motivated to achieve them.

Develop a plan to achieve your goals. Far too many individuals and families embark on an ill-conceived or aimless investment, insurance or estate plan without considering steps one and two. A few stocks here, an interest in a real estate limited partnership there, more insurance, or regular rollovers of T-bills may accumulate assets, but such actions fall short of an overall plan. When needs are balanced against means, you start a program with the comfortable feeling that contingencies can be controlled.

A useful innovation in "Wealth" is a variety of case histories of actual families and individuals — with names changed. Identifying with an individual or a family with income, responsibilities and problems like yours can help you develop your own plan with greater confidence.

I didn't say copy the plan! A financial plan should fit you precisely. Since we are all different, each of our plans will be different. Among the case histories are Linda, the young owner of a fashion-conscious apparel shop, the young executive busily climbing the corporate ladder, the anxious aerospace engineer, a physician with a propensity for spending even more cash than his practice delivers, an energetic divorcee with her own income and three children, the "well-off" widow and the retired executive. In all 15 cases the involved person is guided through each of the three planning steps.

Two limitations should be noted.

The authors acknowledge that the book is not for everyone. They set a lower limit of $25,000 annual income to assure the availability of discretionary income — money over and above daily necessities. Others with less income can use the principles and many worksheets liberally sprinkled through the long book, but income should be sizable enough to offer some flexibility.

The price of the book at $15.95 erects a small hurdle. As one passerby told me at a book fair once, "Your book is just what I need to help me manage my money — but I can't afford it!" Not planning your present and future financially could cost far more than the price of a single volume.

Want to get more heat?

Most summer cabins have some form of heat, but if you want to stretch your trips on into winter, you want enough heat for real comfort.

If you have a water boiler installed, you may have more than enough, according to the Better Heating-Cooling Council.

In the past many boilers have been oversized for the job, and your local heating dealer can tell you if there is enough capacity for your winter needs.

If you have hot water baseboard, ask him to show you how to raise the water temperature for greater heat output in the rooms. The boiler water can be as high as 240 degrees if you need that extra heat.

If you don't care to fidget with the boiler controls, the contractor can give you a toggle switch to raise the temperature control whenever you get to the cabin. Or he can even set up an automatic clock arrangement to raise the heat just before you arrive.

Property inflation offsets moving costs

Many people think it costs money to move. However, the inflationary trend in real estate has caused a different phenomenon. The following example should illustrate what I mean.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: About 10

Americans live singly more often, census notes

The U. S. Bureau of the Census has reported that 200 million people living in the United States reside in "ordinary" households such as homes and apartments. As of March 1975, the household population maintained 71 million homes.

Another four million Americans live in institutions such as army barracks, rooming houses and hospitals.

Two out of three households, the Census Bureau says, are maintained by a married couple. The others, approximately 12 per cent, are maintained by a group of relatives but not by a married couple. Those maintained by a person living entirely alone or with non-relatives only account for 22 per cent of all U. S. households.

This data indicates a trend among Americans toward occupying more separate living quarters with fewer occupants per unit. Official studies — which forecast an increase of at least 20 million households by 1990 — confirm that more men and women will be living alone or with non-relatives instead of in family groups in the future.

According to the Census Bureau's mid-decade statistics, the population has increased in all four regions of the country, and in all states but New York, Rhode Island and the District of Columbia.

The trend toward suburban living has intensified in recent years. Information released by the Conference Board in New York shows that during year, while population in the suburbs cities rose by only ½ per cent in a year, while population in the suburbs jumped by 2.4 per cent a year. In the past five years, population decreases ½ per cent each year in the cities, but climbed two per cent a year in the suburbs.

Regardless of where they live, the detached single-family dwelling (one house on one lot) still is the dream of most Americans. A national consumer/builder survey published last year revealed that 92.7 per cent of the more-than-800 consumers questioned preferred a single-family home.

Mr. Meltzer on real estate

by Bernard Meltzer

years ago, when I was married, my parents were kind enough to help me purchase a small house for $10,000. I bought it with an FHA loan, and only had a $1,000 downpayment.

I had just started a new job and was not certain how long I would be staying in the area. A year later I received a promotion and my wife wanted a larger house. I sold our house and made a $4,500 cash profit because values had inflated. I used this as my downpayment in purchasing a brand new $25,000 home.

Three years later I was transferred to the Midwest. I listed my house with a broker and found that houses in my neighborhood were then selling for approximately $40,000. I now had a $20,000 cash profit which I used to buy a $60,000 house in my new location.

I have now been transferred to California and am amazed to learn that my $60,000 purchase is now worth $75,000. I expect to use the profit in buying a new house for $80,000, and having some money left for furniture. I certainly am happy I bought that $10,000 house 10 years ago. —ON THE MOVE.

Your letter illustrates what has been happening because of inflation. I have always advised people to buy homes as soon as they were able to afford them, even though they might not be in the position to buy the house of their dreams.

By getting into the house market on the ground floor, it enables one to take advantage of the general inflationary trend that has been raising the prices of houses for the last 30 years.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I read with interest your letter concerning the couple occupying the second floor of the duplex apartment house. It is apparent that the first-floor tenant will not move out, and that the owner can no longer climb to the second floor with a heart condition.

Rather than finding a new apartment, it is possible to install some sort of chair elevator. This seems like a much less drastic solution. —ELEVATED.

You may be right. If the house is sufficiently valuable, an investment of $1,500 to $2,500 may be a worthwhile alternative. However, I would do this only if you can secure the stair elevator sufficiently to prevent unauthorized people from tampering with it.

This, as you can see, can be nuisance.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have a very unusual problem. I find that hot water flows out of both the hot water spigot and cold water spigot. I know there must be some simple solution, but I can't figure it out.

It's hard enough to get the kids to brush their teeth when we have cold water. Can you enlighten me? —MUST BE AN EASY WAY OUT.

Hot water coming from the cold water spigot indicates that there is a cross connection in the water line somewhere. If your house is a new one, it could be an error made by the plumber.

In an older house, something has to be malfunctioning. Check any plumbing fixture or appliance where hot and cold water come together. Most typical ones are washing machines or mixing faucets in showers.

Something must be bypassing hot water into the cold water line. If your problem is a mixing faucet, make sure it is in the off position. If the washing machine is the problem, you had better consult the repairman, because it has a faulty valve.

DEAR MR. MELTZER: I have recently come into a large inheritance. My family is now deciding how I should spend it. They would like me to purchase a house in a fashionable seashore resort.

This would be fine, but would it be a good investment? —UNDECIDED.

For the past 10 years, the market for dwellings for all water-based properties, both lake and ocean, has been very good. There has been a steady upgrading of values, and this trend seems as though it will continue.

If you buy the right property, you won't go wrong with your investment, and you will have a lot of fun at the same time.

Swim pool upkeep now a breeze

Advances in home pool design, technology and equipment in recent years make getting ready for a season of swimming fun nothing more than a weekend adventure for the average homeowner, said Marco DiPietro, president of the Midwest Chapter of the National Swimming Pool Institute.

"With most pools today, it is just a matter of making a safety check of wiring and pipe connections and doing very minor service to get the pool into good shape," DiPietro said.

Although pool opening procedures vary a bit, depending upon type and condition of the pool, the Midwest Chapter does offer a general step-by-step routine that will work for most.

First, double check to be sure all electrical power to the pool and pool equipment is off. Do this by throwing the circuit breaker or removing the fuse.

Then inspect all electrical connections for worn insulation, exposed wire and corroded connections. Correct as necessary. If there is any question, call a qualified pool service company.

Next, tighten all nut-and-bolts connections on the diving board, slide, ladders, pumps and other equipment.

If the pool is more than three to five years old, it may need repainting, refinishing or repainting. Check with the pool builder for recommendations.

Skim the water surface and vacuum the pool to remove all debris and dirt. If the pool walls or bottom are dirty or stained, a scrub-down is needed.

And if the pool must be drained, be sure the hydrostatic relief valve in the pool bottom is opened. Do not drain a vinyl-liner pool.

Recondition the filter and filter media according to the manufacturer's directions. Prime the pump and turn on the pump motor. If it does not pump water immediately, turn it off, inspect and clean as necessary. A noisy pump may indicate worn bearings and call for parts replacement by a qualified pool service technician.

It's a good idea to have your pool builder or service company check, clean and relight your pool heater.

Add chemicals and algaecides to bring the water back into a safe and healthy condition for swimmers. Follow the directions on the package regarding the amount required and use a good test kit designed to determine pH level of the water.

Pool water in a home pool recirculates through the system about every 12 hours. Allow the pool to operate for a day or so in order to clean the water, then dive into a season of wet, warm fun.

Major changes in assets told

Significant asset portfolio changes occurred in 1975 at member banks in the Seventh Federal Reserve District. Loans as a percentage of assets declined for the first time in at least 30 years. Securities holdings increased, with the percentage of assets accounted for by U.S. Treasury securities showing its first increase in over two decades.

These asset changes reflect a decline in loan demand and in market interest rates in 1975, as well as an effort by banks to maintain liquidity. Data showing these changes along with other ratios are published by the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago in the 1975 edition of Operating Ratios. The booklet lists 62 ratios compiled from member bank data and divided into size and geographic groupings. Included are ratio measuring profitability, rates of return on securities and loans, sources of income, and distribution of loans and other assets.

Plan to make land laws in U.S. similar endorsed

An official of the Federal National Mortgage Assn. is urging members of the bar to endorse a legislative proposal to achieve uniformity and greater simplification in land transaction statutes among the 50 states.

Speaking as a panelist before the Federal Bar Savings Institutions Law Committee meeting, James E. Murray, FNMA's General Counsel, said, "the current legal patchwork governing land transactions is complex, archaic, and confusing."

"We now have 50 different states with 90 different sets of statutes, most of which are based on economic and social patterns which do not pertain to circumstances of our modern environment," he said. "The existing laws make it difficult if not impossible for buyers and lenders to be sure of their legal rights and they inhibit the flow of mortgage funds across state boundaries."

The adoption by all the states of the Uniform Land Transactions Act (ULTA), approved last year by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws (NCCUSL), would go a long way toward unraveling these legal tangles, Murray said.

The Act is the outgrowth of a six-year undertaking by a Special Committee of the NCCUSL.

If adopted by the states, the Act would achieve uniformity in such basic areas as the rights and recourses of real estate buyers and sellers and security interests in real estate, including default and foreclosure proceedings and usury limitations.

The American Bar Association could provide a great impetus to the effort to achieve such uniformity by adopting a position in favor of the ULTA during its annual meeting in August, Murray said. Such action, he explained, would encourage the states to proceed swiftly in adopting the Act. "I am hopeful the bar will lead the way by adopting such a stance because the ULTA goes to the heart of many of the problems which currently beset the real estate market," Murray told the members of the Federal Bar committee.

"By attacking those problems at the

Telemed tells 1976 earnings

Telemed Corporation, Hoffman Estates, achieved record revenues and earnings per share for the year ended March 31, announced Gerald A. Kien, chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

For fiscal 1976, earnings per share before extraordinary credit and after adjustment for a six for five stock split, distributed in the form of a dividend, increased to 45 cents, which was 36 per cent more than the adjusted 33 cents for the previous fiscal year. Income before extraordinary credit grew to $1,238,464, up 35 per cent over the $919,711 for fiscal 1975. Revenues were $7,547,502 compared with $6,675,957 for the previous fiscal year.

At March 31, 1976 Telemed was servicing 944 subscribers throughout the United States and in Canada for its computer analysis systems and had 55 subscribers for its 24-hour electrocardiogram recording services for a total of 999 installations, up 44 per cent from one year earlier.

state level, the proposed legislation would facilitate the flow of mortgage credit, reduce the cost of real estate transactions, and iron out many of the legal complexities which have been the bane of homebuyers, lenders, and secondary market purchasers of mortgages for decades."

In achieving these objectives, Murray said, the act would also help the nation fulfill its housing goals.

"The housing industry has waited too long already for uniformity in land transactions throughout the country. It is certainly to be hoped that all those involved and interested in real estate and housing will actively support the current proposal."

Utility cut effort sought by HUD

The Department of Housing and Urban Development has launched a new energy conservation effort aimed at reducing excessive use of utilities in public housing projects.

Assistant Secretary James L. Young said that HUD, in an effort to help hard-pressed Public Housing Agencies (PHAs) reduce their operating costs, is requiring that to the extent practicable all utilities consumed by tenants shall be individually metered. This, in effect, will require public housing residents who use excessive amounts of utilities to pay the excess costs themselves.

Depending on cost-benefit surveys by individual PHAs, individual metering will be accomplished either by:

- Direct billing to tenants by the utility supplier, with tenants receiving a reasonable allowance from the PHA toward costs; or
- Use of a checkmeter operated by the PHA, where a mastermeter system is in place, with tenants surcharged for utility consumption in excess of reasonable requirements.

Rent schedules will be adjusted by the PHA to allow for reasonable costs in those projects where direct billing is established.

PHAs have 18 months to complete surveys determining which system best suits their needs, and three years to implement the individual metering concept. Tenants with high consumption rates will be advised by PHAs on ways to cut down utility consumption.

Approximately half of the nation's 2,000 PHAs have already instituted some form of tenant accountability for excessive utility usage. Available data show that people responsible for their own utilities use 20 to 30 per cent less than those whose utilities are paid for them.

Details of the final rule on individual metering appeared in the Federal Register May 17, and include some of the recommendations received from HUD's earlier invitation for public comment on the subject.

Housing allowances hold no appeal for some buyers

Housing allowances, payments which are made directly to help low-income households pay for their housing are feasible but do not have the same level of appeal for all segments of the population.

That tentative conclusion is contained in a recent progress report by the Department of Housing and Urban Development on an experiment it has been conducting in a dozen communities across the country.

The idea of housing allowances has been talked about since Depression days, but it wasn't until 1970 that Congress actually called on the federal government to put it to a test. Extensive work went into designing the housing allowance experiments and setting them up in the twelve locations. Households began receiving housing allowances in the experimental program in 1973. This year's report, the third in as many years, is entitled "Housing Allowances: the 1976 Report to Congress."

Prepared under the direction of Charles J. Orlebeke, Assistant Secretary for Policy Development and Research, the report notes that "feasible" does not necessarily mean

"best choice" among an array of possible housing programs. The findings are preliminary, Mr. Orlebeke said. Definitive conclusions will have to wait until researchers have had time to gather and analyze more complete information.

The report says that generally speaking the main effect of allowances was to enable recipients to avoid excessive housing costs.

A reluctance to move was noted particularly among the elderly poor.

Little effect on housing prices or availability was noted so far in test cities as a result of the influx of the experimental federal rent assistance. Communities selected as test sites did seem to accept the principal features of the programs readily, although some residents criticized the practice of advertising for participants in the experiments.

The idea of federal help with the rent attracted a good many applicants in test cities, but the program did not have universal appeal. It was more difficult to reach and interest the elderly than some other population groups, for example.

The main parts of the housing allowance experiment are:

• Demand experiment: examines how households use the allowance. Sites: Pittsburgh, Pa., and Phoenix, Ariz.

• Supply experiment: designed to analyze how housing markets will respond to the demand created by a large scale allowance program. Sites: Green Bay, Wisc., and South Bend, Ind.

• Administrative Agency experiment: tests various administrative methods for conducting a housing allowance program. Sites: Salem, Ore., San Bernardino County, Calif., Rural North Dakota, Peoria, Ill., Tulsa, Okla., Durham, N.C., Jacksonville, Fla., and Springfield, Mass.

Analysis of the data from the three facets of the experiment and publication of various reports based on the data will continue during the next few years.

Realtors tell 3rd quarter earnings

Baird & Warner Mortgage and Realty Investors, Chicago-based real estate investment trust, reported net earnings for the third quarter ended April 30 of $78,663, equal to 7 cents per share. In the year-ago quarter the trust earned $105,718, equivalent to 10 cents per share.

Per share net earnings for the prior quarter ended Jan. 31, 1976 were 5 cents per share.

Net earnings for the first nine months of the current fiscal year amount to $232,322 or 24 cents per share, compared with net earnings of $501,662 or 48 cents per share for the same period last year, according to John W. Baird, chairman of the board.

The trust's total loan commitments outstanding at April 30 amounted to $44,188,000 as compared to $43,550,000 at the end of the prior quarter and $50,000,000 at the same time last year. Funds advanced against closed commitments at the end of the current quarter stood at $36,632,641 compared with $35,484,249 on Jan. 31 and $35,883,433 a year ago.

Baird reported that at the end of the third quarter the trust was deferring income recognition on 15 loans aggregating $13,672,741. Of the total, $2,209,619 has been disbursed on eight loans secured by mortgages on land on which construction had not begun. Four of the delinquent mortgage loans represent $5,236,906 advanced against condominium and residential projects on which sales are proceeding. The remaining three loans, totaling $6,206,216, are secured by mortgages on a completed industrial building, a virtually completed apartment project which is leasing well, and an office building currently being leased.

Baird said that the upturn for the real estate industry, which perhaps plunged farther and faster than the overall economy during the recent recession, continues to lag behind the rest of the economy in its rate of recovery.

"There continues to be a surplus of space to be absorbed and some remaining problems to be resolved that hinder a more vigorous pace of new construction and sound financing opportunities. But the outlook is more promising than it has been for some time," Baird said.

We're National, but we're Neighborly.™

Small home builder needs to have support: official

The small home builder entrepreneur who is the central force in the production of 30 million housing units in the last 30 years is a "great national resource which needs to be preserved," George M. Brady Jr., president of The National Housing Partnership, Washington, D.C. told a Senate hearing recently.

Supporting a bill which would enable the Small Business Administration to make loans to small builders, as it does to other small businesses, Brady said that the sudden drying up of credit or unforeseen skyrocketing interest rates, such as we had in the early 70s, can put the best small builder in jeopardy.

He testified before the joint hearing of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business and the Small Business Subcommittee of the Senate Banking Committee which are considering the subject of oversight of financial assistance by the SBA to the housing industry.

Brady cited the experience of The National Housing Partnership in advocating these SBA loans which would enable small builders to purchase land and carry it until the necessary approvals and mortgage loans are obtained. These loans would also provide equity and working capital to finance the erection and sale of the homes.

Brady explained that The National Housing Partnership is a private organization created by the Congress in 1968 to perform a public purpose — "to encourage the widest possible participation by private enterprise in the provision of housing for low and moderate income families."

"In pursuit of that goal, The Partnership has recruited some 270 limited partners who have invested over $42 million to be committed to the construction and operation of decent homes for low income families," he said. "Since its creation, NHP has participated with established building firms in the organization, financing, construction, and management of 170 low and moderate income housing projects in 34 states to provide decent homes for 27,000 families."

Part of the activity of NHP has been in the field of single-family housing, particularly through Housing Capital Corporation, a wholly owned subsidiary licensed by the SBA to make small business investment corporation loans to small builders.

The NHP board of directors expressed great concern during the recent economic crunch which so badly crippled the building industry that many able builders suffered severe financial problems preventing them from proceeding on well-conceived developments.

"It was our view that NHP, with its expertise, could assist in keeping a number of these builders operating and producing housing," Brady said. "Thus we decided to seek SBIC licensing and to make a substantial investment of our funds in this undertaking. Under our SBIC program, HCC has to date entered into agreements with 10 builders to construct 1,188 homes."

"In selecting builders and projects, HCC attempts, where feasible, to produce moderate priced housing for a given market. We look both to that factor and to the track record of the developer," he said. "In addition, our staff of planners, engineers, lawyers, market and financial analysts, and construction experts thoroughly review each proposal before we commit to participate."

Because of the many hours of investigation and consideration required, it is not feasible for HCC to finance the very small builder who constructs perhaps 25 or fewer homes a year, Mr. Brady said. "This is where direct loans by the SBA might play a significant role."

Use of red cedar urged to guard against moths

There's a return to the natural in fabrics, especially woollens. Also, a turning away from harsh chemical cleaning fluids and dangerous aerosol insect repellents.

It all makes fine fashion sense and good ecological news. But it also lays wide the door to those perennial houseguests of grandma's time, the common house moth.

It is estimated that the hungry little beasties can and do damage soft goods valued to $500 million a year.

But the door can be closed to the nasty critters if it is on a closet, a cabinet or drawer liberally lined with aromatic red cedar. Because cedar is one of the most damp-repellent of woods it also offers protection against harm done by mildew to stored clothes.

Easily installed tongue-and-grooved cedar lining is available in pre-packaged bundles (complete with construction diagrams and instructions) at home centers and local lumber yards. And for less than $100 the average handyperson can fit out an existing closet or create an entirely new basement storage unit.

Those making the investment will reap several types of rewards. According to real estate experts, the presence of a cedar lined closet adds to the value of a home.

And the savings on costly cleaning and storage bills can pay for the closet in very little time . . . not to mention the dollars saved by doing in the moths before they chomp through winter garments.

For although humans find the fresh spicy aroma of cedar quite pleasing, moths are "allergic" to it and cannot live where the fragrance permeates the air.

Thus a closet, cabinet or drawer thoroughly lined with cedar will provide the safest and most economical way to give summer-long protection to bulky woollen knits and fine wool jerseys and crepes collected over a fashionable winter.

Those just making the annual spring closet change-over can follow these hints to achieve the best and safest storage at the least expense.

To avoid the cost and damage done to fabrics and colors by too frequent dry cleanings, examine winter clothes thoroughly. Those that are reasonably clean should be brushed thoroughly and hung outdoors in the sunlight for awhile.

Then, placed in a cedar closet for the summer they will emerge in the fall looking and smelling fresh with no clinging unpleasant chemical odor.

Carefully wash as many woollens as possible, either by hand or in the delicate care cycle of an automatic washer using a mild cold water detergent. Dry the woollens flat on towelings before storage in the cedar closet. Clothes that do have to be dry cleaned will lose that chemical smell when hung in the cedar closet.

For knits you do not wish to hang, cedar shelving can be designed to hold bulky knits or for laying softer knits, jerseys or crepes flat.

Refugee home their specialty

by ROBERT D. INDERMAN

DALLAS (UPI) — In half a day, Fred Cuny and his friends can build a comfortable single-family dwelling that is safe from hurricane winds and floods of up to five feet.

And a $10 bill will cover the cost of construction.

Cuny is executive director of a Texas-based firm called Intertect, an acronym for International Architects. His clients are the world's homeless: persons displaced because of famine, floods, earthquakes and war.

What Intertect does in part is design and construct refugee camps. Its work has taken Cuny from Bangladesh following the 1971 Indian-Pakistan war to earthquake-ravaged Guatemala this year.

"To an outsider, it might appear like we're making profit from disasters," Cuny said. "That's wrong, of course. We are a private enterprise working hand-in-hand with relief organizations providing a complete package of services they are not equipped to supply."

Intertect's $10, bamboo-and-reed home will never make the front cover of Better Homes and Gardens, but to shelterless refugees it can be a lifesaver.

Intertect produced the home in conjunction with Pittsburgh's Carnegie-Mellon University. Total investment in research, materials, training and testing a full-scale model in Guatemala was $7,500.

Last year the dwelling was selected to represent the United States in a UNESCO-sponsored competition on relief housing. About 240 nations had entries and Intertect won one of the three major categories for refugee housing.

The house follows the basic A-frame design, employing thick bamboo members laced together in a "tension-compression relationship."

"When the wind hits, one member becomes tense and the other compresses," Cuny said. "This combination transfers the force of the wind into the ground and keeps the building firmly planted into its foundation."

To cope with tropical monsoons, the first floor is located five feet above the ground. A special type of plastic cement mixes with the mud to protect and preserve the bamboo.

Intertect's latest challenge is the design of homes in the Guatemalan highlands that can resist earthquakes and to teach the natives how to build them quickly and economically.

"We're working with OXFAM (the British equivalent of CARE) and World Neighbors getting people to build a quake resistant core shelter, of course using the local materials at hand — adobe," Cuny said.

"After an earthquake, the people will rebuild what they consider just a temporary structure, but whatever they rebuild usually becomes permanent. They add on to it, they build on top of it, and as the years go by, it becomes weaker and weaker."

"They should realize that the core structure will be permanent, should be permanent. We want to affect the whole way their homes are being built without actually altering their basic form, their own architecture."

Cuny said the adobe dwellings could be made more resistant to earthquakes by building lighter but stronger walls and roofs internally "with perhaps barbed wire tying the adobe blocks together and perhaps wood bracing."

"We also want to show them the right land to build on," he said. "And we also want to teach them that making adobe with grass roots — the old style — is much better than what they are doing now."

The biggest problem, Cuny said, is convincing the people that the new way is the better way.

"We are working with the people now while they are still upset about the recent earthquake and not resistant to new ideas about their survival," he said. "We brief the local builders, the folk constructionists of each village, on the new techniques and then they pass on the information and techniques to the people."

"They in effect help themselves," he said.

Cuny, a native Texan in his early 30s, has a long history of working with refugees. In 1969, during the dying minutes of the Nigerian-Biafra conflict, he flew fish meal and a high protein food known as CSM into refugee camps and flew children out aboard a lumbering C97.

"It was while I was working in Biafra that the idea of Intertect originated," he said.

"There were a lot of doctors and nurses, but most of the people in the relief organizations didn't have any background in engineering or architecture. They could react but they couldn't answer the basic need of the people that they were helping — inexpensive refugee housing constructed from local materials with minimal time, effort, expense and skill."

Cuny met several other architects who shared the same idea as his — a profit-making consulting firm specializing in relief work.

"A lot of people do research in this field, but no one except us combines research with construction capabilities. We do the research, produce the designs and actually work in the field."

Intertect has a full-time staff of five, but it operates on what Cuny calls a "cooperative basis."

The firm has numerous engineering and architectural specialists available to him at short notice for short-term projects. They also serve on the firm's research advisory committee.

"When a disaster strikes, I contact one of the relief organizations I work with and then send someone out to the area to research the situation," he said.

After Guatemala, the next stop for Intertect is Ethiopia.

plete," he said. "We will continue our work in Guatemala and then in about six weeks to two months, we'll be flying some of our people to help the Ethiopian refugees."

"And there's a lot of them."

Paralegals

They save attorneys time, cut cost of legal services

by MONICA WILCH PERIN

When a client calls his lawyer, he needs to be served right away, not next week.

That, in a nutshell, is why Dorothy DeJonge of Arlington Heights believes in paralegals.

Dorothy had been a legal secretary for 15 years when Harper College in 1972 established an associate degree program in legal technology.

Dorothy's boss, attorney Allen Peters of Arlington Heights, was "extremely interested" in this new concept of training legal laypersons to assist attorneys, and he suggested she enroll in the program.

"He believes the law profession needs paralegals just as the medical profession has a need for paramedics," says Dorothy of her boss.

So she became one of Harper's first paralegal graduates.

Now, she says, instead of working for Peters, she works with him.

ACCORDING TO Sherrie Hildebrandt, coordinator of Harper's legal technology program, paralegals can relieve attorneys of many time-consuming routine tasks such as questioning clients, obtaining police and medical reports, preparing documents, answering court calls, researching the law, keeping the attorney's law library up to date — nearly everything except giving legal advice and representing clients in court.

The paralegal concept is hailed by its proponents as a potential cost-cutting reform of the legal delivery system that will help make legal services available to the broad middle class of Americans.

The idea is endorsed by the American Bar Association which in February accredited Harper's program, and by the Chicago Bar Association, which initiated the Harper program.

But there is also a great deal of opposition among attorneys, many of whom fear paralegals will be used by the larger law firms to drive the smaller firms and individual practitioners out of business.

"I don't think that's happening," says William Thigpen, chairman of the Chicago Bar's paralegal committee, and besides he adds, "the small firms can play the same game."

"THE CONCEPT OF paralegals was started in the medium and larger firms in Chicago around 1970, and many of them now have paralegal staffs of 20 to 25," he said.

"But paralegals can also be most productive in small firms, enabling the attorneys to render better service to the public and hold down costs," Thigpen believes.

Two concerns of attorneys not so easily dismissed, however, are that people claiming to be paralegals might begin giving legal advice, and that law firms will hire paralegals and fewer lawyers, especially new law school grads, who are having trouble finding jobs as it is.

Nevertheless, Thigpen considers paralegals "well established" in the Chicago area and he believes the idea is going to continue catching on, even among smaller law firms.

But private law practice is not the only place for paralegals to be used, and indeed might remain the smaller area of utilization compared with government and industry.

ACCORDING TO Ms. Hildebrandt, corporations are already developing paralegal job descriptions for their own legal, tax, and insurance departments, and paralegals are at work in banks, insurance companies, state and federal agencies, and for legislators, state's attorneys, attorneys general, and welfare and social security — everywhere that lawyers are.

"It's an open door to many things — municipal service and public interest law are whole areas that are ripe for paralegals," Ms. Hildebrandt believes. "They can act as advocates representing citizens before administrative agencies, for example."

Starting salaries for paralegals average around $9,000 to $9,500.

Still another possibility is for paralegals to free lance. Joan Hanson, another Harper grad, has gone into business for herself, taking on individual assignments from different lawyers and law firms. She may advise or help them in systematizing their office — an important aspect of the paralegal concept, necessary for attorneys to delegate their work.

Or, she may handle annual paperwork for an attorney's corporate clients, such as filing necessary documents with the state or the IRS. Or she may update an attorney's or corporate client's book-keeping.

MRS. HANSON, who took the paralegal training after her children were in school and she had time on her hands, concedes that free lancing as a paralegal could be difficult.

"I think you have to prove yourself first. I had worked as a paralegal for the attorney who originally coordinated Harper's program, and began making contacts with various attorneys by word of mouth after that."

The Illinois Paralegal Association, formed in 1973, has about 160 members, of whom about 50 per cent have gone through formal training and the rest have learned on the job. The Harper program offers an associate degree in legal technology for students with no prior legal experience, and a certificate program for people already working in the field (such as legal secretaries).

According to Ms. Hildebrandt, the average age of Harper's paralegal students is 35, and 40 per cent already have college degrees in other areas. The normal two-year curriculum can be completed in as little as three semesters by someone who already has the required liberal arts courses.

The legal tech courses, all at night, are taught at attorneys and judges. They range from family law and estate planning to income tax and real estate law. Certificate specialties offered include corporate and criminal law. The curriculum includes an opportunity to get practical experience working as a paralegal for credit.

WHAT KIND of person has an aptitude for paralegal work? According to Ms. Hildebrandt, the qualifying test which all applicants must take is a test of logic using inductive and deductive thinking. The training is geared to develop students' skills in critical thinking, problem-solving and decision-making.

The last qualifying test for fall semester will be given at Harper June 24. Interested persons must apply for admission to Harper and ask to be scheduled for the test.

THE FIRST LETTER Mavis Jenkins, left, wrote Shirley Maurer was 31 years ago from her fifth grade classroom in England. They since have shared everything from the Beatles to new babies. Mrs. Jenkins is visiting Mrs. Maurer in Arlington Heights.

Longtime pen pals get together

by LAURA SCHMALBACH

For most pen pals, the thrill of addressing letters to a far off locale wears off after a few months, and the long distance how-are-you dwindle to a trickle.

But Shirley Maurer of Arlington Heights and Mavis Jenkins of Farrington, England, have managed to break that mold — their letters have been crossing the Atlantic regularly for 31 years, and neither sees an end in sight.

After a 20-year separation (they met once in England, after 11 years of pen scratching) the pen pals are now reunited for three weeks while Mavis enjoys her first visit to the Chicago area.

It all started as a fifth grade exchange program for Shirley, a student on Chicago's south side, and Mavis, an 11-year-old in Mid-diesbrough, England. The contact was made and the letters kept coming, running the gamut from the very first "my cat is called Blackie and my dog is called Floss" to later news of teenage crushes and the latest Beatles gossip.

Now, relaxing in Shirley's kitchen after a stormy welcome to "the colonies" Sunday night, Mavis agrees with her friend that the 20-year absence seemed more like 20 minutes after the first spirited "hello."

"The very first time (in England) I realized that she was a complete stranger to me, but the minute we saw each other, we both felt like one of the family," Mavis says with a smile.

"We really did grow up together," Shirley adds. "We've gone from teenage problems to graduations and weddings — but it has been rough watching the postage jump from two cents to 52!"

While MAVIS and her 4-year-old daughter Charlotte are visiting Shirley, they'll take in a variety of sights from a suburban supermarket to the state capitol in Springfield. And when Mavis returns to Farrington, she'll be sure to tell her young neighbor all about the trip — the young English lady has been writing Shirley's eighth grade daughter for three years.

"I guess it does run in the family," Shirley laughs. "My older sister has kept the same pen pal for 42 years, and I hope my daughter keeps it up."

Job over, abolish agency

The outgoing chairman of the Consumer Product Safety Commission believes that agency — and probably a lot of others — should be abolished.

Richard Simpson made that recommendation even before his successor, S. John Byington, had been confirmed — a development which lends further support to his critique of regulatory agencies.

(Byington, formerly an assistant to Virginia Knauer and a native of President Ford's hometown, was rejected by the Senate for chairman of the CPSC on grounds he was unqualified and uninterested to be a strong consumer advocate. Ford promptly renominated him to fill a 2½-year vacancy on the Commission, and he was again rejected by the Senate. Two days later, Republican Whip Robert Griffin of Michigan brought him up for another vote and he squeaked through. He is now expected to be named chairman.)

SIMPSON BELIEVES all government agencies at their inception (or as soon as possible in the cases of those already existing) should be required to draw up a plan for their own demise to ensure not only a beginning but an end to their appointed task.

Such a requirement has already been enacted in the state of Colorado, where all agencies will come up for automatic legislative review every six years (thus avoiding undue political influence), and if no justification can be made for their continuing existence, they will pass into oblivion.

Simpson has devised a sophisticated computer model for the demise of the CPSC by 1982. It is based on data relating to the current degree of compliance with product safety standards and projections for product safety in the future. It assumes that there is a reasonable level of risk in product safety, an assumption which is implied by the Consumer Product Safety Act itself, Simpson pointed out. The act outlaws "unreasonable" risks of injury in consumer products.

IN OTHER WORDS, by 1982 the CPSC will have done its job of setting up adequate standards to keep product safety risks at a reasonable level. Already, Simpson believes, federal standards along with voluntary standards set by various organizations like Underwriters Laboratories and by industry itself have come a long way toward eliminating serious product hazards, and compliance with these standards has stabilized. Any future violations can be handled by the courts, and the CPSC no longer has a raison d'être, Simpson figures.

Other reforms Simpson believes should be applied to regulatory agencies:

- Better screening of appointed officials. The current procedure of hiring and firing for political reasons is obviously not a good way to ensure competence and efficiency in government agencies.

- Cost-benefit analysis of the job to be done. What will be the costs and the expected advantages or disadvantages, and is it going to be worth it?

- Priorities. It is difficult to imagine how any organization can function without knowing what its priorities are, but that appears to be the case with many of the regulatory agencies.

- No secrecy. All activities and records of regulatory agencies should be open to the public.

- The plan of demise. This would also aid in oversight of the agency

Keeping up

by Monica Wilch Perin

during its lifetime. Congress can ask whether the assigned job is done yet, and if not, why not.

- Accountability. According to Simpson, he and other regulatory chiefs often wonder who their boss is.

The President? Congress? The Constitution? The first two both make demands, but neither seems to really know or care what is going on in the agencies.

There is much validity in the current cry against over-regulation and bureaucratic bigness. However, in contrast to those who would simply eliminate government interference in the marketplace (laissez-faire, which for consumers means "buyer beware"), Simpson's solutions are responsible, well thought out, and realistic.

The doctor says

by Lawrence F. Lamb, M.D.

Obese teen needs physical check-up

I am a girl, 15 years old and weigh 165 pounds. I have tried every diet from Weight Watchers to Ayds candy. Nothing seems to work. I want to lose weight real badly, but whatever I try doesn't seem to work. Whenever I want a piece of candy or cake, my parents try to make me feel guilty. I do want to be thin, but everything just seems to fail. My mom was overweight and my dad is too, but none of my brothers or sisters are. I sometimes wonder why I have to be fat and not my brothers or sisters instead. Please, would you tell me what to do? My parents won't take me to the doctor unless it is absolutely necessary.

I also haven't menstruated for eight months and I was wondering if excessive weight could be the cause.

I hope your parents will take you to a doctor for a check-up. Sometimes being overweight and not having regular menstrual periods are indications of an endocrine problem. The only way to find out is to have an examination and an evaluation of your eating habits.

Any diet that restricts your calories sufficiently in relation to your activity will result in weight loss. Weight Watchers has been very helpful to many people who want to lose weight. It is important, though, to avoid those fad diets that are often proposed to lose weight rapidly. Rapid weight loss can be harmful. Most such diets are unsound and cause nutritional deficiencies.

I'm sending you a copy of The Health Letter number 4-7, Weight Losing Diet, which will give you a well-balanced diet that you can use to lose weight. Others who want it may send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to me in care of Paddock Publications, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

I would also like to recommend that you start an exercise program. Start with simple walking. Increase the amount of walking you do gradually until you can walk an hour a day. Add other activities if you can. Swimming is good during the summer months. The exercise will help you strengthen your muscles while helping you lose fat. Everyone on a weight-losing diet should also have an exercise program.

A TENDENCY to obesity does seem to be inherited. We see the same thing in the animal world. Beef cattle breeds tend to be chunky and fat. A dairy cow is less muscular, less fat, and tends to produce lots of milk. So, genes are important. However, you can alter the influence of genes by your life style. You can build muscles, eliminate fat and improve your appearance.

Family habits also influence the future outcome of obesity. Overeating is sometimes learned. When a child is overfed during early development, it can increase the chances of being obese. Also, there is good evidence that lack of physical activity in childhood is a significant factor in adult obesity. This may be even more important than the eating habits at that age.

It is a little late to correct these factors from childhood that often determine how much of a battle with obesity you will have as an adult. Still with a good exercise program and a sensible diet you can gradually lose weight and learn how to keep from regaining it. You will lose a lot of weight the first week, but an average loss of a pound a week is fine for most people. It takes longer but it lasts.

Tulip bulbs may be dug up and stored

Dear Dorothy: The tulips have quit blooming. The question now is what to do about the bulbs. Should they be taken up? If so, when and how to store? —Mrs. Herman Burrow

Ordinarily, tulip bulbs are left in the ground until the foliage has turned brown and died back. This is the time to dig them up and dry them in the sun for 24 hours or so. It's a good idea to treat them with Diazinon dust to eliminate any possible infestation. Then put the bulbs in mesh bags and hang them in a dry area until it comes planting time again. Some people like to store them in old nylon stockings, separated by individual colors.

Dear Dorothy: I've enjoyed your zucchini recipes tremendously. Do you have one that can be made in a hurry — without elaborate preparation or ingredients? —Norine Di Lorenzo Wash two pounds of tender young zucchini. Cut off stems; but don't peel. Shred on a coarse grater. Put in a saucepan with one cup of water, cover and boil exactly four minutes. Drain well. Mix with one cup of sour cream, add salt and pepper and heat.

Dear Dorothy: Always wash my chenille bedspread by itself or the lint would come off on other things. I've found that when drying it outside, hanging it wrong side out makes the tufted surfaces blow against each other to raise the pile. —Midge Kremer

Dear Dorothy: How can I renew old iron fireplace and irons which have gotten a little rusty? —Mark Dornberg

Scrub with No. 3 steel wool and kerosene. When clean, apply stove blacking.

Extension Service has camping for homemakers

The University of Illinois Cooperative Extension Service has planned two "great get-away" adventures for area homemakers interested in camping.

A statewide homemakers camp is set for Aug. 1-4 at the 4-H Memorial Camp in Monticello, Ill. with a reservation deadline of July 23. From Aug. 8-11, a homemakers camp will be held at the 4-H Camp Shaw-waw-nas-see, Kankakee, Ill. with a reservation deadline of July 1.

The homemakers camps are open to all interested women and will offer programs to suit varied interests. There will be pool activities, nature awareness, crafts galore and recreational opportunities.

AT CAMP Shaw-was-see there will be guest speakers and special interest sessions. As a special feature, this year, at Camp Shawwaw-nas-see, there will be an open house day Tuesday, Aug. 10, for homemakers who would like to come to camp for one day only, for a nominal fee. The one day fee will include the noon meal along with participation in the program for the day.

Trick for oily hair

If you worry about drying out your oily hair with a shampoo made for oily hair, try a normal-dry hair shampoo and add a little powdered magnesium to it to absorb the extra oil without hurting the hair.

Garden project grows and grows

Prairie Farm and Garden Park in Arlington Heights continues to excite me. When the first 200 garden plots were laid out and opened to residents for community vegetable gardening in 1971, who would have known what plans would be growing!

Angelo Capulli, superintendent of parks, the man with the muscle and the key to the success of the garden project, along with Chris Edgington, then a recreation supervisor with the park district, and I trekked out to the Belmont and Council Trail site to anticipate that first growing season. I can recall dragging hoe, rake, seeds, mulch, water and hope to tend my little piece of earth, along with scores of other gardeners. Leaving the plot at Prairie the following year was almost as difficult as giving up my home to move to the Northwoods.

BUT AFTER five seasons of residents enjoying vegetable-growing there, this will be their last year at Prairie Park because a greater concept is on tap. Angelo's and the park district's impossible dream of creating a historical farmstead reminiscent of the area in the 1800s is coming closer to reality.

Next year, 100 plots will be reserved again, according to Capulli, but they will probably be assigned to 4-H and school groups for educational purposes, not to individual residents. The park district has been planting shrubs and ornamental trees at the Prairie farmstead and more material will be set in the fall. But there will be other spots for residents to sow.

In total, 700 garden plots have been

College orientation workshop at Oakton

Korean fashions June 27

Any Bernero, Elk Grove Village, Alvera Chung, Schaumburg, and Bong Hee Stephens, Arlington Heights, will participate in a Korean costume fashion show Sunday, June 27, at 2 p.m. at McCormick Place in Chicago.

The fashion show is sponsored by the Korean-American Wives' Club of Chicago. For more information readers may call Mrs. Stephens at 392-3738.

issued in Arlington Heights for this year's community gardening, a successful idea that burgeoned from the Prairie Park experience. Five hundred plots are located at Kirchhoff Gardens (Kirchhoff and Dwyer), 50 at Frontier Park and 50 at the Commonwealth Edison right of way. They will be there again next year, waiting for the seed.

THE ARLINGTON Heights Garden Club and University of Illinois Extension Service have each given a gardening workshop already this spring, and things have been so well organized that gardeners in the parks have ready access to water tanks and organic fertilizer (Nu-Earth) from the Metropolitan Sanitary District. Bulletin boards to post upcoming events, vegetable recipes and planting tips at all locations have encouraged a sense of interaction among the gardeners.

Angelo Capulli provided me with a 60-page plus design development report that covers the exciting plans in mind for Prairie Park — the farmhouse, barn, kitchen, gardens, orchard — the whole landscape concept is tremendous. And it all started not too many seasons ago with a bunch of would-be gardeners who wanted some public earth in which to cultivate their vegetables for the kitchen — an idea that has overtaken the country — and a man who not only cared, but in the process, was instrumental in spawning a not-so-impossible dream of creating a heritage for children to come. Angelo Capulli is a special man

Harmful to plants

Air conditioning that makes people feel better during hot, humid weather can harm houseplants. Consumer education spokesmen for the Cornell University Extension service say air conditioners remove moisture from the air that plants need for best growth.

In addition, drafts of cool air can severely affect the health and vigor of plant foliage. The service recommends providing extra humidity around indoor plants by resting the pots on trays containing coarse gravel, perlite or bluestone with water kept just below the top surface of the stones. (UPI) in my book — a man with foresight and endurance.

ON AUG. 21, the park district will have a Harvest Festival Day at Frontier Park for the gardeners at the four plots. Last year, the harvest bash was held at the Nike site with prizes awarded for the best vegetables, fruits and flowers grown in the community gardens, along with refreshments, games, rides and entertainment available to all comers. This year will probably be more fun.

You can bet I'll put Aug. 21 on my calendar, if I have to hitch a ride south on a cattle truck! It should be a red letter day for Arlington Heights gardeners.

Mary Ann Wierec-Gregory K. Derron

Forest View High graduates Mary Ann Wierec and Gregory K. Derron, newlyweds of May 2, are now residing in Schaumburg following their Hawaiian honeymoon.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Wierec, Arlington Heights, Mary Ann studied at Harper College and is now in x-ray technology at Northwest Community Hospital. Gregory, who also studied in a California college, is with Lattof Chevrolet, Arlington Heights.

Their double ring wedding took place at 6 p.m. in St. James Catholic Church, Arlington Heights, with the bride's sister, Ann Marie, as maid of honor, and her sister, Diane, and Jill Foster, Mount Prospect, as bridesmaids.

FLOWER GIRL was 5-year-old Andrea McNeley of Chicago, cousin of the bride, and ring bearer was Andrea's 8-year-old brother, Thomas.

The groom, son of Mrs. B. Chase, Mount Prospect, chose his brother, Michael Mayer, Arlington Heights, as best man, and his brother, Dean Chase, Mount Prospect, and the bride's cousin, Robert Neal, Chicago, as ushers.

The couple greeted 135 guests at a reception in old Orchard Country Club.

Males walk off with top prizes in sewing contest

When Minnesota Fabrics, a Minneapolis-based chain of fabric stores located in Washington, D.C., Pittsburgh, Detroit, Cleveland, Columbus, Chicago, Milwaukee, Duluth and Minneapolis, announced it was sponsoring a sewing contest, it expected entries from a good number of men. But after the original 3,000 entries were judged and the 13 finalists were traveling to Minneapolis, they never expected that from eleven women and two men competing in the final judging, the two men would walk away with the top prizes.

The men had completely cut, sewn and finished their unlined jacket/pants and jacket/shirt combinations. Now in front of the huge audience who had come to the Apache Shopping Mall in Minneapolis, the contestants were modeling their outfits for judges who were looking for quality of workmanship, suitability of fabric and pattern and appropriate fabric and pattern as well as proper fit for the contestant.

THE WINNERS couldn't have been more surprised than the sponsors of the contest. First place went to Robert Ribits of Detroit, who had made a pueblo jacket with facings of calcutta and calcutta pants. Second place went to Carlton Moore of Cleveland, who had made an Ultra Suede men's suit. Third place went to Donna Wendi of Detroit, who had made a navy and white seersucker jacket and shirt with a front-buttoned band closure on jacket and skirt, drop-shoulders with navy top stitching.

The first place prize, a vacation to Paris for two plus $1,000, is being given by Robert to his parents.

Ask Andy

Amphibians live in damp world

Andy sends the Encyclopedia Britannica's 1976 Yearbook of Science and the Future to Danny Dreher, 12, of Hays, Kan., for his question: WHAT IS AN AMPHIBIAN? The amphibian that we know best is the one that wears a wide smile across his froggy face. But frogs are not the only amphibians in this world. There are shy little salamanders, toads, newts, and in certain tropical jungles there are amphibians that look for all the world like overgrown earthworms. The damper parts of our earth serve as home to the 2,300 or so species of amphibians. Although there are exceptions to every rule, most amphibians are tied pretty close to the water, or at least to damp, humid places. For it is here that their eggs are laid and their young begin life.

Amphibians fall into three major groups. The salamanders and newts make up one group; the frogs and toads make up another group, and the legless, burrowing caecilians make up a final group. Of the three groups the caecilians are the most secretive, which explains why not as much is known about their habits.

For most amphibians life begins as an egg in a watery pond. After hatching, the young, or larvae, are quite able to survive in their wet world, swimming around and breathing with the aid of gills. Most adult amphibians, however, are land-dwelling animals with legs and air-breathing lungs. This means that the young amphibians must undergo a number of changes before they are ready to venture forth onto land.

Amphibians range in size from the tiny Cuban tree frog, which is smaller than a dime, to the giant salamander of Japan. This huge fellow can grow to five feet in length. Amphibians also have different ideas about the ideal place to live. Some prefer life on land, hopping about from spot to spot, while others spend most of their time in the watery world where they were born. Some, however, find that arid desert areas are just right for them.

Salamanders are often mistaken for lizards in many parts of the country. True, they are similar in appearance, but salamanders and other amphibians have a soft, supple skin without even a trace of scales. Lizards, on the other hand, have a somewhat hard and scaly skin.

The booming "chugg chugg" of the bullfrog and the tiny "peep peep" of the smaller frogs sometimes transform the woods and marshes into a springtime symphony. Sad to say, the newts, salamanders and other amphibians lend little to the musical score. The salamanders have weak voices at best, and the caecilians are mute.

FUNNY BUSINESS by Roger Bollen

by United Press International

Today is Thursday, June 17, the 160th day of 1976 with 197 to follow. The moon is approaching its last quarter.

The morning stars are Mercury, Venus and Jupiter.

The evening stars are Mars and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Gemini.

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism, was born June 17, 1703. This also is the birthdate of actors Ralph Bellamy (1906) and Dean Martin (1917).

On this day in history:

• In 1928, Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly across the Atlantic Ocean. She was a passenger aboard a plane piloted by Wilmer Sultz.

• In 1967, Communist China announced it had detonated a hydrogen bomb.

• In 1972, five men with cameras and bugging equipment were arrested in the "Watergate" headquarters of the Democratic National Committee in Washington, D.C., and charged with burglary. This was the beginning of the Watergate scandal.

• In 1974, Herbert Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal lawyer, was sentenced to 6 to 18 months in prison and fined $10,000 for illegal election fund raising.

A thought for the day: British poet Sir John Suckling said, "Women are the baggage of life: They are troublesome, and hinder us in the great march, yet we cannot do without them."

Beef Up Your Father's Day Feast

Make Sunday Dad's lazy day. Set up the outdoor grill and check supplies. Then organize any utensils he needs to give his favorite cut of beef that expert attention.

So that cooking schedules are coordinated, plan accompaniments that can be prepared the day before by others in the family. When the steak is done to perfection, everything else will be ready.

Chilled Tomato Teasers

- |   |                           |
|---|---------------------------|
| 4 cups tomato juice                           | 1/2 cup cucumber slices   |
| 3/4 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked | 2 tablespoons lime juice  |
| 3 green onions, cut into chunks               | 1 teaspoon salt           |
| 2 celery stalks, cut into chunks              | 1/2 teaspoon chili powder |
| 1 medium-sized green pepper, cut into chunks  | 1/4 teaspoon pepper       |
| 1 medium-sized carrot, cut into chunks        | 3 1/2 cups water          |

In blender container*, process at blend 2 cups tomato juice and oats 1 minute. Add remaining tomato juice and all ingredients except water; cover. Process at blend until vegetables are finely chopped. In Dutch oven, combine tomato juice mixture and water. Bring to a boil; remove from heat. Chill overnight; serve cold. Garnish with chopped chives, if desired.

*If blender is not available, quick or old-fashioned oats, uncooked, can be ground through the fine blade of a food grinder. Combine tomato juice, ground oats, finely chopped vegetables, lime juice, seasonings and water. Proceed with cooking directions. Makes 8 cups.

Broiled Beef Rib Eye Steaks

Beef rib eye (Delmonico) steaks, cut 1 to 1 1/2 inches thick
Pepper

Place steaks on grill over ash-covered coals so tops of 1-inch steaks are 2 to 3 inches from coals and 1 1/2-inch steaks are 3 to 5 inches from coals. Broil at moderate temperature. When one side is brown, turn, season with salt and pepper and finish cooking second side. Turn and season. Rib eye steaks cut 1 inch thick require 12 to 15 minutes for rare, 18 to 20 minutes for medium. A 1 1/2-inch thick rib eye steak requires 25 minutes for rare, 30 minutes for medium.

Dad's Favorite Chocolate Cake

- |   |  |
|---|--|
| Cake:                                | 2 squares (1 ounce each) unsweetened chocolate, melted |

| 1 cup quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked |  |
| 1/2 cup butter or margarine                 |  |
| 1 1/2 cups sugar                            |  |
| 2 eggs                                      |  |

| Topping:                             |  |
| 1/4 cup firmly packed brown sugar           |  |
| 1/4 cup milk                                |  |
| 1/4 cup butter or margarine                 |  |
| 1 egg, beaten                               |  |
| 1 teaspoon vanilla                          |  |
| 1 1/2 cups shredded coconut                 |  |
| 2/3 cup chopped pecans                      |  |

For cake, pour water over oats. Cover; let stand 20 minutes. Beat together butter and sugar until light and fluffy. Blend in eggs, vanilla and oat mixture. Sift together flour, soda and salt. Add to batter mixture, mixing until well blended. Stir in sour cream and chocolate; mix well. Pour into well-greased and floured 9-inch square baking pan. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350 degrees) about 40 to 45 minutes. Cool 10 minutes) remove from pan.

For topping, combine sugar, milk, butter, egg and vanilla over low heat. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Stir in coconut and pecans. Spread over top of cake; cut into squares.

Crunchy Seasoned Crescents

Makes about 1 1/2 cups crumb mixture

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| 1 cup quick or old fashioned Oats, uncooked | 1/4 cup butter or margarine, melted                 |
| 1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese              | 1/2 teaspoon garlic salt                            |
| 1 cup wheat germ                            | 1 can (8 ounces) refrigerated crescent dinner rolls |

Combine all ingredients, except rolls. Sprinkle crumb mixture into shallow baking pan; bake in preheated moderate oven (350 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes or until lightly browned. Separate crescent dough into triangles. Brush one side of each triangle with additional melted butter; sprinkle with about 1 tablespoon of crumb mixture. Roll up crescents. Brush tops with butter; sprinkle each with about 1 teaspoon crumb mixture. Bake according to crescent dinner roll package directions.

Note: Store remaining crumb mixture in refrigerator. Crumb mixture is a delicious topping for salads, soups or casseroles.

| Crust:                                | 1 cup heavy cream whipped  |
| 2 cups quick or old fashioned oats, uncooked | 1 can (29 ounces) peach slices, drained or 3 cups fresh peach slices |
| 2/3 cup chopped nuts                         | 1 cup fresh strawberry halves  |
| 2/3 cup butter or margarine, melted          | 1/2 cup fresh blueberries  |
| 1/3 cup firmly packed brown sugar            | 1/4 cup orange marmalade   |
| Filling:                              |  |
| 1 package (8 ounces) cream cheese            |  |
| 1/2 cup sugar                                |  |
| 1 tablespoon lemon juice                     |  |

For crust, toast oats in preheated moderate oven (350 degrees) 12 to 15 minutes. Combine oats, nuts, butter and brown sugar; mix well. Reserve 1/3 cup crumb mixture. Press remaining crumb mixture onto bottom and sides of greased 9-inch pie plate. Freeze.

For filling, combine softened cream cheese, sugar and juice; mix until well blended. Fold in whipped cream. Spread cream cheese mixture evenly over bottom and sides of crumb crust. Freeze. To serve, combine peaches, strawberries, blueberries and marmalade. Spoon into frozen cream cheese layer. Refrigerator 20 to 25 minutes. Sprinkle with reserved crumb mixture; cut to serve. Makes 1 pie.

Canning lids

New brands, type s may not be safe

Last summer's canning lid shortage has brought a variety of new types and new brands of lids to the market-place.

The traditional two-piece lid has been joined by one-piece caps, three-piece closures, plastic lids and plastic ring bands, and lids with plastic inserts or cardboard liners. Some are being advertised as "reusable."

Not all of these new lids are reliable, and none should be reused, said Judy Troftgruben, University of Illinois Extension food and nutrition specialist.

Be cautious about using all lids, she said. After processing make sure each check to make sure the jar is still sealed, she advised.

Here are some suggestions to help you select safe, reliable lids:

- Traditional two-piece lids, even if the brand is new, should be reliable. These are designed either as the self-sealing lid with screwband or as a porcelain lined zinc cap with rubber rings.

- One-piece caps are reliable for one-time use. Be sure not to screw them on too tightly.

- Three-piece closures have not been on the market long enough to prove to be reliable.

- Avoid plastic lids and completely flat or very thin metal lids. Do not use lids with an uneven gasket or plastic or cardboard insert.

- Never use commercial jars and closures for home canning. Peanut butter, mayonnaise and pickle jars are designed only for commercial use.

- Never reuse any closure or lid. A worn gasket may prevent an adequate seal when reused. In addition, lids are usually bent while being removed and will not fit flat enough on the jar to seal a second time.

- Do not buy home canning closures unless the manufacturer's name and address and complete instructions for use are included on or inside the package.

- Check each lid for uniformity and quality. Lids should be made from sturdy metal, have a deep side groove that fits the jar lip, and have a uniform gasket. Do not buy if you cannot inspect the lids.

- To be reliable for use in home canning, the lid must not only seal initially, but must stay sealed. Some new types may not hold the vacuum over time, Mrs. Troftgruben explained.

The Food and Drug Administration recommends avoiding any home canning lids or techniques that have not been scientifically proven.

Topic leaves little time for the kitchen

Gen. William Westmoreland said in a speech in Middletown, Ohio, on May 30, 1976 that it was "silly" to admit women to the West Point Academy because "only one woman in 10,000 could lead in combat, and she would be a freak."

Well now, I think that average is about right for the entire male population, too. Very few of the male officers I knew in the army would ever lead men in combat. Those field officers I knew in the army would ever group and I knew female officers who could qualify right up there along with them.

GEN. WESTMORELAND'S reasoning behind why the women wouldn't qualify is even more extraordinary. He maintains that "I don't believe women can carry a pack, live in a foxhole or go a week without a bath." What is this? The ultimate weapon is the unwashed male armpit? As for carrying a pack, that will come as news to the thousands of women all over the world who spend the summer backpacking. His remark about baths is a real put down to the army nurses who gave their lives trying to patch up the damage men did to each other fighting their wars and I wish Maggie Higgins, the extraordinary press photographer who spent years covering wars, were here to say a few words about foxholes.

What really bothers me about statements like the general's is that there are a lot of women who would just agree with him without giving the matter a second thought. Why is that?

If you are over 30 you were taught from birth that the only thing female children are capable of doing is fulfilling passive, serving roles in society. It would be your job to care for the husbands and the children and perform non-threatening things like cleaning and cooking.

THE TOYS WE PLAYED with and the school books we read reflected this thinking. For Christmas we got toy dishes and ironing boards while the boys got Indian suits and trucks. The books showed pictures of him as the surgeon and her as the nurse. You

Their cooking is a team effort

by LOIS SEILER

When Al and Ellen Trimble of Arlington Heights team up in the kitchen, guests can expect elegant dinner fare.

From the time they were newlyweds, Al has been interested in cooking and an inspiration to Ellen. Because his job required considerable traveling, he dined in many different restaurants, tasting new dishes that he would later attempt to duplicate at home. His infectious enthusiasm encouraged Ellen to try new recipes. Al never complained about failures.

Both became fascinated with gourmet foods, and membership in several gourmet groups in California helped to perfect their culinary art. Both search constantly for new and different dishes to create and they never serve the same meal to the same people twice.

GREEN ONION, parsley, herbs and butter flavor the chicken made by Al and Ellen Trimble, Arlington Heights. After seasoning, the chicken is coated with corn flakes and baked in wine.

NEITHER Al nor Ellen ever use a recipe as is. Instead, they add their own personal touches. When planning a dinner party, Ellen selects the menu and does the shopping.

Al's specialties are the main course and salad, while Ellen prepares the vegetables and dessert.

"Al's style is more exotic than mine," Ellen remarked. "He always adds some unique herbs and spices."

Ellen bakes her own bread regularly, so homemade bread or rolls are an integral part of the menu.

A dinner which has proven successful and which Al and Ellen particularly like features Chicken Breasts with Cheese and Herbs. They often work together preparing this entree, which made with skinned and deboned chicken breasts rolled up with herb-flavored butter and cheese. The Trimble's serve hearts of palm on Boston lettuce with a Green Goddess dressing for the first course. The dressing recipe was acquired from a friend in California who said it was one of her best. The Trimble's concur, since they always get compliments on it. Al prepares the well-seasoned dressing in a blender.

ANOTHER RECIPE acquired in California is Ellen's excellent broccoli souffle. She considers it one of her best recipes. Never finding any that could compare, she submitted it to her church's new cook book, "Southminster Specialties."

"It is high and light with a delicate taste that melts in your mouth," Ellen said. As with all souffles, it should be served immediately for appearance's sake, but tastes just as good after it has fallen.

As extra accompaniments, Ellen serves homemade apple sauce, spiced peaches, Sally Lunn (a Williamsburg bread) or rolls and homemade jam, and recommends a white wine with this meal. For dessert, her choice is a Raspberry Chiffon Pie, which is Al's favorite delicacy. Pink and pretty in appearance, the pie is high, light and smooth in texture.

Al's gardening hobby is an asset to the Trimble's culinary endeavors. Many of the vegetables he grows are frozen or canned by Ellen. They share an interest in collecting cookbooks, and both are active at Southminster Presbyterian Church.

Ellen also is a member of PEO and AAUW, and enjoys reading and needlework, while Al likes to play tennis for recreation. They have two daughters.

CHICKEN BREASTS WITH CHEESE AND HERBS

4 whole chicken breasts, halved, skinned and deboned

Salt
Monosodium Glutamate
1/2 cup butter
1/2 teaspoon oregano
1/2 teaspoon marjoram
1/2 pound Monterey Jack cheese
8 teaspoons chopped green onion
8 teaspoons chopped fresh parsley
2 beaten eggs
1 cup cornflake crumbs, crushed fine
1/2 cup sauterne wine

Pound the chicken breasts as thin as possible without tearing. Sprinkle each with salt and monosodium glutamate.

Whip butter, oregano and marjoram together until fluffy. Cut cheese lengthwise into 8 pieces. Spread herb butter mixture on cheese, using half of the mixture.

Place one stick of cheese on each piece of chicken breast. Sprinkle one teaspoon each of green onion and parsley over each piece of cheese. Roll up each piece of chicken, tucking in ends to seal tightly.

Dip each piece in beaten egg; roll in cornflake crumbs. Place in a buttered, flat baking dish, cover and refrigerate at least an hour or as long as overnight.

With pan covered, bake at 350 degrees for 30 minutes. Remove from oven and pour wine over chicken. Melt remaining herb-butter mixture and pour over wine. Continue baking, uncovered, basting occasionally, about one hour or until chicken is nicely browned and tender. Serves 4.

1/2 teaspoon onion juice
Dash of tabasco sauce

First make a white sauce by melting butter and blending in flour. Gradually add milk and cook, stirring constantly, until thick. Cool. When cool, blend in mayonnaise and all remaining ingredients. Pour into an oiled, 1 1/2-quart casserole or souffle dish. Bake in a pan of hot water at 350 degrees for 45 minutes to one hour, until puffed up and nicely browned on top. Serve immediately. Serves 6 to 8.

GREEN GODDESS DRESSING

1 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup sour cream
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1/2 teaspoon dry mustard
1 tablespoon anchovy paste
3 tablespoons tarragon vinegar
3 tablespoons minced green onion
1/2 cup minced parsley
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon black pepper

Mix ingredients in a blender and refrigerate. Arrange sliced hearts of palm on Boston lettuce and spoon dressing on top. Or use with a tossed green salad.

RASPBERRY CHIFFON PIE

1 9-inch baked pie shell
1 package (10 ounces) frozen raspberries, thawed
1 small package (3 ounces) raspberry gelatin
3/4 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1/2 cup whipping cream, whipped
Dash of salt
2 egg whites
1/2 cup granulated sugar

Drain raspberries and add water to syrup to make 2/3 of a cup. Dissolve gelatin in 3/4 cup boiling water. Add lemon juice and raspberry syrup. Chill until partially set. With electric mixer, beat mixture until fluffy. Fold in raspberries and whipped cream.

Add salt to egg whites and beat until soft peaks form. Add sugar gradually, beating until stiff peaks form. Fold whites into raspberry mixture. Pile into baked and cooled shell and chill until set. Garnish with whipped cream and raspberries. Serves 6.

Dachshund inspires hot dog

Our title tips you off as to what this column is all about — that delicious subject, food. None more delicious — or historic — than the hot dog. In his "Odyssey," Homer mentions it — without calling it by today's name. The hot dog, or sausage, was a staple of the Babylonians in 1500 B.C. The Romans ate red-hot dogs composed of fresh pork and white pine nuts sprinkled with cumlin seed.

The dog as we know it came into being in Frankfurt-am-Main, Germany. Reportedly, the dachshund inspired its creators to shape it. First imported to this country in 1893, frankfurters, franks, or wieners became famous at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition in St. Louis. They've never been more popular than now — we Americans eat 12 billion of them a year!

Here's a bit of news about beef. Specifically, sirloin. Did you know that in order for it to be true sirloin, it's got to have filet mignon in it? Otherwise, so some claim, it isn't worthy to be called sirloin. In fact, these same connoisseurs call it Shell Hip. Speaking of steak, many cuts got their names from the restaurants and hotels that made them famous, like Delmonico, Porterhouse, California. You say you never heard of these places? My, you are young!

Recently, we told you about the sea captain who stuck doughnuts on the spokes of his ship's wheel, and that's how the hole in the doughnut came about. Well, one reader begs to differ. He says it was the captain all right but as a young boy he punched holes the doughnuts to remove the doughy centers. Of course, you and I know it could have been the bakers who found that the cakes cooked more thoroughly with holes in them. Or it could've been some clever homemaker who first thought of the idea.

If you were a child and lived in Iceland, you could enjoy Bun Day. That's when children invade homes in the morning with colorful sticks and receive gifts of whipped cream buns. If you lived in La Perade, a French-Canadian village in Quebec, you could have fish and fun at the Tommycod Carnival. It celebrates the tasty tommycod which is caught through the ice as it swims upstream from the Atlantic Ocean to the Sainte Anne River.

Peanut butter is love. Spread some around today.

NORTHWEST HIGHWAY & 1216 BALDWIN ROAD
(COUNTRYSIDE MALL)

It's really too bad, but too many shoppers measure savings only by looking at the advertised "specials" they see in a newspaper ad! "Specials" aren't everything! They can often be confusing. They can't really give you a sample of the kind of prices you'll find throughout a store. At Eagle we don't believe in offering you just a few selected "specials." You won't find occasional or "week-end" bargains. Instead, we offer you low prices you can count on to be low whenever you shop! Low prices that are in effect throughout the store...in all departments! Low prices that can help you get more for your food dollar whenever you shop! That's the Eagle Way to savings!

THE HERALD

Lemon Squares

Lemon sets off crust

These Lemon Squares have a wonderfully refreshing filling made in a jiffy with just three ingredients. The crust is crisp and crunchy, a blend of oats, brown sugar and butter.

Measurements are given in both metric and American Standard units. Usually dry ingredients are measured in grams in the metric system. But food and utensil manufacturers have developed cups and spoons for both liquid and dry ingredients to make conversion easier for cooks.

Cooking with metrics

LEMON SQUARES

- 1 can (397 grams or 14 ounces) sweetened condensed milk
- 83 milliliters or 1/3 cup lemon juice
- 5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
- 375 milliliters (about 180 grams) or 1 1/2 cups sifted flour
- 5 milliliters or 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 2 1/2 milliliters or 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 168 milliliters or 2/3 cup butter
- 250 milliliters or 1 cup dark brown sugar
- 250 milliliters or 1 cup quick cooking oatmeal

Blend sweetened condensed milk, lemon juice and lemon rind and set aside. Sift flour, baking powder and salt. Cream butter and brown sugar well. Blend in oats and sifted ingredients. Press half of the crumbs in a well-greased 20 by 30 centimeter (8 by 12-inch) pan. Spread lemon-milk mixture over the crumb layer and cover with remaining crumbs. Pat down slightly and bake in a 180 degree Celsius (350 degree Fahrenheit) oven for 25 minutes. Cool in pan 15 minutes. Cut into bars and keep refrigerated in a covered container. Makes 24 bars.

Busy mom has limited cooking time

It was a conditioning process the end result of which was to convince the girl that her only hope of success in life was to remain invisible. No way were you going to be a commanding general, Joan of Arc notwithstanding.

I sometimes wonder if the alarming rate in juvenile delinquency among young girls is due to our unconscious effort to pass along this idea to our daughters and their effort to rebel because they can see that life just isn't like that anymore.

IT CERTAINLY ISN'T. A young girl approaching womanhood today, even if she marries, can plan on working until there are children. She might be lucky enough to stay home for 20 years taking care of them, but she is going to enter the work force again when she is about 40 and work another 20 years. She is going to need the same opportunities at good paying jobs as the men.

What's more, there is a good chance that she is going to find herself raising her children alone either through death or divorce. Today a woman in that situation who hasn't been raised to see herself as financially independent doesn't have many options. She can go home to her parents if they'll have her, she can find another man to support her, if she likes him or not, or she can live in poverty.

THE WORLD HAS CHANGED and we'd better raise our daughters to expect to take care of themselves. We might not be able to see where such things as the Equal Rights Amendment might be of benefit to us but to our daughters it literally is a matter of life and death.

It's time we started speaking out against ideas like those of Gen. Westmoreland. Especially when he complains that a woman's admission to the academy is "depriving a man of the limited spaces that are there." That is the rationale used to deprive women of admission to medical school, law school and veterinary college. It's the old prejudice against women working. The belief that whatever they do isn't going to amount to anything anyhow, so why take it seriously?

THERE IS ONE SMALL consolation in all this. The American Psychiatric Association has listed male chauvinism a certifiable psychiatric illness (caused by mothers, of course). Now at least men with opinions like those of the general will be able to go somewhere and get well.

Back to the stove, girls. All this palaver has used up time and we have to worry about what's for dinner. There is this neat thing you can do with lamb.

Get some really great ground lamb patties, like the kind you get from a butcher... about a quarter pound per serving. Sprinkle each one with about a tablespoon of soy sauce. Pierce with a fork to make sure the flavor gets inside. Then grill them over charcoal and serve in hamburger buns with lots of thinly sliced onions. It's sort of like a Greek Gyros sandwich. Delicious!

I like to serve fresh fruit along with this. Several kinds of soft summer fruit... pineapple, berries, peaches and such, can make either a salad or dessert with this pineapple dressing.

FRUIT DRESSING

- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1/4 cup sugar
- 3/4 cup pineapple juice
- 2 eggs (beaten slightly)
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch

Mix the dry ingredients. Add eggs and fruit juice. Cook about two minutes, stirring constantly, until thick. Cool. Makes about 1 cup dressing.

Mission Control — what's Mars really like?

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — The Viking 1 spacecraft is on its final approach to Mars, but to some of its "pilots" back on Earth, it may seem like the probe has already been there.

They have been using computers to simulate the crucial operations of Saturday's swing into orbit around Mars and the landing July 4. Make believe problems were deliberately introduced to complicate the action and project manager James S. Martin admits things got a little wild in the control center.

"I think we would have some difficulties if the real spacecraft were that bad off," he said.

"It so happens I believe the real spacecraft is much better off than the simulated spacecraft and therefore I look forward to an easier time."

The controllers work from a modern mixture of office buildings and campus-like groves and walkways of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory. The lab's 90-acre campus is tucked in a wooded foothills canyon below the San Gabriel Mountains.

THE MISSION, of the unmanned spacecraft, and a twin due to reach Mars in August, is by far the most ambitious yet attempted by the United States. Yet virtually every flight controlled by the engineers at the JPL has represented a step up in complexity.

JPL, with a staff of about 4,000 persons, has been in the space business since Explorer 1 soared into orbit to become America's first satellite in 1958. The JPL team has directed every U.S. planetary flight along with the unmanned moon missions that preceded Apollo astronauts.

But Viking, the first American spacecraft designed to land on Mars, requires more control center space and manpower than any previous unmanned spacecraft.

When the Viking 1 and a twin were launched from Florida a year ago, the flight control team consisted of 350 people. It now has 750 people.

Martin has been working on the project since Viking took shape on the drawing boards at Langley in 1968. Softspoken, but businesslike, Martin is where the buck stops on Viking.

"I feel very confident about the spacecraft and the flight team and the facilities, the operations here," he said in an interview in his cubicle-like office, one of many in the rabbit-warren of narrow corridors and offices surrounding mission control.

"THE THING that still gives me chills is: what is Mars really like? The lander is only 10 feet across, but we could pick a landing site that could be covered with four-foot rocks and that could do us in."

Once safely down on Mars, the life-seeking spacecraft is expected to work for a year. The craft is powered by nuclear generators and Martin said there is no reason the equipment should stop. But, again, he is worried about the unexpected.

One potential problem, he said, is the dust storms Mars has every once in a while. They sometimes last for months at a time and could bury Viking.

"We haven't been able to bring a snow fence with us," Martin said. "And we know there could be sand dunes. If they drift over the lander, that would kill it."

"We don't think that's going to happen right away. But it's that kind of unknown — really the local environment of Mars — that worries me most."

The mission control teams will be working a full Martian day — a "sol" for solar day in control center lingo — that is 37 minutes longer than an earth day.

Martin and his flight team crews will be working 12 hour days, Mars days. The shift is guided by the daylight on Mars when the lander can operate.

WHEN VIKING 1 puts down, it will be late afternoon on Mars.

Those extra 37 minutes per Mars day add up quickly. Within weeks, the mission control team, about 325 people for each shift, will be going to work at sunrise on Mars, but the middle of the night here.

The controllers work mostly in two buildings housing the laboratories and offices and mission control. In all the team needs about 50,000 square feet of space.

JPL's auditorium has been turned over to news media for the Viking landings, with desks, telephones, recording hookups and television screens. A replica of the Viking lander sits in a large sandbox to simulate what's happening 195 million miles away for the benefit of newsmen and TV cameras.

AMID DUST and fumes, trucks and bulldozers Wednesday continued excavation of the site of the Metropolitan Sanitary District's new sewage treatment plant at the southeast corner of Oakton Street and Elm-hurst Road. The project was delayed for years by court challenges by Des Plaines, but a court ruling against the city last week permitted work to go on unhampered.

Panel hears need for day care centers

The need for more licensed day care centers in Des Plaines was pointed out Wednesday night by a state official, a local organization and a crowd of parents and residents.

The group assembled at a meeting of the city council's health and welfare committee which is considering the need for more local day care facilities.

Eliot Long, president of the Parent's Council Angel Town Day Care Center, which operates facilities in Des Plaines and Rosemont, estimated that 2,000 Des Plaines children under age 6 are in need of day care, but that only about 550 attend licensed facilities.

"THERE CERTAINLY aren't enough licensed facilities available to take children to," he said. "Therefore, people go to unlicensed day care centers."

Patricia Goodman, a licensing representative, for the Illinois Dept. of Children and Family Services, said Des Plaines, like many other communities, is deficient in the number of day care centers.

"Des Plaines has five full day care centers and seven half day care centers, which isn't very much when you think of the number of children below age 5 that are in need of day care," she said.

Ann Davis of 400 W. Touhy Ave., Des Plaines, charged that Des Plaines zoning ordinances governing day care centers are too restrictive and discourage day care facilities.

"IN DES PLAINES, they're backwards," she said. "Day care centers are no longer a luxury, they're a necessity. Women have to work."

Mrs. Goodman said that while municipalities have the right to pass more stringent requirements than the state, she believes the city's square footage requirements for day care centers may be too restrictive.

Beverly Fink, president of the Des Plaines chapter of the League of Women Voters, read a statement attacking a recent decision by the city council to draft an ordinance that would require church-operated day care centers to meet the same zoning requirements as other facilities.

"By putting such limits on day care, we are cutting down on the number of such centers available to our residents and discouraging many residents from coming to Des Plaines, especially the growing number of families in which both parents are professionals," she said.

Fund use OKd for getting unit hearing facts

by JUDY JOBBITT

High School Dist. 214 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 may legally spend funds to present evidence at unit school district hearings, according to an opinion from the Illinois Office of Education.

Julia Dempsey, IOE legal advisor, said Tuesday her opinion clarifies a question concerning the use of school funds for gathering and presenting information related to a unit district petition.

She said the type of expenditures approved by the districts to date in relation to the proposed Dist. 59 area unit district are legal within her interpretation of the law.

The clarification was requested by Cook County Schools' Supt. Richard Martwick's office following an opinion from Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott on June 1.

SCOTT'S OPINION stated that a school board "may not expend school district funds to promote or oppose the formation of a unit school district."

William Wallin, chief of the opinion division in Scott's office, said Tuesday the opinion was "talking about spending funds at the referendum stage—whether a school district could campaign one way or another."

He said the opinion referred to a case in Vermillion County and states that a district cannot use school district funds to promote or oppose a unit district referendum.

Mrs. Dempsey said it is "reasonable" to expect school districts to present information at the unit district hearings that would support or oppose the petition. She said expenditures re-

City to standardize pay: Behrel

A consulting firm's recommendation that Des Plaines standardize its employee salary system is expected to be adopted by the city council, said Mayor Herbert H. Behrel.

The mayor said aldermen, polled at a recent closed-door session, indicated the city council is ready to accept the recommendations of Hay Associates, Chicago. A poll showed eight aldermen in favor of the recommendations and five opposed, Behrel said.

Formal adoption of recommendations on the city's salary scales and compensation system could come at Monday's city council meeting, the mayor said.

HAY ASSOCIATES was hired by the city last December because many aldermen said employee salaries were becoming too high and were not in line with the private sector.

Although the firm's report said city employees are paid more than 75 per cent of employees in comparable positions in other municipalities and the private sector, it also said that substantial internal salary inequities exist.

The report said that 40 of the city's 400 workers are paid annual salaries ranging between $149 and $2,425 below standards set by the consulting firm. Five employees exceed the maximum standards by $145 to $1,732 annually, while about 360 are within the firm's recommended salary ranges.

Among the under-paid employees are some policemen, clerical workers, secretaries, key punch, switchboard and communications operators, a city sanitarian, the museum director, senior citizen coordinator and public health nurse, according to the report.

THOSE OVER PAID, the report said, are the director of planning and zoning, two maintenance workers, a report review officer, a radio technician, and maintenance coordinator in the police department.

In addition to recommendations on salary scales, the consulting firm suggested the city reduce the size of longevity pay raises for its employees.

While the city apparently plans to upgrade the pay of some employees, officials said no salaries will be cut and recommendations on longevity pay raises only will apply to newly-hired employees.

The city last week hired the law firm of Seyfarth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson, Chicago, to represent the city in its contract negotiations with the unions representing the police, fire and public works unions. Officials said the professional negotiators are better equipped to help implement the recommendations of Hay Associates.

ALD. ALAN ABRAMS, 8th, who opposes some of the recommendations in the consultant's report, said he believes the city might meet opposition from employee unions when contract negotiations resume.

"To allocate the funds necessary to eliminate some of the salary inequities will reduce the overall pay raises to other city employees as a whole," he said. "I think that might be a cause of some concern or displeasure to the unions."

He said he thinks the city council should take "a little closer look" at the recommendations before accepting them.

Martin Schaefer, city personnel director, said it will cost the city about $50,000 a year to adjust salaries of employees below Hay Associates minimum standards, but that he has not determined the cost of implementing the firm's recommendations on longevity, cost of living and merit pay increases.

In addition to the recommendations on salaries, the firm has prepared a report on the city's staffing needs. The report will be reviewed by city officials at a closed-door session tonight.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thou-

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a duce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said.

"It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to count money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff-

40 Dist. 59 teachers may get jobs back

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will be able to rehire 40 of the 54 first-year teachers released in March because of budget cuts.

The school board Monday will decide on rehiring 40 of the released teachers to replace tenured teachers who have resigned from the district.

Al Stone, associate superintendent, said Wednesday he anticipates the remaining first-year teachers who were released also will be rehired before fall.

"As resignations come in, I feel I'll be able to fulfill my statement that those who want to come back will be able to," he said.

Stone said the attrition rate of tenured teachers has been "about normal." Usually the district loses between 70 and 80 teachers each year through attrition.

The first-year teachers were released as part of budget cutbacks approved by the board that totaled more than $754,000 for the 1976-77 school year. Included in the budget cuts were 30 teaching positions.

By law the board was required to notify any teacher not receiving a contract for the 1976-77 school year within 60 days of the end of the 1975-76 school year.

The released teachers were given the first consideration for positions that opened up for this fall.

Funds OKd for unit hearing facts

lated to presenting the information would be appropriate.

MRS. DEMPSEY SAID it is "unreasonable" to demand a school district to present evidence without taking a stand on the issue. "If no one from the school district would be allowed to expand funds to present their side, it would be one sided," she said.

Mrs. Dempsey said she believes Scott was "addressing the specific question of influencing the voters" when the issue reached the referendum stage.

She said a school board "almost has a duty to present evidence" at the hearings so all sides can be heard.

She referred to a section in the Illinois School Code that sets the requirements for the unit district petition process. She said for affected school districts to have a "role at a hearing held on a petition proposing formation of a community unit school district" as authorized in the statutes and "to fulfill that role, school district funds may be expended. This has been the long standing practice in Illinois and is the only sensible reading of the statutes."

DIST. 59 SPENT $5,500 to hire a consultant to update information on a unit district for the elementary district's area. The original study conducted in 1973 cost between $18,000 and $20,000 and was used as the base for this year's study.

DIST. 59 also has hired the law firm of Reid, Ochenschlager, Murphy and Hupp for advice on the hearing procedures that will begin July 8.

DIST. 214 has retained the law firm of Fawell, James and Brooks for advice in opposing the unit district. The board has paid the firm $6,525 said Robert Weber, associate superintendent for business services.

The high school district also hired a court reporter to make transcripts of all unit district study committee meetings and published a special edition of the district's newsletter in March urging the community to oppose the unit district.

THE DIST. 214 board has voted to oppose the unit district. DIST. 59 has not taken formal action to oppose or support the unit district but two board members are on a committee of 10 residents who filed the unit district petitions with the county office.

Mrs. Dempsey said she does not believe any of the districts' expenditures are improper because they were not taken in relation to a specific referendum before the voters.

"I don't see any impropriety at all. It's too far removed from the opportunity to influence the voters," she said.

Before the issue can come before the voters, hearings must be set in which evidence will be presented on the issue. The county superintendent will make a recommendation to the state schools' superintendent who will review the material presented and decide whether a referendum will be held.

Yesterday he was five. Today he called the operator.

We're all so used to having telephones around we've forgotten how baffling they seem to little children.

But most children can learn how to call the operator in an emergency when they're about five years old. It just takes a little patience. And four simple steps:

- 1. Show your child how to listen for the dial tone.
- 2. Then show him how to dial "O" by bringing the finger all the way around to the finger stop. (If it's a Touch Call phone, show him which button to push.)
- 3. Show him how to release his finger from the dial (or the push button.)
- 4. Then have him learn to tell the operator who he is, where he is, and why he needs help.

With a little practice, your child can probably be a whiz in hardly any time at all.

All of us at the telephone company hope your child will never have to report an emergency.

But if he ever does, our operator will know what to do. That's part of our service.

200 attend funeral for slain mom

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father

ANDERSON SPEAKS to one of his daughters as his son-in-law, Kevin O'Hara, looks on.

ther Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Five buildings cited for violations

by LINDA PUNCH
Wheeling officials are issuing citations to the owner of five buildings in the Wildwood apartment complex for violations of the health, safety and fire codes.

Four village inspectors Tuesday toured buildings at 160, 162, 164, 185, and 191 Wildwood Lane after receiving complaints from the owner of other buildings in the 12-building complex of violations. The inspectors cited safety and health violations in each structure.

Joseph Mangan, general inspector, said village officials repeatedly have attempted to contact Irving Pearlman, owner of the buildings, without success.

Jane Terbell, village health inspector, said she has written letters to the owner with no results.

"WE'VE HAD THIS problem for many, many years," she said.

Violations cited by the inspectors include collapsed sidewalks, debris and garbage in the basement and parking lots, torn screens, broken tile in hallways, broken railings on stairways and stagnant water in broken washing machines.

Mangan said he will order a general clean-up of the buildings and their exteriors, including repair of sidewalks.

Dona Nicklas, village code enforcement officer, said the apartment owner can be fined from $5 to $500 for each violation. Village officials said violations must be corrected by July 2. A Wheeling housing code also provides for condemnation of any structures unsafe for human habitation.

One building had garbage backed up in a chute up to the second floor. The basement contained rotting garbage because of the clogged chutes. Residents also complained of roaches and rats.

A RESIDENT OF the building said she tries to clean up stairways and hallways but "I can't do it by myself." She placed a sign in the downstairs hallway asking residents to stack garbage, but she said other residents ignored the plea.

In another building, Fire Inspector Lloyd Kelm discovered a power lawn trimmer with a tank filled with gasoline stored under a stairway. A basement storage area was piled high with cardboard boxes and other flammable material.

"They've had about three fires at this complex over a period of years.

We had the state fire marshal out on the last one but he never was able to determine the exact cause," Kelm said.

IN ONE APARTMENT, Mangan discovered a furnace vent clogged with dirt and dust. The tenant said the apartment management had not checked the furnace in more than a year.

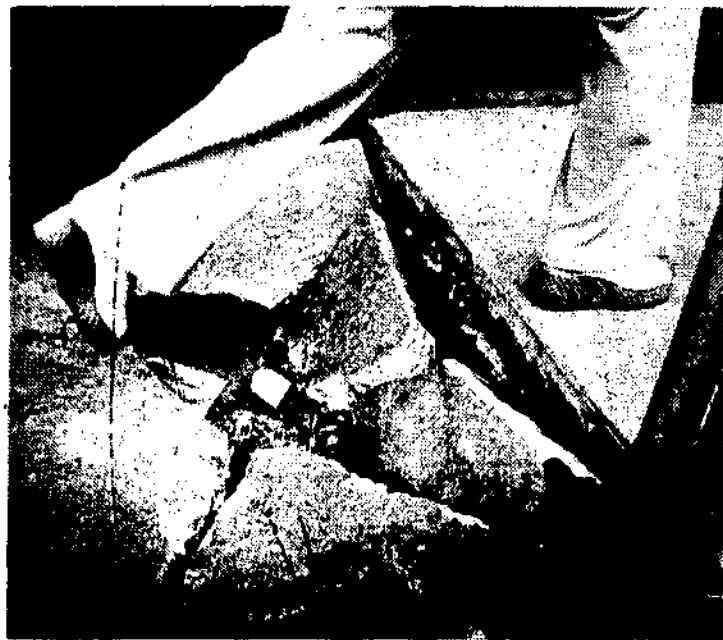

"It's this type of heating unit that was the cause of the last fire," Mangan said.

Another tenant said rents in the buildings range from $225 to $255 a month. "We hope somebody can do something about this. We complain and complain and nothing happens," she said.

Pearlman could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Joseph Mangan notes violations.

Spokesman says:

Funding for bus system won't be cut out by RTA

by LINDA PUNCH

The Regional Transportation Authority will continue to fund the Wheeling bus system "as long as we fund any operations," Ed Bailey, an RTA spokesman said Wednesday.

Bailey told more than 40 residents and village officials attending a hearing on the bus system that the RTA "doesn't want to take away minimum bus service" from Wheeling and is seeking ways to improve service for residents.

He said the RTA will fund 100 per cent of the deficit only if the Wheeling system meets RTA standards.

"You are not meeting that standard now, but we will continue to fund the system at a proportionate rate," he said.

HAZEL STEINKE, 100 Debra Ln., said bus routes now are an inconvenience for senior citizens.

"The bus doesn't go directly anywhere. The way it is now, we have to transfer three or four times. These people can't get up and down buses like that. Wait till you're 65 and you'll understand."

Mrs. Steinke said bus schedules for routes to the Chicago loop also are inconvenient for senior citizens.

"It's very poor timing for retired people. We have to get up in the middle of the night to catch the bus, and then we're subjected to staying downtown 10 or 12 hours to catch a bus home," she said.

Mrs. Steinke also said that "you almost have to have a degree in transportation to figure out the schedule. People are having trouble reading them."

ALLEN E. POLLACK, 1642 Tahoe Circle, Dr., said commuter routes to the Northbrook station should be "streamlined. I find it very inconvenient to take the bus. I get up one-half hour earlier to catch the bus and end up taking a later train."

Trustee Otis L. Hedlund said there "is a need for more transportation into and out of the village."

"We do have a need for more intercity transportation between here and Randhurst Shopping Center in Mount Prospect, Lutheran General Hospital, Des Plaines and other area centers where people need to go for medical attention and shopping," he said.

Bailey said RTA officials recognize the need for such service and have proposed a route on Dundee Road from Glencoe to Palatine.

"WE'RE WAITING for passage of the 1977 budget and eventual implementation of the plan," he said.

Trustee Charles Kerr said he is "satisfied the bus system isn't ever going to be a paying proposition."

"The only way we can have service is for us to subsidize it. We have to decide how much we can afford," he said.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

Gifted child education delayed

A decision on providing education for gifted children in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 was delayed Wednesday night by the board of education until the Illinois General Assembly decides what funds will be allotted for gifted programs.

The board discussed five possible programs presented to them last week by Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern. The board had asked for gifted program alternatives after members were told that many of the teachers trained in gifted education had left the district.

All the programs provide some kind of training for "our major resource, which is the classroom teacher,"

McGovern said.

"THERE IS a tendency to think of a gifted program as something isolated from the school," McGovern said. "When a district employs a specialized teacher for the gifted, classroom teachers tend to be less aware of a gifted child's needs," he said.

McGovern said the district now "covers the waterfront very well" in some areas of gifted education, but suggested a gifted program next year concentrate on intermediate grade children and intellectually gifted children.

Because several of the programs in-

Like it or not, $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a duce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

Plan unit to consider zone change

The Wheeling Plan Commission will conduct public hearings tonight on rezoning four parcels to bring them in compliance with the village's master plan.

The hearings will be held at 8:30 p.m. at the Wheeling Village Hall, 255 W. Dundee Rd.

The plan commission agreed last month to hold the hearings after learning that the current zoning for the parcel is in conflict with a master plan approved earlier this year by the village board. The plan governs the village's future residential, commercial and industrial growth.

The largest parcel is 40 acres on the east side of Wheeling Road south of the St. Alphonsus Church. The village is requesting it be rezoned from multi-family to single-family residential.

Three other smaller parcels proposed for rezoning are: a lot on the east side of Buffalo Grove Road, north of Tahoe Village townhouses, from general business to multi-family; a lot on the north side of Dundee Road, west of 12th Street, from industrial to office use; and a lot at 370 W. Dundee Rd., from general business to office use.

Man, 19, hit by auto, reported critical

A 19-year-old Wheeling man remained in critical condition Wednesday night after he was struck by a car Wednesday morning at the intersection of Milwaukee Avenue and Strong Street in Wheeling.

Wheeling Police Chief M.O. Horcher said William Walker, 129 Coral St., was taken to Evanston Hospital with head and internal injuries. The driver of the car, Kenneth Grutza, 47, of Northbrook, reported Walker "suddenly appeared" in the middle of the street about 1:35 a.m., Horcher said.

Police said the investigation still is continuing and no charges have been filed.

Dist. 23 delays decision for gifted education

volve some type of reimbursement from the state, the board decided to delay its decision on the programs until the state legislature determines what state aid will be provided for gifted programs for the next school year.

The state will decide on its allotment in late July or early August, McGovern said.

McGOVERN SAID that when the state runs low on money, gifted education is the first to be cutback.

"Part of the problem is that parents of gifted children haven't organized to pressure the legislature the way parents of other children have," he said.

Board member Vincent Battaglia said he feels "we have to do something in the gifted area, but considering the financial condition of the district, I don't think we can do anything but wait for the state."

McGovern said some of the programs can be implemented with very few of the district's funds and that it will be possible to combine some of the programs to come up with a viable gifted program.

Leo Anderson, recovering from gunshot wounds, is wheeled from church following his wife's funeral.

by JOHN N. FRANK
St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church. Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended. Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother. Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love." Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Dangerous cargo law put off until January

by JOE SWICKARD

Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing."

HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centreveille and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

"We literally do not know what toxic substances are manufactured, stored, used or moved throughout the state. We do not even require that emergency contingency plans be prepared by those who store or ship hazardous materials," Briceland said.

Urging the increased controls, he said, "Most of all, we need to take steps to prevent future . . . incidents . . . It would be tragic indeed if some catastrophic accident must occur before we recognize the full magnitude of the hazardous materials danger in Illinois."

Regner said one major problem that must be overcome in the legislation is the federal preemption in governing interstate shipments by rails. He said finding a means of overcoming this "conflict" is one reason for the delay.

REGNER SAID another problem to be overcome is the lack of awareness of the problem by public officials and the citizens.

The long look down Navy Pier leads to an impressive view of Chicago's skyline.

P(i)ering at skyline from historic vantage point

by KURT BAER

Visitors to Chicago this summer will not need a boat for an off-shore view of the city's spectacular skyline, thanks to the renovation and reopening of the 660-foot-long Navy Pier. The city has spent six months and $7 million remodeling the five-eighths mile pier at Ohio Street and the lake. A promenade has been constructed along the north side for a walk or bicycle ride out to the end of the pier where three buildings have been restored to their pre-World War I condition.

The main objective has been to fix up the 60-year-old pier as a recreational facility, said Jerome Butler, architect for the city of Chicago.

"THEIR PRIMARY activity has been to get the pier once again usable so people can get out on it. For the past several years it has been accessible only from a second-floor walkway on the dock side where people could see the ships.

"From the far east end, the view of the skyline is really spectacular," Butler said.

Navy Pier reopens next month as the site for the Chicago International Trade Exposition, July 1-18, sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry.

On the event of the trade show opening, June 30, the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation will sponsor a benefit ball inaugurating the glass-walled auditorium at the eastern tip of the pier.

"WE'VE MADE AN honest attempt to restore the buildings. We've re-installed the original streetlights and gone to great lengths to match the existing building materials," Butler said.

Old-fashioned trolley cars will run along the north side of the pier for persons who do not want to walk or bike the distance.

A floating stage is being constructed on a barge south of the pier with grandstand seats positioned on the south deck.

There are plans for a restaurant on the second floor of one of the buildings with a sheltered picnic area below.

During the International Trade Fair acarnival will be in operation.

"THIS IS BY NO means the complete restoration of the entire pier. It still requires upgrading of the exhibition halls (west of the auditorium)," Butler said.

Navy Pier was built in 1916 at a cost of $4.5 million. It was part of a 1912 master plan that called for five piers to make Chicago an inland port and to divert water from the Chicago River.

At the time it opened, it was the largest structure of its kind in the world.

Navy Pier's golden age ran from 1918 to 1930 when excursion boats, ferris wheels, penny arcades and dancing in the auditorium made the facility one of the city's best known attractions.

DURING WORLD WAR II, the pier was base for a series of Navy training schools that educated some 60,000 recruits from 1941-46.

In the 1950s, pier buildings functioned as the two-year campus of the Chicago undergraduate division of the University of Illinois.

Shipping activity at Navy Pier declined in recent years. Windows in the buildings were broken and the environment was generally inhospitable to visitors.

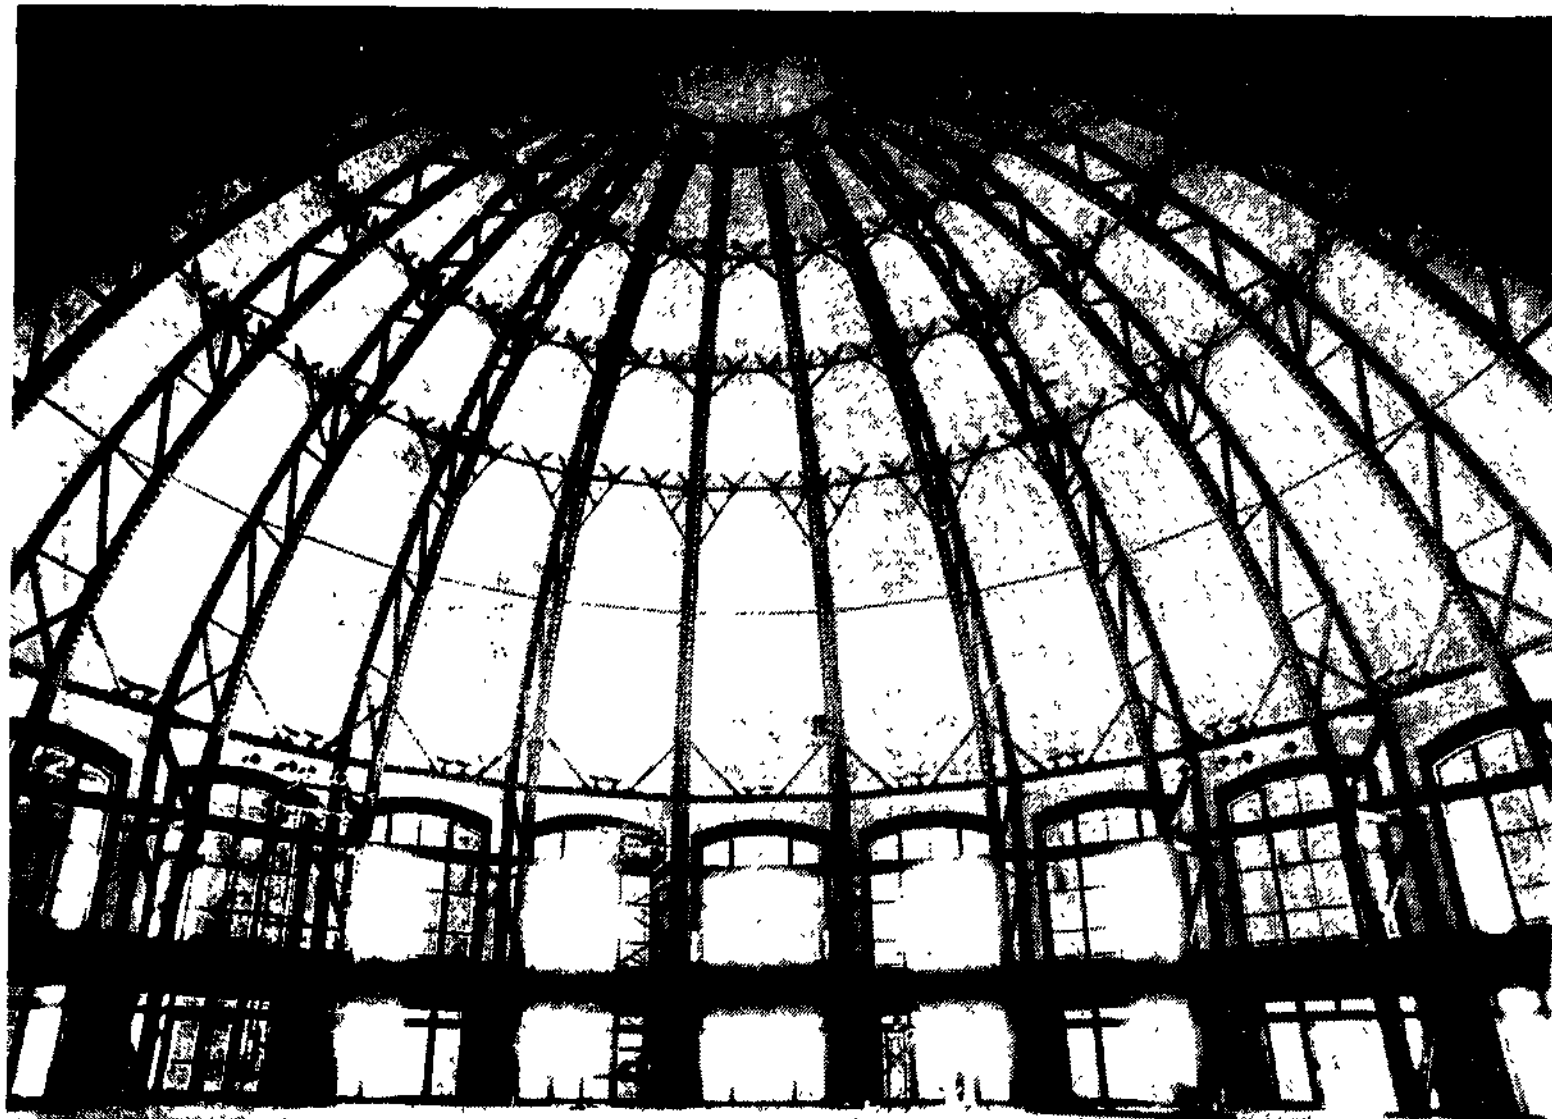

Shipping will go on at Navy Pier, principally along the west half of the south dock. There are also plans to relocate the Naval armory on the pier.

Butler calls Navy Pier "Chicago's answer to Boardwalk in Atlantic City." During the Bicentennial year he said he expects it to be the scene of numerous shows and special programs.

New trees and old-fashioned streetlights dress up the walk.

Strathmore rift may put village in park business

by BILL HURLEY

The Village of Buffalo Grove may soon be in the park business, a result of a dispute with the park district over a site in the Strathmore Grove subdivision.

Village Trustee Clarice Rech said Wednesday a 3.4-acre site in the Strathmore Grove subdivision should be developed and maintained by the village as a park without recreation facilities. Rech and other trustees have expressed dissatisfaction with park district policies on acquiring the site.

"I've just had it," Rech said. "I've been doing the same song and dance with the park district for five years. I'm not going to play their games any more."

PARK DISTRICT officials have said they will not accept the Strathmore Grove site until it is made into more usable land.

"We always want property, but our problem is we need good land," said Dede Armstrong, park district board president. "We can't continue to accept craters."

The land, located at the entrance to the subdivision just off Arlington Heights Road, southeast of Thompson Boulevard, is partially a swamp area and retention basin and must be filled in, graded and seeded before it can be used as a park.

THE SITE IS being donated to the village as part of an agreement allowing Levitt & Sons Inc. to build nearby. Levitt is required to do the original construction work on the land.

The village often turns donated park land over to the park district to develop and maintain. The park district can accept or reject the land.

The village has not accepted the deed for the land, but Arnold Seaberg, village engineer, said Levitt has agreed to begin site construction this summer and should be finished several weeks later.

One reason the park district will not accept the land is officials were told it would not be usable as a park for three years, said Stanley Crosland, parks director.

Crosland said he was told by Levitt representatives that the land would continue to settle and need to be regraded. Seaberg agreed that could happen but said the land could be used for a park in the meantime.

RECH SAID SHE thought the village could develop a usable park on the land much sooner.

"I consider it very doubtful that it would take the village three years," she said.

Rech said the village should develop and maintain the site with village funds and a donation by Levitt.

"Once we've done all the work, I don't see the need to turn it over to the park district," she said. "They want it all fixed and all developed and then, after all the work is done, they'll accept it as a park site."

ARMSTRONG SAID the park district does not have the machinery to develop the site properly and could not accept it until all the settling was completed.

"I'm getting very peeved," Rech

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zobeir Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said. "It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff.

Toxic cargo law put off till January

by JOE SWICKARD

Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing."

HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centreville and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

"We literally do not know what toxic substances are manufactured, stored, used or moved throughout the state. We do not even require that emergency contingency plans be prepared by those who store or ship hazardous materials," Briceland said.

Urging the increased controls, he said, "Most of all, we need to take steps to prevent future . . . incidents . . . It would be tragic indeed if some catastrophic accident must occur before we recognize the full magnitude of the hazardous materials danger in Illinois."

Regner said one major problem that must be overcome in the legislation is the federal preemption in governing interstate shipments by rails. He said finding a means of overcoming this "conflict" is one reason for the delay.

REGNER SAID another problem to be overcome is the lack of awareness of the problem by public officials and the citizens.

"We need education on both sides. As far as public response goes, there hasn't been much," he said.

"I feel certain that something will pass" in the next session Regner said.

"It may be a weak piece at first, but I hope not," he said, adding that once legislation is on the books it can be strengthened later.

Rift may put village in park business

said. "The park district expects that when they get some land, there won't be anything wrong with it. That's just not realistic."

Rehe said if the park district maintains its policies on site acquisition, the village might purchase and keep more parks in the future.

"The village just may decide if we get a really good site, we might keep it," she said. "If we get into the park business, just maybe we'll do it and do it well."

Hands capture winter Olympics

by DIANE MERRIGAS

Artist William Nelson used his hands, and not the convenient lens of a camera, to capture the triumphant and agonizing moments of the recent winter Olympic games.

Preliminary sketches, water color paintings and the final lithographic portraits of athletes in action line walls and worktables in his Prospect Heights home.

There, gold medalists like speed skater Sheila Young and downhill skier Franz Klammer have been immortalized by the human hand.

The faces conveying zeal and a desperate longing to win; the strained but disciplined body movements have been given a lasting place in time on canvas.

THEY ARE THE WORK of the first official artist to be designated by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The title gives Nelson authority to take his place near Olympic contestants, both in the winter and summer events this year, to get an unobstructed look at what goes on.

His footing was precarious on the slopes of icy mountains while he feverishly sketched the slalom, jumping and downhill racing events in Salzburg, Austria.

The frenzy of arena crowds encompassed him as he drew the graceful and flowing motions of ice dancers

NELSON HAS BEEN working on a series of six lithographs portraying Olympic action since the winter events ended in February.

The lithographs also will include the 90-meter jump, the bobsled run and the United States-Soviet Union hockey games.

The lithographs will be sold as a limited collection.

Nelson regards his status as the official Olympic artist as "an honor," but takes his recently acclaimed fame "in stride," he said.

"Jean (his wife) and I have wonderful memories of the winter Olympic events and are looking forward to the summer games," he said.

"IT'S BEEN A LOT of hard work but a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Nelson, who four years ago began his career as a free-lance artist by giving up his job as a newspaper illustrator.

Several years later he completed his first set of lithographs which began paving the way for his success.

The 10 pictures depicted scenes from the nearly extinct sun dance ceremony of the Oglala Sioux Indians of South Dakota; and a blood-letting rite for young warriors that persons outside of the tribe are barred from seeing.

The only artistic rendering of the sacred ceremony has since found a permanent place in the Smithsonian Institution and private collections.

Nelson has received thanks for the work from the Senate and House Indian Affairs Committee in Washington and members of the Oglala tribe.

ONE OF THE FEW available sets of the lithographs has been given a place of honor in the Prospect Heights Public Library as a Bicentennial purchase for the newly incorporated city.

"I don't feel any different since all of this has happened," Nelson said, "There's still a lot to be done."

Nelson occasionally sets up his easel and paint board in the middle of a snowy field near his home or at the base of a broken and abandoned farm house, enhanced by the golden sunlight of an autumn day.

"I love to work outdoors because the elements are all around me. Whether it's a few berries hanging from a branch or trees in a field," he said.

NELSON SAYS HE has a "constant awareness of colors and light, the reactions and emotions of people."

"A lot of what I feel comes out in my work," he said.

Even his rigorous schedule, in attempt to complete the Olympic lithographs, lends Nelson enough quiet moments in a day to be playfully creative.

"And I'll just keep doing my work

Dealership rezone rejected by planners

A request for rezoning of a parcel of land to permit expansion of the Grand Spaulding Dodge dealership was unanimously rejected Wednesday by the Buffalo Grove Plan Commission.

The proposal now goes to the village board for consideration June 28.

Opponents of the request, including several area homeowners, said a rezoning would increase traffic on Dundee Road, reduce property values and cause a further influx of business development, which could lead to the deterioration of the residential neighborhood.

COMR. HOWARD Mendenhall said he opposed the request because it did not conform with the village master plan and would be unfair to homeowners who moved into the area with the understanding such commercial developments would be limited.

"If we put one more development on Dundee Road against the master plan, how can we logically say to the fellow across the street, 'we cannot give you commercial zoning,'" Mendenhall said.

COMR. Rodney Jacobs said Grand Spaulding had not submitted adequate plans for future development.

"I have never been in favor of rezoning property without specific development plans," he said. "What you might do and what we might end up with can be as far apart as the Sears Tower and McDonald's."

Mendenhall also said he thought future plans were not specific enough.

"ONCE WE REZONE this, we have virtually no control. That's our real fear," he said.

Dist. 214 wrapup

Attendance area change approved

A change in high school attendance boundaries for a small area of Buffalo Grove has been approved by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Students from the area bounded on the east by Buffalo Grove Road, on the north by Dundee Road, on the west by Three States Boulevard and on the south by University Drive, now attend Wheeling High School. Monday, however, the board agreed to place the area within the Buffalo Grove High School attendance boundary.

Students from the area now attending Wheeling High School will be allowed to continue at the school if they wish. Students who will be freshmen next fall also will be allowed to attend Wheeling High. Other area students who wish to attend Wheeling High must seek approval of the administration. About 20 high school students now live in the area with four to six students at each grade level.

The change is the result of the completion of Buffalo Grove Road and the decision by Wheeling-Buffer Grove Dist. 21 earlier this year to reassign students in the area from London Junior High School to Cooper Junior High School. Dist. 214 in the past has attempted to adjust boundaries so that students from one junior high school attend the same area high school.

5% pay hike for aides OK'd

Administrators in High School Dist. 214 will receive an average raise in salary of about 5 per cent for the 1976-77 school year. The board of education Monday approved the distribution of about $150,000 among the district's 109 administrators. The distribution of the monies is based on merit and position on the salary scale in the six administrative categories. The average raise will be about 5 per cent.

Two firms franchised

No local cabs operating despite hike in licenses

No locally licensed taxi cabs are operating in Elk Grove Village, despite the village's decision in April to increase the number of taxi licenses from five to 20, a village official said Wednesday.

Deputy Village Clerk Fay Bishop said Elk Grove Village Cab Co., which was operating three licensed cabs last winter, has not applied for licenses in the 1976-77 licensing period, which began June 1.

The other franchised taxi company, T & D Cab Service of Elk Grove Village, has applied for five licenses but none have been issued.

T & D Pres. Charles Elisco said Wednesday the five cabs all have passed village inspection. He said two minor matters — how the village wants the fare meters sealed and the drivers licensed — remain to be worked out at Tuesday's village board meeting before the cabs will be in operation.

Elisco said if the drivers are not village residents, they must obtain reference letters from two village residents.

Village regulation, however, does not affect taxi companies headquartered outside the village, or taxi rides that either start or end outside the village.

BOTH T & D and Elk Grove Village Cab were given the opportunity to obtain as many as 10 taxi licenses each.

Robert Birks, president of Elk Grove Village Cab, could not be reached for comment Wednesday. Last April, however, he said he had no immediate plans to have more than five cabs operating in the village.

A spokesman at Birks' firm expressed surprise at the village's statement that no licenses had been issued. "We just got new licenses," he said. However, those "new" licenses apparently were bought before June 1 and were good for the past licensing period only.

There was disagreement among the village trustees during the recent discussions on how many taxi licenses to permit in the village. The discussions began last December when Elisco and Parkside Cab Co., which did not pursue a license application, applied for franchises.

Immunity offer made to friend of Pat Columbo

Prosecutors in the Columbo family murder case have offered a written guarantee of immunity from prosecution in return for testimony from a friend of Patricia Columbo, who is charged with the slayings.

A letter signed by Gino L. DiVito, chief of the criminal division in Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office, offers Lanyon Mitchell, 24, of Lake Villa, immunity if he testifies against Miss Columbo, who is accused of the May 4 murders of her parents and younger brother in Elk Grove Village.

The letter extends immunity on the condition that no evidence is found linking Mitchell directly to the killings.

HOWEVER, WILLIAM Murphy, public defender for Miss Columbo, said Wednesday he believes a deal for immunity was made between Mitchell and prosecutors when Mitchell first was questioned by police about the killings at 55 E. Brantwood Dr.

Mitchell was picked up for questioning May 14. Miss Columbo was arrested in west suburban Lombard the following morning.

Mitchell reportedly told investigators he had been approached by Miss Columbo earlier this year and asked to aid in planning the murders. Police have said Mitchell backed out of the plot before the slayings. Murphy said Mitchell has not been given true immunity, which is granted by the chief judge in Cook County Circuit Court.

"IT'S LIKE A contract," Murphy said. "It's an offer to testify, and they won't prosecute him. I've heard it referred to as 'letter immunity.'"

Murphy said he did not know whether release of the letter violates a May 25 court order prohibiting out-of-court statements by prosecutors and police that might prejudice Miss Columbo's trial.

When contacted Wednesday afternoon, Richard Thomas, counsel for Mitchell, denied knowledge of the letter's release Tuesday. He said he had not spoken to reporters concerning his client's reported immunity deal.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

Seltzer resigns post as aide in Dist. 54

Carl Seltzer, assistant superintendent for curriculum, has submitted his resignation to the Schaumburg Township Dist. 54 Board of Education.

Seltzer said he has accepted a position as national manager for the educational division of A. Daigger, Inc., Chicago.

Seltzer said he will be based in Chicago but will spend a great deal of his time traveling. "My territory is the U.S.," he said.

Part of the duties of the division he will head will be to conduct seminars for business and industry, he said. He believes one of his first projects will concern teaching the metric system to employees of large firms.

Seltzer has been with Dist. 54 for eight years, four of them as a math consultant and four as assistant superintendent for curriculum. Prior to coming to the district, he was a math teacher in St. Louis.

His resignation is effective July 1.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a duce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the gener-

Today

al public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said.

"It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff-

Dist. 214 wrapup

Attendance area change approved

A change in high school attendance boundaries for a small area of Buffalo Grove has been approved by the High School Dist. 214 Board of Education.

Students from the area bounded on the east by Buffalo Grove Road, on the north by Dundee Road, on the west by Three States Boulevard and on the south by University Drive, now attend Wheeling High School. Monday, however, the board agreed to place the area within the Buffalo Grove High School attendance boundary.

Students from the area now attending Wheeling High School will be allowed to continue at the school if they wish. Students who will be freshmen next fall also will be allowed to attend Wheeling High. Other area students who wish to attend Wheeling High must seek approval of the administration. About 20 high school students now live in the area with four to six students at each grade level.

The change is the result of the completion of Buffalo Grove Road and the decision by Wheeling-Buffalo Grove Dist. 21 earlier this year to reassign students in the area from London Junior High School to Cooper Junior High School. Dist. 214 in the past has attempted to adjust boundaries so that students from one junior high school attend the same area high school.

5% pay hike for aides OK'd

Administrators in High School Dist. 214 will receive an average raise in salary of about 5 per cent for the 1976-77 school year. The board of education Monday approved the distribution of about $150,000 among the district's 109 administrators. The distribution of the monies is based on merit and position on the salary scale in the six administrative categories. The average raise will be about 5 per cent.

Frosh must have physicals

No freshmen will be allowed to attend classes in Dist. 214 next fall without a physical examination and necessary immunizations. Students must meet the health requirements at the time of registration for classes. Registration begins the week of Aug. 16.

2 teachers cited for work by Jaycees

The Elk Grove Village Jaycees have selected Janine Ratcliffe and Thomas R. Heckenbach as outstanding young educators this year.

Ratcliffe is a fifth-grade teacher at Salt Creek School and Heckenbach is a shop and Latin teacher at Elk Grove High School.

Both will be honored at the Jaycees' Annual Awards Banquet June 25 at Mr. Duke's Restaurant, Wood Dale.

Leo Anderson, recovering from gunshot wounds, is wheeled from church following his wife's funeral.

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Cop's shooting of youth hearing resumes Friday

The long-delayed hearing in the case of an Elk Grove Village policeman sued in connection with the shooting April 5, 1975 of a Mount Prospect youth will resume Friday.

Village Atty. Edward C. Hofert said further legal arguments are expected during the 2 p.m. hearing before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg in Chicago's Civic Center.

Patrolman William Jaworski allegedly shot Timothy Engelson, 19, of 308 Hi-Lust Ave., Mount Prospect, during a scuffle while Jaworski was investigating a traffic accident. Engelson is suing Jaworski for $1 million in damages.

Jaworski has been drawing $1,328 a month pay although he has been relieved of duty while the incident is under investigation by Hofert. Hofert's investigation, which is to determine whether Jaworski should be reinstated or charged with violating department rules, has been hampered by Engelson's $1 million civil suit which charges Jaworski with battery, negligence and willful and wanton misconduct.

Hofert has said the village wants to be "perfectly satisfied" before returning Jaworski to active duty.

Engelson was shot in the stomach during the predawn incident.

40 Dist. 59 teachers may get jobs back

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will be able to rehire 40 of the 54 first-year teachers released in March because of budget cuts.

The school board Monday will decide on rehiring 40 of the released teachers to replace tenured teachers who have resigned from the district.

Al Stone, associate superintendent, said Wednesday he anticipates the remaining first-year teachers who were released also will be rehired before fall.

"As resignations come in, I feel I'll be able to fulfill my statement that those who want to come back will be able to," he said.

Stone said the attrition rate of tenured teachers has been "about normal." Usually the district loses between 70 and 80 teachers each year through attrition.

The first-year teachers were released as part of budget cutbacks approved by the board that totaled more than $754,000 for the 1976-77 school year. Included in the budget cuts were 30 teaching positions.

By law the board was required to notify any teacher not receiving a contract for the 1976-77 school year within 60 days of the end of the 1975-76 school year.

The released teachers were given the first consideration for positions that opened up for this fall.

By taxi operator

Cab subsidy urged instead of bus plan

A Schaumburg taxi operator Wednesday night proposed a direct subsidy system for taxi service in the area as an alternative to the proposed subscription and dial-a-ride bus system being considered by the panel.

The committee members postponed discussion of the bus transportation system after Gerry Mandel of the Schaumburg Cab Co. suggested an area transportation system include a subsidized cab system.

The committee has been considering a proposal by Jack E. Leisch and Associates of Evanston which calls for the village to initiate trial bus service in the village by purchasing 11 vehicles with federal, state and local funding.

UNDER THE PROPOSED bus system, vehicles would be leased to a private transportation company to operate commuter service during rush hours and for general use the rest of the day.

Representatives from three taxi companies and Walter Fiene, operator of the Schaumburg Transportation Co. which operates subscription bus service between the village and the Roselle Milwaukee Road commuter station, attended the meeting.

Mandel repeatedly said to operate the Leisch system would require major changes in the way his cab companies did business.

He said the major stumbling block would be the matter of hiring bus drivers as employees rather than the shared fare system the company now uses with its drivers. He said the new employee system would force his company to pay additional amounts of money in such items as social security and workmen's compensation.

HE ALSO CRITICIZED the proposed method of awarding the license to operate the dial-a-bus system. "As soon as the first dollar is taken away from me by taking away a customer, I'm going to scream and try to stop you any way I can. Let's talk about an equitable plan," he said.

This would be avoided, he added, if the village would use any grant money to make up the difference between the amount of fare paid by a customer and the actual fare on the meter. In this way, Mandel said, all companies could equally share in the proposal while the public still would be served.

Paid lunch, teachers' pact Dist. 54 topics

A parent-paid lunch program and ratification of a tentative teachers' contract are on the agenda for Schaumburg Township Dist. 54's meeting at 8 p.m. today.

The board will act on a proposal to extend the lunch period in the district to one hour and charge parents who wish their children to remain at school for lunch $35 per child.

Parents whose children are required to be bused to school would not be charged the fee.

THE BOARD decided last month to have parents pay for the cost of supervising their children at lunch, a move which is estimated will save the district $75,000.

The board will decide whether to approve a teacher-contract agreement reached last week by the board and union negotiating teams.

The union voted last Friday 583 to 37 to accept the contract, which would raise the base pay of a beginning teacher from $9,450 to $9,850 and give teachers an average 7.9 per cent pay increase. The contract would take effect in September.

The meeting will be held at Keller Junior High School, 820 Bode Rd., Schaumburg.

Police arrest pair for CB shoplifting

Police Wednesday arrested two Chicago men for allegedly shoplifting Citizens' Band radios valued at $260 from the Playback store in Schaumburg.

Police said Fred A. Reid, 27, and Phillip E. Jackson, 28, were arrested at 1 p.m. at the store, 1101 E. Golf Rd. A store employee reportedly saw one of the men carry a radio out under his coat while his companion talked with a sales clerk.

Police reportedly found in Reid's car two CB radios taken from the store.

Reid and Jackson were charged with possession of stolen property. Reid also was charged with unlawful use of weapons, police said, because a canister of tear gas was found in his car.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his embassy counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 58, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

Hoffman Estates officials say reports of electrical problems in the Winston Knolls subdivision never have been presented to the village despite charges by one resident that 300 homes in the subdivision have faulty electrical wiring.

William Goetz, 145 Patriot Ln., has filed a lawsuit in Cook County Circuit Court alleging that nearly half the 750 homes in the subdivision north of the Northwest Tollway have been damaged because of inferior wiring.

Village Pres. Virginia Hayter and Deputy Fire Chief Edward Kalasa said Tuesday village records show no reports of electrical problems in the subdivision.

BUT RICHARD BAUMANN, Winston Knolls Homeowners Assn. president, said Tuesday that he knows "of quite a few instances" where electrical problems have caused arcing and fires in homes. "Typically the fuse box is blown," Baumann said.

The suit was filed against the village, Winston Knolls builder Centex-Winston, Corp., the Glow Electric Co. and village electrical inspector Edgar Rusch.

Mrs. Hayter said Tuesday the village has not been notified of the suit and declined to comment on it.

RICHARD J. PHELAN, a Chicago attorney representing Goetz, said Tuesday Goetz is seeking to have the faulty wiring corrected. He said total damages sought are difficult to determine, "but if all homes involved had to be completely rewired, the cost would be around $800 per home" or $240,000.

Phelan said wiring problems have caused several short circuits in the Winston Knolls area, resulting in small fires.

Kalasa said the fire department "has had very few instances (of electrical fires) in Winston Knolls since we began servicing it a year ago January."

The subdivision, until 1975 was within the Palatine Rural Fire District, but a spokesman for the district said "only three or four" calls were made to the subdivision since it was built in 1971.

THE GOETZ suit also alleges that Rusch, a village inspector hired in 1970, approved faulty wiring because he was employed by Glow Electric, hired by Centex to do the Winston Knolls electrical work, Phelan said.

Rusch said Tuesday he inspected the Winston Knolls homes, but could not remember at what time the inspection took place. He said he did not inspect the Winston Knolls homes while employed by Glow Electric.

Lawrence Richter, Glow Electric president, said Tuesday that Rusch was hired by his firm Aug. 14, 1972, the year after the subdivision was completed.

Rusch said that the Winston Knolls area was completed "in 1971 to the best of my knowledge."

Village Mgr. George Longmeyer and Building Comr. Daniel Murphy were unavailable for comment Tuesday.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a memento or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE of the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said. "It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff-

Bills on dangerous cargoes delayed until January

by JOE SWICKARD
Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount

Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing."

HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centreville and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

"We literally do not know what toxic substances are manufactured, stored, used or moved throughout the state. We do not even require that emergency contingency plans be prepared by those who store or ship hazardous materials," Briceland said.

Urging the increased controls, he said, "Most of all, we need to take steps to prevent future . . . incidents. . . It would be tragic indeed if some catastrophic accident must occur before we recognize the full magnitude of the hazardous materials danger in Illinois."

Regner said one major problem that must be overcome in the legislation is the federal preemption in governing interstate shipments by rail. He said finding a means of overcoming this "conflict" is one reason for the delay.

REGNER SAID another problem to be overcome is the lack of awareness of the problem by public officials and the citizens.

"We need education on both sides. As far as public response goes, there hasn't been much," he said.

"I feel certain that something will pass" in the next session Regner said.

"It may be a weak piece at first, but I hope not," he said, adding that once legislation is on the books it can be strengthened later.

Immunity offered friend of Columbo

Prosecutors in the Columbo family murder case have offered a written guarantee of immunity from prosecution in return for testimony from a friend of Patricia Columbo, who is charged with the slayings.

A letter signed by Gino L. DiVito, chief of the criminal division in Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office, offers Lanyon Mitchell, 24, of Lake Villa, immunity if he testifies against Miss Columbo, who is accused of the May 4 murders of her parents and younger brother in Elk Grove Village.

The letter extends immunity on the condition that no evidence is found linking Mitchell directly to the killings.

HOWEVER, WILLIAM Murphy, public defender for Miss Columbo, said Wednesday he believes a deal for immunity was made between Mitchell and prosecutors when Mitchell first was questioned by police about the killings at 55 E. Brantwood Dr.

Mitchell was picked up for questioning May 14. Miss Columbo was arrested in west suburban Lombard the following morning.

Mitchell reportedly told investigators he had been approached by Miss Columbo earlier this year and asked to aid in planning the murders. Police have said Mitchell backed out of the plot before the slayings.

Murphy said Mitchell has not been given true immunity, which is granted by the chief judge in Cook County Circuit Court.

"IT'S LIKE A contract," Murphy said. "It's an offer to testify, and they won't prosecute him. I've heard it referred to as 'letter immunity'."

Murphy said he did not know whether release of the letter violates a May 25 court order prohibiting out-of-court statements by prosecutors and police that might prejudice Miss Columbo's trial.

When contacted Wednesday afternoon, Richard Thomas, counsel for Mitchell, denied knowledge of the letter's release Tuesday. He said he had not spoken to reporters concerning his client's reported immunity deal.

Harper may serve in flu program

Harper College in Palatine may serve as one of several clinics for the Cook County Health Dept. to administer swine flu vaccination after Building A at the college received preliminary approval Wednesday from the county environmental engineer.

John Schultz, county environmental engineer, Cecil Kistler, Palatine health director, and Ed Tazelaar, Civil Defense director, met with Harper officials Wednesday to inspect the building and to confirm whether the facility would be available from Sept. 10 to 15.

The first three days were approved but the final two days of the clinic, Monday and Tuesday, still are questionable.

The days fall after the start of the school year at Harper and parking could be a problem, Schultz said.

The Harper clinic could inoculate "anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000 persons depending on public acceptance of the whole vaccination idea," Schultz said.

HARPER ADMINISTRATORS were the first to offer a facility to the county for its swine flu vaccination program, Schultz said. All clinic sites will be donated.

Ten possible clinic sites in the Northwest suburban area have been donated to the county so far and are awaiting approval. Schultz's recommendations must be approved by the county health department. The county will need as many as 20 clinic sites in this area, he said.

Among those groups which have offered facilities are schools, churches, parks and fire stations. All sites must have adequate parking, a large room for giving the vaccinations, toilet facilities, telephone, a refrigerator and preferably air conditioning.

A room with a cot or two also would be helpful, Schultz said.

Heat wave brings increase in parks swimming pool use

The recent heat wave has resulted in a substantial increase in the use of the Hoffman Estates community swimming pool on Grand Canyon Parkway.

A report issued this week by the park district indicates 1,999 persons used pool facilities during the first three days of operation. Only 166 persons visited the pool during the same period last year.

Park Director Allen Binder said Tuesday the large turnout was a result of "very hot days" following the pool opening Saturday.

The large turnout this week is not necessarily an indicator of a record-breaking season attendance, he added.

Total daily receipts for the pool Saturday through Monday were $992.96 compared with $115.02 for the same period last year. Season pass revenue of $11,371 is down from $11,623 last year.

The swimming pool is available for public use seven days a week from 1 to 5 p.m. and from 6 to 9 p.m.

Jaycees' carnival to open tonight

Rides, games and food will highlight the start of the Schaumburg Jaycees' annual carnival at 6 p.m. today at the Town Square Shopping Center, Roselle and Schaumburg roads.

The carnival, which runs through Sunday, also will feature a Saturday Bicentennial costume contest for school-age children and contests for the longest moustache and most beautiful baby born in 1976. Winners of the contests will receive a $25 savings bond.

Festivities will begin at 6 p.m. today and Friday, at 4 p.m. on Saturday and noon on Sunday. Nightly raffles for prizes will be held in addition to a grand prize drawing for a color television and stereo Sunday.

Triumphs, agony of Olympic games captured in art

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Artist William Nelson used his hands, and not the convenient lens of a camera, to capture the triumphant and agonizing moments of the recent winter Olympic games.

Preliminary sketches, water color paintings and the final lithographic portraits of athletes in action line walls and worktables in his Prospect Heights home.

There, gold medalists like speed skater Sheila Young and downhill skier Franz Klammer have been immortalized by the human hand.

The faces conveying zeal and a desperate longing to win; the strained but disciplined body movements have been given a lasting place in time on canvas.

THEY ARE THE WORK of the first official artist to be designated by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The title gives Nelson authority to take his place near Olympic contestants, both in the winter and summer events this year, to get an unobstructed look at what goes on.

His footing was precarious on the slopes of icy mountains while he feverishly sketched the slalom, jumping and downhill racing events in Salzburg, Austria.

The frenzy of arena crowds encompassed him as he drew the graceful and flowing motions of ice dancers and figure skaters.

NELSON HAS BEEN working on a series of six lithographs portraying Olympic action since the winter events ended in February.

The lithographs also will include the 90-meter jump, the bobsled run and the United States-Soviet Union hockey games.

The lithographs will be sold as a limited collection.

Nelson regards his status as the official Olympic artist as "an honor," but takes his recently acclaimed fame "in stride," he said.

"Jean (his wife) and I have wonderful memories of the winter Olympic events and are looking forward to the summer games," he said.

"IT'S BEEN A LOT of hard work but a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Nelson, who four years ago began his career as a free-lance artist by giving up his job as a newspaper illustrator.

Several years later he completed his first set of lithographs which began paving the way for his success.

The 10 pictures depicted scenes from the nearly extinct sun dance ceremony of the Oglala Sioux Indians of South Dakota; and a blood-letting rite for young warriors that persons outside of the tribe are barred from seeing.

The only artistic rendering of the sacred ceremony has since found a permanent place in the Smithsonian Institution and private collections.

Nelson has received thanks for the work from the Senate and House Indian Affairs Committee in Washington and members of the Oglala tribe.

ONE OF THE FEW available sets of the lithographs has been given a place of honor in the Prospect Heights Public Library as a Bicentennial purchase for the newly incorporated city.

"I don't feel any different since all of this has happened," Nelson said, "There's still a lot to be done."

Nelson occasionally sets up his easel and paint board in the middle of a snowy field near his home or at the base of a broken and abandoned farm house, enhanced by the golden sunlight of an autumn day.

"I love to work outdoors because the elements are all around me. Whether it's a few berries hanging from a branch or trees in a field," he said.

NELSON SAYS HE has a "constant awareness of colors and light, the reactions and emotions of people."

"A lot of what I feel comes out in my work," he said.

Even his rigorous schedule, in attempt to complete the Olympic lithographs, lends Nelson enough quiet moments in a day to be playfully creative.

official artist of the U. S. Olympic committee. The Prospect Heights man will make lithographs of the Montreal summer games too.

15 to join Y's 300-mile bike trip

Fifteen boys and girls ages 12 to 15 from Twinbrook YMCA will leave July 18 on an eight-day 300-mile bike hike and camping trip.

This year's trip is the fourth annual "Pedal Pusher Y-Bike Hike," said Paul Lauver, volunteer trip director.

Lauver said the boys and girls will determine their own itinerary. Last year the caravan traveled from Hoffman Estates to Sparta, Wis., camping in Wisconsin at Elroy, Devils Lake, Blue Mounds, New Glarus, Beloit and Garden Prairie.

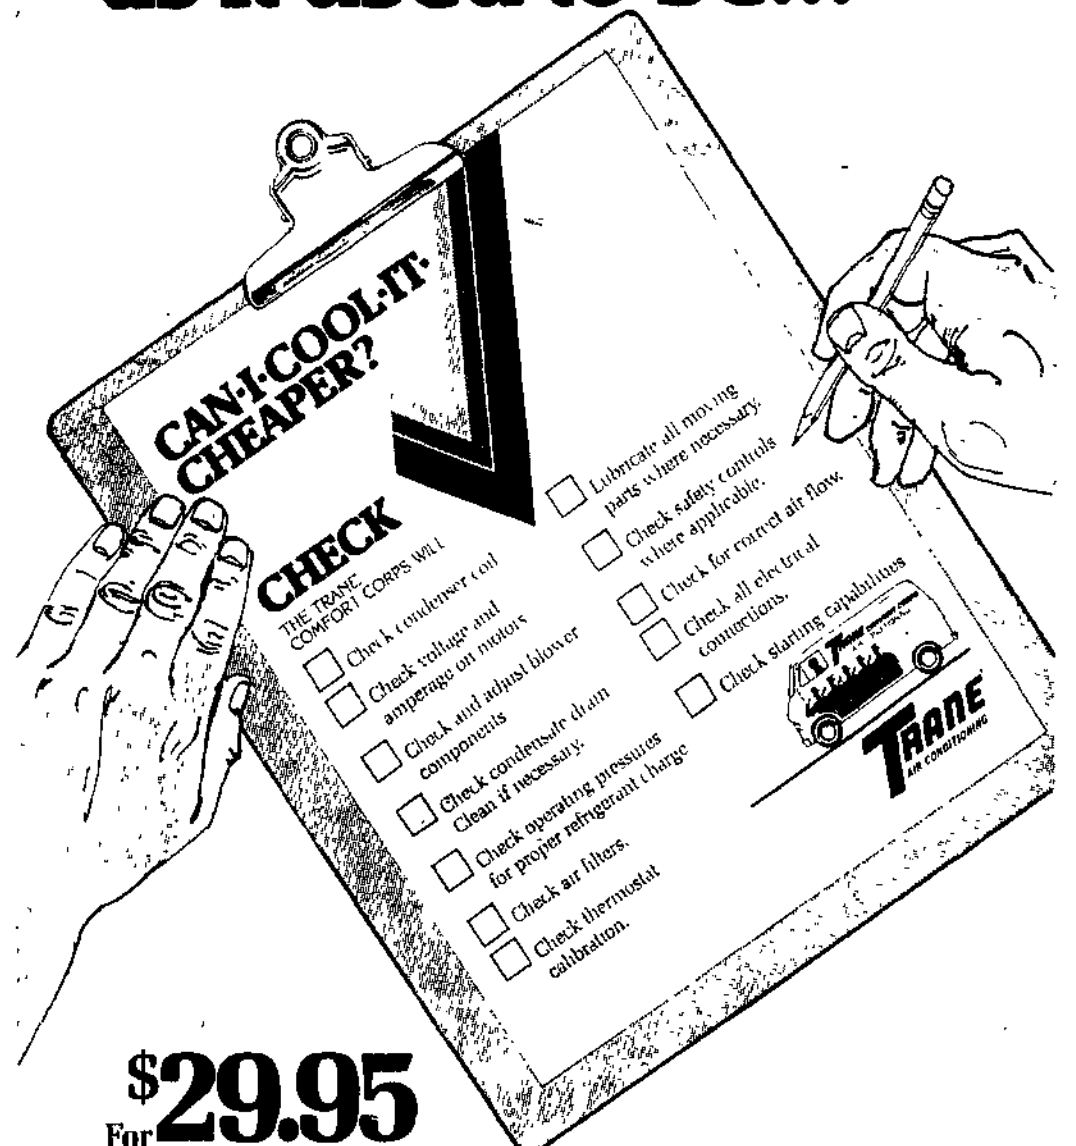

Trip leaders include the Rev. Glenn Giese, of Elgin, pastor of Lakeland Christian Church, Mundelein; Claire Schram, a Roselle housewife and mother of three Pedal Pushers; and Phil Sandborn, of Horicon, Wis., a junior high school English and social studies teacher.

Anita Lauver and Peggy Schram, students at Lake Park High School, Roselle, are leaders-in-training. Anita, a member of the Lake Park

Bike Club who has earned a 100-mile patch, has participated in the last three Twinbrook Y bike-hikes. This year's event is the third for Peggy, who recently rode with the American Wheelmen in a Barrington Hills tour.

Leo Anderson, recovering from gunshot wounds, is wheeled from church following his wife's funeral.

ANDERSON SPEAKS to one of his daughters as his son-in-law, Kevin O'Hara, looks on.

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later

Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Indictment returned in Anderson shootings

Marion Logan was indicted Wednesday by a Cook County Grand Jury for the shooting death of Phyllis Anderson of Buffalo Grove and the wounding of her husband, Leo, Sunday night.

Logan, 30, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment on two counts of murder for the slaying of Mrs. Anderson, one count of attempted murder for the wounding of Anderson, and two counts of aggravated assault.

Logan reserved his right to a bond hearing and is being held without bond at the Cook County Jail.

IN ANNOUNCING the indictment, State's Atty. Bernard Carey said authorities believe Logan acted alone and not as part of a gang.

"This case is noteworthy because in spite of the racial tensions which have been generated in recent weeks, the boundaries of race were crossed by residents who refused to stand by while others in their community committed violence against those whose only error was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," Carey said.

Carey said Logan had been identified by area residents near 69th Street and S. Harvard Avenue where the Andersons were shot Sunday night while trying to drive through the flooded streets.

"These responsible citizens had the courage and public spirit to help the police and my staff. The community owes them a debt of gratitude," Carey said.

The case will come before Circuit Court Judge James Bailey July 17 when pretrial motions are expected to be filed.

County Ok's Harper for flu program

Harper College in Palatine may serve as one of several clinics for the Cook County Health Dept. to administer swine flu vaccination after Building A at the college received preliminary approval Wednesday from the county environmental engineer.

John Schultz, county environmental engineer, Cecil Kistler, Palatine health director, and Ed Tazelaar, Civil Defense director, met with Harper officials Wednesday to inspect the building and to confirm whether the facility would be available from Sept. 10 to 15.

The first three days were approved but the final two days of the clinic, Monday and Tuesday, still are questionable.

The days fall after the start of the school year at Harper and parking could be a problem, Schultz said.

The Harper clinic could inoculate anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000 persons depending on public acceptance of the whole vaccination idea," Schultz said.

HARPER ADMINISTRATORS were the first to offer a facility to the county for its swine flu vaccination program, Schultz said. All clinic sites will be donated.

Ten possible clinic sites in the Northwest suburban area have been donated to the county so far and are awaiting approval. Schultz's recommendations must be approved by the county health department. The county will need as many as 20 clinic sites in this area, he said.

Among those groups which have offered facilities are schools, churches, parks and fire stations. All sites must have adequate parking, a large room for giving the vaccinations, toilet facilities, telephone, a refrigerator and preferably air conditioning.

A room with a cot or two also would be helpful, Schultz said.

Bills on dangerous cargoes delayed until January

by JOE SWICKARD

Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing."

HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centerville and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

"We literally do not know what toxic substances are manufactured, stored, used or moved throughout the state. We do not even require that emergency contingency plans be prepared by those who store or ship hazardous materials," Briceland said.

Urging the increased controls, he said, "Most of all, we need to take steps to prevent future incidents."

It would be tragic indeed if some catastrophic accident must occur before we recognize the full magnitude of the hazardous materials danger in Illinois."

Regner said one major problem that must be overcome in the legislation is the federal preemption in governing interstate shipments by rails. He said finding a means of overcoming this "conflict" is one reason for the delay.

REGNER SAID another problem to be overcome is the lack of awareness of the problem by public officials and the citizens.

"We need education on both sides.

As far as public response goes, there hasn't been much," he said.

"I feel certain that something will pass" in the next session Regner said.

"It may be a weak piece at first, but I hope not," he said, adding that once legislation is on the books it can be strengthened later.

Friend of Pat Columbo offered immunity

Prosecutors in the Columbo family murder case have offered a written guarantee of immunity from prosecution in return for testimony from a friend of Patricia Columbo, who is charged with the slayings.

A letter signed by Gino L. DiVito, chief of the criminal division in Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey's office, offers Lanyon Mitchell, 24, of Lake Villa, immunity if he testifies against Miss Columbo, who is accused of the May 4 murders of her parents and younger brother in Elk Grove Village.

The letter extends immunity on the condition that no evidence is found linking Mitchell directly to the killings.

HOWEVER, WILLIAM Murphy, public defender for Miss Columbo, said Wednesday he believes a deal for immunity was made between Mitchell and prosecutors when Mitchell first was questioned by police about the killings at 55 E. Brantwood Dr.

Mitchell was picked up for questioning May 14. Miss Columbo was arrested in west suburban Lombard the following morning.

Mitchell reportedly told investigators he had been approached by Miss Columbo earlier this year and asked to aid in planning the murders. Police have said Mitchell backed out of the plot before the slayings.

Murphy said Mitchell has not been given true immunity, which is granted by the chief judge in Cook County Circuit Court.

"IT'S LIKE A contract," Murphy said. "It's an offer to testify, and they won't prosecute him. I've heard it referred to as 'letter immunity.'"

Murphy said he did not know whether release of the letter violates a May 25 court order prohibiting out-of-court statements by prosecutors and police that might prejudice Miss Columbo's trial.

When contacted Wednesday afternoon, Richard Thomas, counsel for Mitchell, denied knowledge of the letter's release Tuesday. He said he had not spoken to reporters concerning his client's reported immunity deal.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadalcanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thou-

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a duce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said.

"It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff-

Residents want to put breaks on motorcyclists

Motorcyclists and "stuntdrivers" appear to have found a perfect playground on a dirt hill near Lake Louise in Palatine, but residents of the area are taking no pleasure in the show.

Residents of the Lake Louise Homeowners' Assn., in an effort to get the "attractive nuisance" removed, have petitioned the village board for a meeting to discuss the situation.

J.A. White, president of the homeowners' group, in a letter to the village board said the hill attracts motorcyclists and other recreational vehicle riders who practice "dangerous and foolhardy stunt driving."

White said problems resulting from the situation are:

- Increased traffic on local streets;
- Dust pollution during prolonged dry periods;
- Mud spattered roads during rainy periods;
- Incessant noise; and
- The possibility of the riders themselves being injured.

WHITE SAID he has spoken to representatives of Miller Builders Inc., owners of the land, but no action has been taken. He said officials of the company agreed to contact the village about extra police patrol of the area, but he added that Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig said no such contact was made.

White also said Miller officials agreed to remove the dirt hill by the end of this summer. White said about one-eighth of the hill was removed during May, but equipment since has been taken out of the area.

"We realize there are no simple solutions to the problems and at this point we would like to meet with you to discuss possible action," White said in his letter.

"We are not unreasonable people and we are not against recreational vehicles or recreational facilities. However, we are opposed to the lack of supervision and control over the situation and the fact that the owner of the property fails to take 'reasonable care' to prevent trespass caused by an 'attractive nuisance,'" White said.

A MOTORIST STOPS to check a tire on the two-lane section of Long Grove Road bordering Pinehurst Manor subdivision, Palatine

Township. The stretch of road includes a sharp curve which already has figured in two accidents. Homeowners whose back yards border the curve want a guard rail installed to prevent further mishaps. No one was injured in the accidents.

Well in subdivision breaks down

Well 5 on Illinois Avenue in the Hunting Ridge subdivision has been forced out of service because of a broken shaft, Palatine Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig said Wednesday.

Harwig said preliminary inspection of the well has led officials to believe the shaft snapped, but it is not known at what level the break occurred. He said the pump may not have been lost but if it has been, a hook will be needed to go into the well and retrieve it.

Harwig said until a final report is made on the well status, he has no way of knowing how long the well will be out of service. He added that loss of the well has not affected service to the village and water demands still are being met.

"We're holding our own but this may force us to consider earlier if sprinkling bans are needed if we get weather like we had last week," Harwig said.

WELL 5, A SHALLOW well about 154 feet deep, is one of eight wells currently on line in the village water system. A ninth well is scheduled to be connected to the water system in several months. Well 5 pumps about one million gallons of water a day.

A sprinkling ban in the Winston Park subdivision was issued for four days last week following nine straight days of hot, dry weather. The weather conditions created low water pressure because of the high water demand.

Cars wind up in backyard

Sharp curve worries mother

by JUDIE BLACK

No one has been killed yet, but that's what frightens Marilyn Lustyk, 1830 N. Laurel Dr., in Pinehurst Manor in Palatine Township.

Two car accidents in eight days in her family's backyard, which borders a heavily traveled, poorly lit and unprotected section of Long Grove Road just off Rand Road, make Mrs. Lustyk, a mother of two, dread the next, possibly more serious mishap.

Around midnight on a Saturday three weeks ago, a Palatine police car, answering a call to assist a Cook County Sheriff's Police car already at the Rand Grove apartment complex further north, swerved off the unfamiliar curve into Lustyk's back yard.

After leaving the road, the squad car broke up a stone walk and scattered cut logs. The car's front window also was damaged.

THEN ONE morning two weeks ago, an empty school bus, headed to pick up children at Rand Grove apartments, swerved off the curve into the Lustyk's yard, crushing a row of 14-year-old honeysuckle trees. Replacing the trees will cost $1,200, Mrs. Lustyk said. No one was injured in either accident.

Mrs. Lustyk said that portion of Long Grove Road is so heavily traveled that on weekends "you literally need wings to even move." The stretch is the only access to Ill. Rte. 12 for the 212-unit Rand Grove complex.

And while a bridge is being constructed on Laurel Drive parallel to Long Grove Road, even more traffic has been diverted through the sharp curve.

Mrs. Lustyk asked the Palatine Township Highway Dept. to install a guard rail on the east side of the road, next to the Lustyk property. Township officials told her it is not a guard rail problem.

Poor lighting also was cited as a possible cause, but a Commonwealth Edison representative said the pole on which a light would be mounted is too far from the road to be of much help.

"PEOPLE CLIP around here going 60 m.p.h.," Mrs. Lustyk said of the 25 m.p.h. zone. "What's it going to take to get something done before an adult or child is hurt or killed?"

At least two of the homes bordering the curve have backyard swimming pools where children play and swim. The Lustyk's backyard of sculptured landscaping, brick and stone designs, outdoor furniture and flowers has been "a product of 14 years of work."

"We don't want to be nasty with officials over this (curve situation), but we love this house," Mrs. Lustyk said. "And we want some protection."

She has inquired about additional police patrol of the area, but the Cook County Sheriff's office maintains its coverage of the unincorporated areas of the township is adequate.

Decision on funds for aged delayed

The Palatine Township Senior Citizens Council will have to wait another month before knowing if a request for $9,500 from the Suburban Cook County Area Agency on Aging will be approved.

The council's application was tabled with others at an agency board meeting Wednesday. Acting executive director David H. Grigsby said he hoped the Palatine grant would be decided before the board's next monthly meeting.

"There's just so much money available ($12,500) to give out and we want to be sure it goes for the best use," Grigsby said.

If approved, the grant would free $9,500 originally appropriated in the council's budget for bus operations. This money will be used to expand the council's home-delivered meals programs, Louise Robertson, council director, said. The program now serves only three persons of a 60-and-older population of 3,920 persons in the township.

Home-delivered meals are often the last resort in preventing elderly people who are ill, live alone or have mobility problems from being placed in institutions, according to directors of several home-delivered meals programs in the area.

Triumphs, agony of Olympic games captured in art

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Artist William Nelson used his hands, and not the convenient lens of a camera, to capture the triumphant and agonizing moments of the recent winter Olympic games.

Preliminary sketches, water color paintings and the final lithographic portraits of athletes in action line walls and worktables in his Prospect Heights home.

There, gold medalists like speed skater Sheila Young and downhill skier Franz Klammer have been immortalized by the human hand.

The faces conveying zeal and a desperate longing to win; the strained but disciplined body movements have been given a lasting place in time on canvas.

THEY ARE THE WORK of the first official artist to be designated by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The title gives Nelson authority to take his place near Olympic contestants, both in the winter and summer events this year, to get an unobstructed look at what goes on.

His footing was precarious on the slopes of icy mountains while he feverishly sketched the slalom, jumping and downhill racing events in Salzburg, Austria.

The frenzy of arena crowds encompassed him as he drew the graceful and flowing motions of ice dancers and figure skaters.

NELSON HAS BEEN working on a series of six lithographs portraying Olympic action since the winter events ended in February.

The lithographs also will include the 90-meter jump, the bobsled run and the United States-Soviet Union hockey games.

The lithographs will be sold as a limited collection.

Nelson regards his status as the official Olympic artist as "an honor," but takes his recently acclaimed fame "in stride," he said.

"Jean (his wife) and I have wonderful memories of the winter Olympic events and are looking forward to the summer games," he said.

"IT'S BEEN A LOT of hard work but a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Nelson, who four years ago began his career as a free-lance artist by giving up his job as a newspaper illustrator.

Several years later he completed his first set of lithographs which began paving the way for his success.

The 10 pictures depicted scenes from the nearly extinct sun dance ceremony of the Oglala Sioux Indians of South Dakota; and a blood-letting rite for young warriors that persons outside of the tribe are barred from seeing.

The only artistic rendering of the sacred ceremony has since found a permanent place in the Smithsonian Institution and private collections.

Nelson has received thanks for the work from the Senate and House Indian Affairs Committee in Washington and members of the Oglala tribe.

ONE OF THE FEW available sets of the lithographs has been given a place of honor in the Prospect Heights Public Library as a Bicentennial purchase for the newly incorporated city.

"I don't feel any different since all of this has happened," Nelson said. "There's still a lot to be done."

Nelson occasionally sets up his easel and paint board in the middle of a snowy field near his home or at the base of a broken and abandoned farm house, enhanced by the golden sunlight of an autumn day.

Arlington advises against bus plan

by BILL HILL

Arlington Heights officials have recommended village trustees decide against establishing a shuttle bus service for commuters because funding from the Regional Transportation Authority would not cover the program.

A public transportation feasibility study recently completed by the village's planning department recommends that two commuter feeder bus routes be started as the first stage of a public transportation system. The service would take commuters to the railway station in downtown Arlington Heights during morning and evening rush periods.

THE PROJECT would require seven buses, but the RTA is willing to provide only two used CTA buses.

"Utilizing the RTA Service Development and Demonstration Grant would be too costly to the village," Village Mgr. L. A. Hanson states in a memorandum sent Wednesday to village trustees. "Preliminary estimates are that the program would cost $145,000, of which a maximum of $100,000 is available in grant support."

The Arlington Heights Village Board will review the recommendation Monday.

The deadline for applying with the RTA for the special grants is July 30.

THE PLANNING department's report suggests that the stage-one service use five 20-passenger buses and two 33-passenger buses. The proposed fare is 40 cents for a one-way ride.

With the RTA providing full funding of fixed and operating expenses the first six months and then 45 per cent funding after that point, the village would have to contribute $34,000 in 1976 and $57,000 in 1977 to pay for the program, according to Hanson's letter to the board.

The planning department's six-stage program calls for three more commuter feeder routes requiring nine additional buses to be added in the fall of 1978.

Future recommendations in the planning department report call for collector routes along Arlington Heights Road from Dundee Road to Golf Road.

Bus service has not been provided in Arlington Heights since 1974 when the system run by the Metron Systems Corp. failed to develop sufficient ridership to pay for itself.

Arlington CB radio unit to wage war with crime

The Arlington Neighborhood Watch will provide "an extra set of eyes and ears" to combat vandalism and other crimes without becoming an arm of the police department, according to the group's steering committee.

About 50 persons representing 17 homeowners' associations attended the group's organizational meeting Wednesday and were told that through active citizen involvement, the vandalism and crime rate of the village can be reduced.

Richard Pease, of the steering committee, said the group was formed several months ago around a core of Citizens' Band radio operators, but will be expanded "to blanket the community."

Charles DeAndrea, of the steering committee, said "there are just too many facets for just the CBs" alone. DeAndrea said homeowners' representatives and members of the business community will round out the program.

"WE DON'T want to be a vigilante group," he said. "All we want to do is report."

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. has been monitoring the emergency channel of the Citizens' Band radio for several months with desk personnel. The Neighborhood Watch group hopes to augment this with volunteer monitors stationed around the clock at the police department.

Residents attending the initial meeting said persons many times are afraid to report crime to the police for fear of retaliation.

The steering committee said members will be assigned secret numbers through which they can identify themselves when reporting crimes, vandalism or other suspicious activities. The steering committee also said the use of the identification numbers will enable the monitors to discriminate "reliable sources" from potential crank callers.

PEASE SAID, "We need a flock of white knights out there" to report situations such as traffic accidents, crimes in progress, curfew violations or fires.

He said by use of the Neighborhood Watch identification numbers, CBers will be able to check their effectiveness.

Pease said the program receives no funding from the village or the business community and will be supported for the time being through its membership. However, he said the group may in the future approach businessmen or the Chamber of Commerce for supplemental funds.

ANDERSON SPEAKS to one of his daughters as his son-in-law, Kevin O'Hara, looks on.

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later

Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Indictment returned in Anderson shootings

Marion Logan was indicted Wednesday by a Cook County Grand Jury for the shooting death of Phyllis Anderson of Buffalo Grove and the wounding of her husband, Leo, Sunday night.

Logan, 30, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment on two counts of murder for the slaying of Mrs. Anderson, one count of attempted murder for the wounding of Anderson, and two counts of aggravated assault.

Logan reserved his right to a bond hearing and is being held without bond at the Cook County Jail.

IN ANNOUNCING the indictment, State's Atty. Bernard Carey said authorities believe Logan acted alone and not as part of a gang.

"This case is noteworthy because in spite of the racial tensions which have been generated in recent weeks, the boundaries of race were crossed by residents who refused to stand by while others in their community committed violence against those whose only error was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," Carey said.

Carey said Logan had been identified by area residents near 60th Street and S. Harvard Avenue where the Andersons were shot Sunday night while trying to drive through the flooded streets.

"These responsible citizens had the courage and public spirit to help the police and my staff. The community owes them a debt of gratitude," Carey said.

The case will come before Circuit Court Judge James Bailey July 17 when pretrial motions are expected to be filed.

Contract approvals postponed by parks

Rolling Meadows Park District commissioners Tuesday postponed awarding two contracts for improvements to the sports complex, 3900 Owl Dr., until a recommendation on the contracts is made by Supt. of Parks Stephen Person.

The commissioners had planned to recommend approval of contracts for a decorative steel fence and roof repairs. However, Person said the commissioners asked him to review the contracts before action is taken.

Approval of a bill totaling $4,000 for new lockers in the swimming pool area and repairs to the water heating system was recommended at the meeting. Final approval will be considered at the full board meeting next week.

Bennett mulls forming slate for village election

by LUISA GINETTI

James C. Bennett, former Palatine director of public works, is considering forming an independent slate to run in the village election next April in opposition to the incumbent Republicans.

"I have made no decision, but we're thinking about it," Bennett said. When asked if there are others joining his effort, Bennett said "It takes more than one."

Bennett, however, declined to name the person or persons involved in the effort.

Bennett, 48, served as public works director for nine years before resigning Aug. 30, 1974. He also served as interim village manager for eight months prior to the appointment in April 1974 of Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig.

James C. Bennett

Bennett offered no reasons for his resignation at the time of the move, but indications were that he was dissatisfied with the Republican administration which was swept into office in the 1973 election.

The former public works director was the fifth department head to resign following the 1973 Republican takeover of the village board.

Bennett said he is not ready to make any announcement about his candidacy and will not until October or November if a slate is organized. He declined to say if he is considering running for village president or trustee.

"I'm considering it (running for office) and that's all I want to say now," Bennett said.

The terms of the village president, the village clerk and three trustees will be decided in the April election.

Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones said last week he has made no decision about seeking reelection. However, The Herald reported last week that sources close to Jones have said he has decided not to run for a second term.

Village Clerk Diane Greenlees said it is unlikely she will seek reelection but she also has made no announcement. Mrs. Greenlees said if she does not run for a second term, it will be because she is interested in getting a full-time job soon and does not feel she can adequately serve in outside employment and as village clerk.

Mrs. Greenlees expressed disappointment recently that the clerk's job was not made into a nonelective, full-time post, a move she sought while on the board.

Trustees Richard W. Fonte, Robert Guss and James Shaw have made no announcements about their plans but Guss and Fonte have indicated strongly that they will seek reelection.

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

Elderly meals funding ruling delayed a month

The Palatine Township Senior Citizens Council will have to wait another month before knowing if a request for $9,500 from the Suburban Cook County Area Agency on Aging will be approved.

The council's application was tabled with others at an agency board meeting Wednesday. Acting executive director David H. Grigsby said he hoped the Palatine grant would be decided before the board's next monthly meeting.

"There's just so much money available ($12,500) to give out and we want to be sure it goes for the best use," Grigsby said.

If approved, the grant would free $9,500 originally appropriated in the council's budget for bus operations. This money will be used to expand the council's home-delivered meals programs, Louise Robertson, council director, said. The program now serves only three persons of a 60-and-older population of 3,320 persons in the township.

Home-delivered meals are often the last resort in preventing elderly people who are ill, live alone or have mobility problems from being placed in institutions, according to directors of several home-delivered meals programs in the area.

Cyclist, 48, hurt as car strikes bike

A 48-year-old Palatine bicyclist suffered minor injuries when he was struck by a car in a parking lot, police reported.

Clarence Nikolai, 38 W. Robertson St., suffered cuts Tuesday night when he rode into the path of a car driven by Alan E. Ossler, 20, of 336 Wilshire Ct., Palatine, in a parking lot at 537 N. Hicks Rd., Palatine, police said.

Nikolai reportedly was taken by Palatine firefighters to Northwest Community Hospital, Arlington Heights, where he was treated and released. Ossler was not ticketed, police said.

Near Lake Louise subdivision

Group seeks to ground cyclists

Motorcyclists and "stuntdrivers" appear to have found a perfect playground on a dirt hill near Lake Louise in Palatine, but residents of the area are taking no pleasure in the show.

Residents of the Lake Louise Homeowners' Assn., in an effort to get the "attractive nuisance" removed, have petitioned the village board for a meeting to discuss the situation.

A MOTORCYCLIST depicts the problem residents of the Lake Louise Homeowners Assn. have been trying to get resolved. A dirt hill near the lake has become a haven for "stunt riders," the residents and they have asked to meet with Palatine officials to discuss the matter.

J.A. White, president of the homeowners' group, in a letter to the village board said the hill attracts motorcyclists and other recreational vehicle riders who practice "dangerous and foolhardy stuntdriving."

White said problems resulting from the situation are:

- Increased traffic on local streets;
- Dust pollution during prolonged dry periods;

- Mud splattered roads during rainy periods;
- Incessant noise; and
- The possibility of the riders themselves being injured.

WHITE SAID he has spoken to representatives of Miller Builders Inc., owners of the land, but no action has been taken. He said officials of the company agreed to contact the village about extra police patrol of the area, but he added that Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig said no such contact was made.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a deuce or two that would serve as a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the gener-

Today

al public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said. "It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff.

Officials offer Harper for flu vaccination use

Harper College in Palatine may serve as one of several clinics for the Cook County Health Dept. to administer swine flu vaccination after Building A at the college received preliminary approval Wednesday from the county environmental engineer.

John Schultz, county environmental engineer, Cecil Kistler, Palatine health director, and Ed Tazelaar, Civil Defense director, met with Harper officials Wednesday to inspect the building and to confirm whether the facility would be available from Sept. 10 to 15.

The first three days were approved but the final two days of the clinic, Monday and Tuesday, still are questionable.

The days fall after the start of the school year at Harper and parking could be a problem, Schultz said. The Harper clinic could inoculate anywhere from 5,000 to 15,000 persons depending on public acceptance of the whole vaccination idea," Schultz said.

HARPER ADMINISTRATORS were the first to offer a facility to the county for its swine flu vaccination program, Schultz said. All clinic sites will be donated.

Ten possible clinic sites in the Northwest suburban area have been donated to the county so far and are awaiting approval. Schultz's recommendations must be approved by the county health department. The county will need as many as 20 clinic sites in this area, he said.

Among those groups which have offered facilities are schools, churches, parks and fire stations. All sites must have adequate parking, a large room for giving the vaccinations, toilet facilities, telephone, a refrigerator and preferably air conditioning.

A room with a cot or two also would be helpful, Schultz said.

Palatine wrapup

Wilson apartments get trustees' OK

The controversial 72-unit Wilson Terrace apartment project has been approved by the Palatine Village Board.

The project, at Wilson and Elm streets, had drawn board criticism several weeks ago because trustees said the three-story walk-ups would be difficult to rent. Following meetings with representatives of Wilson Associates, developer of the project, architects and LeMoine D. Stitt, attorney for the developer, the board agreed to approve the plans.

The project calls for two 18-unit and three 12-unit buildings, each with two-bedroom apartments.

Bond sale OK'd for 10th well

The board approved the sale of bonds for construction of a tenth water well in the village on the Sellergren project, Northwest Highway and Hicks Road. The bond sale was awarded to John Nuveen and Co. Inc., Chicago, at an interest rate of 6.48 per cent. The company was the lowest of five bidders.

Employee head tax opposed

The board approved a resolution opposing the proposed Cook County head tax, which would charge businesses $3 per month per employee with money to be distributed to the county and local municipalities.

Trustee Richard W. Fonte said the proposal is bad and will drive businesses out of the county. "It is unnecessary, we didn't ask for it and we don't want it," Fonte said.

Sprinkling change approved

An amendment to an ordinance on sprinkling was approved that will give the village manager authority to issue a sprinkling ban during emergency water situations.

The amendment was requested by Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig because he said it was not clearly spelled out in the ordinance.

Harwig last week issued a sprinkling ban for the Winston Park subdivision during a nine-day dry spell.

In a related matter, the board approved the expenditure of about $900 from the beautification budget to allow village public works crews to water new plantings along Northwest Highway.

Panel to study plastic pipes

A committee to study the merits of allowing plastic plumbing in the village has been approved. The committee will consist of an architect, a contractor-developer and a plumber. Asked to serve on the committee will be architect, Robert Jensen, contractor, Jeff Greene and plumber Peter Philippe. All work in Palatine.

The committee was sought following an incident in which a village plumbing inspector was reprimanded for allowing plastic plumbing in four houses now under construction. Plastic plumbing is not allowed in the village building code.

The committee will study plastic plumbing and recommend whether the village should allow it in its codes.

Transit unit gets upkeep pact

A maintenance contract with the Illinois Dept. of Transportation was approved by the board. The contract calls for the village to receive $155,000 in motor fuel tax funds to maintain village streets for 1976. In addition, the board approved a contract to maintain state roads within the village at a cost to the state of $39,689.

Jaycees to sell July 4 liquor

The Jaycees were granted a Class E liquor license to permit the sale of beer during July 4 activities. However, the board denied a request for a Class B liquor license for the Eagle Shopping Center. A license had been sought for a proposed restaurant at 144 W. Northwest Hwy. in the shopping center.

Panel defers gas price posting

The board referred to the Northwest Municipal Conference a proposal to require gasoline stations to post pump prices on advertising. The board had received a request from neighboring Rolling Meadows to consider adopting such an ordinance. Rolling Meadows last year approved such a measure.

Palatine officials said they felt the issue should be handled on a larger scale than by individual municipalities.

Safety unit to study contract

The board referred to the health, safety and welfare committee the matter of negotiating a contract with the Palatine Rural Fire District. Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones and Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig have been meeting with district officials, but have reached a stalemate over the formula to be used in determining the district's fire service cost.

The committee will review the contract and determine whether a joint meeting between the two full boards is needed to settle the issue.

Village gets food check right

A meeting will be requested between officials of High School Dist. 211 and the village board to arrange an agreement through which the village can inspect food prepared by service groups using school facilities. Harwig said the village is liable for any health problems at the schools and should have inspection rights.

He said Dist. 211 officials recently have refused the village the right to make inspections of service groups using school facilities. The village has certain guidelines for transporting and serving he said, with which most groups are familiar, but this should not preclude inspections.

A MOTORIST STOPS to check a tire on the two-lane section of Long Grove Road bordering Pinehurst Manor subdivision, Palatine

border the curve want a guard rail installed to prevent further mishaps. No one was injured in the accidents.

Cars wind up in backyard

Sharp curve worries mother

by JUDIE BLACK

No one has been killed yet, but that's what frightens Marilyn Lustyk, 1830 N. Laurel Dr., in Pinehurst Manor in Palatine Township.

Two car accidents in eight days in her family's backyard, which borders a heavily traveled, poorly lighted and unprotected section of Long Grove Road just off Rand Road, make Mrs. Lustyk, a mother of two, dread the next, possibly more serious mishap.

Around midnight on a Saturday three weeks ago, a Palatine police car, answering a call to assist a Cook County Sheriff's Police car already at the Rand Grove apartment complex further north, swerved off the unfamiliar curve into Lustyk's back yard. After leaving the road, the squad car broke up a stone walk and scattered cut logs. The car's front window also was damaged.

THEN ONE morning two weeks ago, an empty school bus, headed to pick up children at Rand Grove apartments, swerved off the curve into the Lustyk's yard, crushing a row of 14-year-old honeysuckle trees. Replacing the trees will cost $1,200, Mrs. Lustyk said. No one was injured in either accident.

Mrs. Lustyk said that portion of Long Grove Road is so heavily traveled that on weekends "you literally need wings to even move." The stretch is the only access to Ill. Rte. 12 for the 212-unit Rand Grove complex.

And while a bridge is being constructed on Laurel Drive parallel to Long Grove Road, even more traffic has been diverted through the sharp curve.

Mrs. Lustyk asked the Palatine Township Highway Dept. to install a guard rail on the east side of the road, next to the Lustyk property. Township officials told her it is not a guard rail problem.

Poor lighting also was cited as a possible cause, but a Commonwealth Edison representative said the pole on which a light would be mounted is too far from the road to be of much help.

"PEOPLE CLIP around here going 60 m.p.h.," Mrs. Lustyk said of the 25 m.p.h. zone. "What's it going to take to get something done before an adult or child is hurt or killed?"

At least two of the homes bordering the curve have backyard swimming pools where children play and swim. The Lustyk's backyard of sculptured landscaping, brick and stone designs, outdoor furniture and flowers has been "a product of 14 years of work."

"We don't want to be nasty with officials over this (curve situation), but we love this house," Mrs. Lustyk said. "And we want some protection."

She has inquired about additional police patrol of the area, but the Cook County Sheriff's office maintains its coverage of the unincorporated areas of the township is adequate.

5-month stand reversed

Consumer group calls for hold on item pricing

The Palatine Consumer Coalition, reversing its stand of the past five months, has called on the village board to withhold action on item-pricing legislation in Palatine.

Consumer coalition representatives this week made the statement in response to the village board's decision to draft a conditional ordinance. Under the proposed legislation, item pricing would be mandated in the village's five major food stores if two of the stores remove item prices from 10 per cent of their stock.

"We've got an ordinance we don't want," said coalition member Barbara Potolicchio. "We want all the prices on, we don't want conditions."

COALITION MEMBER Jackie Kendall said she questions the constitutionality of an ordinance that would allow one store to experiment with computerized checkout systems and remove prices, while forcing a return to item pricing if two stores adopt the computerized system.

"We would rather see no action now and just have the board pass an ordinance when it happens," Mrs. Kendall said.

"Why can't we vote on an ordinance (mandating continued item pricing)," Mrs. Potolicchio said. "Why do we have to have conditions?"

Coalition members admitted they had changed their minds about the proposed ordinance that had been lauded two weeks ago when it was proposed by the communications and public relations committee. The group had called the proposal a "victory."

MRS. POTOLICCHIO said the conditions proposed do not represent a compromise and the coalition now prefers that no action be taken on the matter.

"The board has said they can take care of the situation in one night by calling a special meeting and passing an ordinance if it (computerized checkout systems) happens," she said. "A compromise would be to pass no ordinance now and don't act until it happens."

Representatives of Dominick's Finer Foods and Jewel Food Stores have told Palatine officials that computerized checkout systems are at least two years away from use in the village.

Trustees Bryan P. Coughlin and Fred H. Zajonc voted against the proposal to draft the conditional ordinance.

"Why not wait until we have a problem," Coughlin said. "I don't think there is popular support for this legislation. The citizens' council voted unanimously against any legislation in this area and I think the citizens' council is a lot closer to the people than a self-appointed set of representatives."

"I'M TIRED OF people appointing themselves as my representatives," he said.

Well in subdivision breaks down

Well 5 on Illinois Avenue in the Hunting Ridge subdivision has been forced out of service because of a broken shaft, Palatine Village Mgr. Anton H. Harwig said Wednesday.

Harwig said preliminary inspection of the well has led officials to believe the shaft snapped, but it is not known at what level the break occurred. He said the pump may not have been lost but if it has been, a hook will be needed to go into the well and retrieve it.

Harwig said until a final report is made on the well status, he has no way of knowing how long the well will be out of service. He added that loss of the well has not affected service to the village and water demands still are being met.

"We're holding our own but this may force us to consider earlier if sprinkling bans are needed if we get weather like we had last week," Harwig said.

WELL 5, A SHALLOW well about 154 feet deep, is one of eight wells currently on line in the village water system. A ninth well is scheduled to be connected to the water system in several months. Well 5 pumps about one million gallons of water a day.

A sprinkling ban in the Winston Park subdivision was issued for four days last week following nine straight days of hot, dry weather. The weather conditions created low water pressure because of the high water demand.

Triumphs, agony of Olympic games captured in art

by DIANE MERMIGAS

Artist William Nelson used his hands, and not the convenient lens of a camera, to capture the triumphant and agonizing moments of the recent winter Olympic games.

Preliminary sketches, water color paintings and the final lithographic portraits of athletes in action line walls and worktables in his Prospect Heights home.

There, gold medalists like speed skater Shella Young and downhill skier Franz Klammer have been immortalized by the human hand.

The faces conveying zeal and a desperate longing to win; the strained but disciplined body movements have been given a lasting place in time on canvas.

THEY ARE THE WORK of the first official artist to be designated by the U.S. Olympic Committee.

The title gives Nelson authority to take his place near Olympic contestants, both in the winter and summer events this year, to get an unobstructed look at what goes on.

His footing was precarious on the slopes of icy mountains while he feverishly sketched the slalom, jumping and downhill racing events in Salzburg, Austria.

The frenzy of arena crowds encompassed him as he drew the graceful and flowing motions of ice dancers and figure skaters.

NELSON HAS BEEN working on a series of six lithographs portraying Olympic action since the winter events ended in February.

The lithographs also will include the 90-meter jump, the bobsled run and the United States-Soviet Union hockey games.

The lithographs will be sold as a limited collection.

Nelson regards his status as the official Olympic artist as "an honor," but takes his recently acclaimed fame "in stride," he said.

"Jean (his wife) and I have wonderful memories of the winter Olympic events and are looking forward to the summer games," he said.

"IT'S BEEN A LOT of hard work but a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Nelson, who four years ago began his career as a free-lance artist by giving up his job as a newspaper illustrator.

Several years later he completed his first set of lithographs which began paving the way for his success.

The 10 pictures depicted scenes from the nearly extinct sun dance ceremony of the Oglala Sioux Indians of South Dakota; and a blood-letting rite for young warriors that persons outside of the tribe are barred from seeing.

The only artistic rendering of the sacred ceremony has since found a permanent place in the Smithsonian Institution and private collections.

Nelson has received thanks for the work from the Senate and House Indian Affairs Committee in Washington and members of the Oglala tribe.

ONE OF THE FEW available sets of the lithographs has been given a place of honor in the Prospect Heights Public Library as a Bicentennial purchase for the newly incorporated city.

"I don't feel any different since all of this has happened," Nelson said, "There's still a lot to be done."

Nelson occasionally sets up his easel and paint board in the middle of a snowy field near his home or at the base of a broken and abandoned farm house, enhanced by the golden sunlight of an autumn day.

"I love to work outdoors because the elements are all around me. Whether it's a few berries hanging from a branch or trees in a field," he said.

NELSON SAYS HE has a "constant awareness of colors and light, the reactions and emotions of people."

"A lot of what I feel comes out in my work," he said.

Even his rigorous schedule, in attempt to complete the Olympic lithographs, lends Nelson enough quiet moments in a day to be playfully creative.

Laws on perilous cargoes stalled

by JOE SWICKARD

Efforts to create a package of laws to govern the shipment, use and storage of toxic and potentially dangerous chemicals in Illinois will be delayed until the next Illinois General Assembly session in January.

State Sen. David Regner, R-Mount Prospect, who had planned to introduce emergency legislation in the current session, said there is not enough time to write a well-thought out package before adjournment June 30.

"This is something that will have to go in January," Regner said. "I do not want it to be a panic-type thing." HE SAID HE would use the seven months before the next session to gather support for his proposal, including aid from the office of Ill. Atty. Gen. William Scott and the Illinois Environmental Protection Agency.

Concern over safety rules heightened after a series of accidents in May involving trains and trucks carrying toxic cargoes. The mishaps forced the evacuation of thousands of residents in four towns.

The derailment of a Chicago and North Western Ry. freight train in Glen Ellyn forced thousands from their homes and prompted Arlington Heights Village Pres. James T. Ryan to call for a complete review of existing legislation with an eye toward tighter controls.

After two separate derailments in downstate Centreville and Stoy, Richard H. Briceland, director of the state EPA, issued a memorandum to the General Assembly.

IN THAT memorandum, Briceland noted that since 1974, there have been more than 150 accidents in Illinois involving trucks and trains carrying toxic fumes. The accidents resulted in 12 deaths, hospital treatment of 200 persons and the evacuation of 30,000 people.

Leo Anderson, recovering from gunshot wounds, is wheeled from church following his wife's funeral.

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later.

Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

ANDERSON SPEAKS to one of his daughters as his son-in-law, Kevin O'Hara, looks on.

Indictment returned in Anderson shootings

Marion Logan was indicted Wednesday by a Cook County Grand Jury for the shooting death of Phyllis Anderson of Buffalo Grove and the wounding of her husband, Leo, Sunday night.

Logan, 30, pleaded not guilty at his arraignment on two counts of murder for the slaying of Mrs. Anderson, one count of attempted murder for the wounding of Anderson, and two counts of aggravated assault.

Logan reserved his right to a bond hearing and is being held without bond at the Cook County Jail.

IN ANNOUNCING the indictment, State's Atty. Bernard Carey said authorities believe Logan acted alone and not as part of a gang.

"This case is noteworthy because in spite of the racial tensions which have been generated in recent weeks, the boundaries of race were crossed by residents who refused to stand by while others in their community committed violence against those whose only error was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," Carey said.

Carey said Logan had been identified by area residents near 69th Street and S. Harvard Avenue where the Andersons were shot Sunday night while trying to drive through the flooded streets.

"These responsible citizens had the courage and public spirit to help the police and my staff. The community owes them a debt of gratitude," Carey said.

The case will come before Circuit Court Judge James Bailey July 17 when pretrial motions are expected to be filed.

during May, but equipment since has been taken out of the area.

"We realize there are no simple solutions to the problems and at this point we would like to meet with you to discuss possible action," White said in his letter.

"We are not unreasonable people and we are not against recreational vehicles or recreational facilities. However, we are opposed to the lack of supervision and control over the situation and the fact that the owner of the property fails to take 'reasonable care' to prevent trespass caused by an 'attractive nuisance,'" White said.

Arlington CB radio unit to wage war with crime

The Arlington Neighborhood Watch will provide "an extra set of eyes and ears" to combat vandalism and other crimes without becoming an arm of the police department, according to the group's steering committee.

About 50 persons representing 17 homeowners' associations attended the group's organizational meeting Wednesday and were told that through active citizen involvement, the vandalism and crime rate of the village can be reduced.

Richard Pease, of the steering committee, said the group was formed several months ago around a core of Citizens' Band radio operators, but will be expanded "to blanket the community."

Charles DeAndrea, of the steering committee, said "there are just too many facets for just the CBs" alone. DeAndrea said homeowners' representatives and members of the business community will round out the program.

"WE DON'T want to be a vigilante group," he said. "All we want to do is report."

The Arlington Heights Police Dept. has been monitoring the emergency channel of the Citizens' Band radio for several months with desk personnel. The Neighborhood Watch group hopes to augment this with volunteer monitors stationed around the clock at the police department.

Residents attending the initial meeting said persons many times are afraid to report crime to the police for fear of retaliation.

The steering committee said members will be assigned secret numbers through which they can identify themselves when reporting crimes, vandalism or other suspicious activities. The steering committee also said the use of the identification numbers will enable the monitors to discriminate "reliable sources" from potential crank callers.

PEASE SAID, "We need a flock of white knights out there" to report situations such as traffic accidents, crimes in progress, curfew violations or fires.

He said by use of the Neighborhood Watch identification numbers, CBers will be able to check their effectiveness.

Pease said the program receives no funding from the village or the business community and will be supported for the time being through its membership. However, he said the group may in the future approach businessmen or the Chamber of Commerce for supplemental funds.

3-day ban sought on sprinkling

Village Mgr. Robert J. Eppley has proposed a three-day sprinkling restriction in Mount Prospect to help combat the problem of dropping water tables during the summer months.

Eppley's recommendation came simultaneously with a similar one by four public works directors in the Northwest Municipal Conference. Directors from Arlington Heights, Buffalo Grove, Mount Prospect and Rolling Meadows have suggested that Northwest suburban residents water their lawns only on Thursdays and Sundays, or face a fine of up to $500 for violating the sprinkling restriction.

Although Eppley was unavailable for comment Wednesday, he suggested in a memorandum to the village board that Mount Prospect residents be permitted to sprinkle their lawns on Tuesdays, Thursdays, Saturdays and Sundays. The public works committee is expected to consider his proposal Monday at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 100 S. Emerson St.

MOUNT PROSPECT Public Works Director David L. Creamer said water levels have dropped since he consulted Eppley about the problem last week. Creamer endorses the five-day restriction proposed by the Northwest Municipal Conference rather than Eppley's three-day sprinkling restriction proposal.

"In some other towns, it is a more serious problem," Creamer said, "because they don't have adequate well supplies and reservoirs. We've got good enough storage. I'm not in too bad shape, but the levels are definitely going down."

Creamer said, for example, the water level in Mount Prospect's Well 16 at Algonquin and Busse roads dropped 25 feet from June 9 to June 14. Well 16, the largest of the village's 14 wells, now is pumping 1,300 gallons of water per minute. At the beginning of the month, it was pumping 1,500 gallons per minute.

WELL 3 on Pine Street near the public works building is losing 50 to 100 gallons of water per minute and Well 5 on Highland and Maple streets near Randhurst Shopping Center is losing about 75 gallons per minute, Creamer said.

"During the hot spell the last two weeks, daily village-wide water consumption was up to about 6.5 million gallons," Creamer said. Normally, the village consumes 4 million gallons of water daily.

Under the proposed ban, newly seeded or sodded lawns would not be affected. "But the owner would need a special permit," Creamer said.

Another suggested provision is that residents sprinkle their lawns either early in the morning or late in the afternoon. "It doesn't make sense for the homeowner to sprinkle with the sun beating down on his lawn. The water evaporates too quickly and you don't get the full benefit," Creamer said.

EPPLEY SAID in his memorandum that while the Northwest Municipal Conference is working on permanent uniform sprinkling restrictions throughout the Northwest suburbs, a Mount Prospect ordinance provides for them as an emergency measure only. The village last used a sprinkling restriction in 1970.

Creamer said the existing ordinance, passed in June 1959, allows the village manager to impose a temporary restriction on sprinkling with a penalty of up to $200 for violators. "It is possible for the village manager to enact a total sprinkling ban," he said. "But a partial ban must be approved by the (village) board."

U.S. envoy, aide slain in Beirut no-man's land

BEIRUT, Lebanon (UPI) — U.S. Ambassador Francis E. Meloy Jr., his economic counselor and their chauffeur were shot and killed by gunmen Wednesday while attempting to cross the no-man's land between Moslem and Christian Beirut for a meeting with President-elect Elias Sarkis, the U.S. embassy announced.

They were the first U.S. officials to lose their lives in 14 months of civil war that has killed more than 30,000 persons in Lebanon.

An embassy spokesman said the bullet-riddled bodies of Meloy, a 59-year-old bachelor career diplomat who arrived in Lebanon only last month, economic counselor Robert O. Waring, 56, and their Lebanese chauffeur, Zohair Moghrabi, had been found and identified by Embassy officials.

President Ford, in announcing the deaths in Washington ordered "all appropriate resources of the United States" to find the killers.

"Those responsible for these brutal assassinations must be brought to justice," Ford said.

The Pentagon said two aircraft carriers, the Guadacanal and the America, were in the Eastern Mediterranean within reach of Lebanon if needed. Four helicopters and three C130 aerial tankers were on nearby Cyprus for evacuating U.S. personnel, if necessary.

But in shattered Lebanon — a country without police, without courts, and with no law beyond the rule of the gun — Meloy, Waring and Moghrabi were only three victims among thousands.

"Jean (his wife) and I have wonderful memories of the winter Olympic events and are looking forward to the summer games," he said.

"IT'S BEEN A LOT of hard work but a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Nelson, who four years ago began his career as a free-lance artist by giving up his job as a newspaper illustrator.

Several years later he completed his first set of lithographs which began paving the way for his success.

The 10 pictures depicted scenes from the nearly extinct sun dance ceremony of the Oglala Sioux Indians of South Dakota; and a blood-letting rite for young warriors that persons outside of the tribe are barred from seeing.

The only artistic rendering of the sacred ceremony has since found a permanent place in the Smithsonian Institution and private collections.

Nelson has received thanks for the work from the Senate and House Indian Affairs Committee in Washington and members of the Oglala tribe.

ONE OF THE FEW available sets of the lithographs has been given a place of honor in the Prospect Heights

Public Library as a Bicentennial purchase for the newly incorporated city.

"I don't feel any different since all of this has happened," Nelson said, "There's still a lot to be done."

Nelson occasionally sets up his easel and paint board in the middle of a snowy field near his home or at the base of a broken and abandoned farm house, enhanced by the golden sunlight of an autumn day.

"I love to work outdoors because the elements are all around me. Whether it's a few berries hanging from a branch or trees in a field," he said.

NELSON SAYS HE has a "constant awareness of colors and light, the reactions and emotions of people."

"A lot of what I feel comes out in my work," he said.

Even his rigorous schedule, in attempt to complete the Olympic lithographs, lends Nelson enough quiet moments in a day to be playfully creative.

Dist. 23 stalls gifted program ruling

A decision on providing education for gifted children in Prospect Heights Dist. 23 was delayed Wednesday night by the board of education until the Illinois General Assembly decides what funds will be allotted for gifted programs.

The board discussed five possible programs presented to them last week by Assistant Supt. Gerald McGovern. The board had asked for gifted program alternatives after members were told that many of the teachers trained in gifted education had left the district.

All the programs provide some kind of training for "our major resource, which is the classroom teacher," McGovern said.

"THERE IS a tendency to think of a gifted program as something isolated from the school," McGovern said. "When a district employs a specialized teacher for the gifted, classroom teachers tend to be less aware of a gifted child's needs," he said.

McGovern said the district now "covers the waterfront very well" in some areas of gifted education, but suggested a gifted program next year concentrate on intermediate grade children and intellectually gifted children.

Because several of the programs involve some type of reimbursement from the state, the board decided to delay its decision on the programs until the state legislature determines what state aid will be provided for gifted programs for the next school year.

The state will decide on its allotment in late July or early August, McGovern said.

McGOVERN SAID that when the state runs low on money, gifted education is the first to be cutback.

"Part of the problem is that parents of gifted children haven't organized to pressure the legislature the way parents of other children have," he said.

Few people like them, but the $2 bills are here to stay

by DIANE MERMIGAS

The $2 bill is losing its magic and is fast becoming a stepchild to other currency only two months after coming back into circulation.

The popularity of the new bill has waned since it was re-issued April 14 when people rushed to banks for a keepsake, a lucky charm and even a not-so-lucky token, according to legends of the $2 bill.

But now, merchants complain they have no room in their cash register drawers for the bills. Consumers complain the bills are too easily mistaken for other paper money.

LOCAL BANK officials say they still have at least 10 per cent of the $2 bills they started with earlier this spring and that customers prefer not to have them.

The bill is an inconvenience, a bother, a freak of the monetary system, they all say. But, it's still money and so everyone spends it anyway.

A total of 225 million $2 bills were printed in April and distributed nationwide. The situation looks bleak for those who loathe the newcomer since the federal government plans to print as many as 400 million $2 bills by the end of the month and up to 800 million by 1977.

Since the $2 bill is here to stay, however, officials of Federal Reserve Banks across the country are encouraging merchants and consumers alike to use the new currency and like it.

THE RELUCTANCE OF the general public "has hindered the circulation of the $2 bill somewhat," says one representative of the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago, who asked to remain anonymous for security reasons.

More than half of the $2 bills originally circulated this spring have been retained by collectors. The remaining bills, however, are not appearing in the marketplace as they should be, the representative said.

"The federal government saves money by printing $2 bills instead of $1 bills. It prints double the money for the cost," he said.

"I think it's just going to take some time for people to get used to the new bills. We are doing all we can to encourage their use," the spokesman said.

THE FEDERAL RESERVE Bank, which supplies Chicago area banks with currency, reports that requests for supplies of $2 bills are decreasing.

Northwest suburban bank officials say their tellers are passing off the new bills to customers, but the deuces are often refused.

"There are some people who have refused the bills in the change we give to them, although we instruct the tellers to use them," said Joyce Rodevich, head teller for the Tollway-Arlington National Bank, Arlington Heights.

"Even though they might be confused with other bills, people wouldn't have to carry around as much money with them if they really used the $2 bills," she said.

"IT SEEMS THAT everyone is getting rid of the bills as soon as they get them," said Marjorie Mueller, head teller for the Mount Prospect State Bank, Mount Prospect.

"Store owners bring them in with their deposits so they don't have to keep them in their cash register drawers. Customers come in to exchange $2 bills for $1 bills," she said.

"It just takes time for people to accept a new kind of currency. It's just a matter of taking away old habits. But, the bank tellers had to learn to recount money just like customers had to learn how to spend the new bills," Ms. Mueller said.

One place where all sorts of people don't seem to mind spending the $2 bill is Arlington Park Race Track where the new currency is a natural for the minimum bet.

"PEOPLE ARE comfortable with the $2 bill here. It's a convenience for us and a convenience for them because less paper is exchanged for the same value," said Charles M. Hoff.

Today

Leo Anderson, recovering from gunshot wounds, is wheeled from church following his wife's funeral.

200 come to honor Anderson memories

by JOHN N. FRANK

St. Edna's Church stands on Arlington Heights Road, a simple, red brick and glass building which area Catholics call their church.

Phyllis Anderson was very much a part of this church. Her generosity helped construct the building where more than 200 friends and relatives came Wednesday to pay their last respects to Phyllis, who was killed Sunday on Chicago's South Side.

Mrs. Anderson's husband, Leo, attended the funeral in a wheelchair. He is recovering from surgery for gunshot wounds he received the night his wife was killed. The six Anderson children, three of whom were in the car when their parents were shot, also attended.

Their faces reflected sorrow and bewilderment at why such a thing should befall their mother.

Police suspect that Mrs. Anderson was the victim of racial hatred which led black South Siders to attack stranded white motorists Sunday. Her only fault "was to be forced off a flooded expressway by heavy rains," said State's Atty. Bernard Carey later Wednesday when announcing the indictment of Marion Logan, 30, for murdering Mrs. Anderson and wounding her husband.

"THE WHYS HAVE challenged the wisdom and the providence and the love of an Almighty God," said the Rev. John Doherty, who said the funeral Mass. To those who felt resentment and bitterness, he counseled remembrance of the words of Christ on the cross, "Father, forgive them."

"We have been frustrated by the helplessness of our doing anything to help," he said.

Speaking of Mrs. Anderson, Father Doherty said, "We are that much better for having lived with her, for having known her."

One word summed up her life, he said: "Love."

Father Doherty wore white vestments which symbolize joy. The body was covered with a white cloth, symbolizing the white Mrs. Anderson wore when baptized as a child.

"Phyllis Anderson lives on in her family, in her friends, in her community," Father Doherty said.

Reinstate special ed director, parents ask

by JUDY JOBBITT

A group of more than 60 Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 parents with students in special education programs has protested the decentralization plan for the special services department and has demanded reinstatement of the former director.

In a letter given to the school board Monday, the parents stated their "primary demand is that Merle Nevenhoven be immediately reinstated as head of special education and student services departments." They stated that he is the "only individual" responsible for developing the current special education programs.

Nevenhoven was demoted from the director of the department to a psychologist's position in the district this year as part of a reorganization of the central administration. Merlyn Swanson currently is director of pupil personnel services.

The parents told the board their "second demand is that you immediately reject your decision as to the decentralization of the special education and students services department. It is unacceptable to us in every way."

THE PARENTS also asked that they be "included in any future decisions as to changes" in the special education program department.

Mary Kay Canupp, wife of board member Charles Canupp, who presented the letter to the board on behalf of the parents, said the parents were not satisfied with the answers they received from Supt. Roger Bardwell.

"The goal of the decentralization plan is to place more people directly in contact with the students," Bardwell said Tuesday.

"The decentralization has not affected special education at all," he said. Bardwell said the instructors in the special education department are now assigned to a group of schools rather than to specific cases throughout the district as under the former system.

HE SAID this places more responsibility on the principal who, with the help of the teachers, must decide the number and type of special instructors needed in his building.

Bardwell said Swanson is responsible for overseeing the principals' decisions and ensuring that students are receiving the services they need.

Board president Judith Zanca said she sent a letter to the parents group stating the board hopes to have "better utilization of our staff" through the new plan. She said the board is "proud of our special education program" and that each school will have a full special services staff.

Mrs. Zanca said the board does not intend to reinstate Nevenhoven or change the current organization of special education staffing.

Gazebo fund day Friday

The Mount Prospect Junior Woman's Club is sponsoring a "Gazebo Donation Day" from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. Friday to raise funds for the Bicentennial project.

Volunteers will seek donations at the Chicago and North Western Ry. station in Mount Prospect during the morning commuter rush hour and all day at the gazebo construction site, the southeast end of the village hall parking lot, 100 S. Emerson St.

Donations also are being accepted at the Mount Prospect State Bank, 15 E. Busse Ave. The gazebo is scheduled to be used for the first time as a reviewing stand for the village's July 5 Bicentennial parade.

Funds OKd for unit hearing facts

by JUDY JOBBITT

High School Dist. 214 and Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 may legally spend funds to present evidence at unit school district hearings, according to an opinion from the Illinois Office of Education.

Julia Dempsey, IOE legal advisor, said Tuesday her opinion clarifies a question concerning the use of school funds for gathering and presenting information related to a unit district petition.

She said the type of expenditures approved by the districts to date in relation to the proposed Dist. 59 area unit district are legal within her interpretation of the law.

The clarification was requested by Cook County Schools' Supt. Richard Martwick's office following an opinion from Illinois Atty. Gen. William J. Scott on June 1.

SCOTT'S OPINION stated that a school board "may not expend school district funds to promote or oppose the formation of a unit school district."

William Wallin, chief of the opinion division in Scott's office, said Tuesday the opinion was "talking about spending funds at the referendum stage — whether a school district could campaign one way or another."

He said the opinion referred to a case in Vermilion County and states that a district cannot use school district funds to promote or oppose a unit district referendum.

Mrs. Dempsey said it is "reasonable" to expect school districts to present information at the unit district hearings that would support or oppose the petition. She said expenditures related to presenting the information would be appropriate.

MRS. DEMPSEY SAID it is "unreasonable" to demand a school district to present evidence without taking a stand on the issue. "If no one from the school district would be allowed to expend funds to present their side, it would be one sided," she said.

Mrs. Dempsey said she believes Scott was "addressing the specific question of influencing the voters" when the issue reached the referendum stage.

She said a school board "almost has a duty to present evidence" at the hearings so all sides can be heard.

She referred to a section in the Illinois School Code that sets the requirements for the unit district petition process. She said for affected school districts to have a "role at a hearing held on a petition proposing formation of a community unit school district" as authorized in the statutes and "to fulfill that role, school district funds may be expended. This has been the long standing practice in Illinois and is the only sensible reading of the statutes."

DIST. 59 SPENT $8,500 to hire a consultant to update information on a unit district for the elementary district's area. The original study conducted in 1973 cost between $18,000 and $20,000 and was used as the base for this year's study.

Dist. 59 also has hired the law firm of Reid, Ochenschlager, Murphy and Hupp for advice on the hearing procedures that will begin July 8.

Dist. 214 has retained the law firm of Fawell, James and Brooks for advice in opposing the unit district. The board has paid the firm $6,525 said Robert Weber, associate superintendent for business services.

The high school district also hired a court reporter to make transcripts of all unit district study committee meetings and published a special edition of the district's newsletter in March urging the community to oppose the unit district.

THE DIST. 214 board has voted to oppose the unit district. Dist. 59 has not taken formal action to oppose or support the unit district but two board members are on a committee of 10 residents who filed the unit district petitions with the county office.

Mrs. Dempsey said she does not believe any of the districts' expenditures are improper because they were not taken in relation to a specific referendum before the voters.

"I don't see any impropriety at all. It's too far removed from the opportunity to influence the voters," she said.

Before the issue can come before the voters, hearings must be set in which evidence will be presented on the issue. The county superintendent will make a recommendation to the state schools' superintendent who will review the material presented and decide whether a referendum will be held.

40 Dist. 59 teachers may get jobs back

Elk Grove Township Dist. 59 will be able to rehire 40 of the 54 first-year teachers released in March because of budget cuts.

The school board Monday will decide on rehiring 40 of the released teachers to replace tenured teachers who have resigned from the district.

Al Stone, associate superintendent, said Wednesday he anticipates the remaining first-year teachers who were released also will be rehired before fall.

"As resignations come in, I feel I'll be able to fulfill my statement that those who want to come back will be able to," he said.

Stone said the attrition rate of tenured teachers has been "about normal." Usually the district loses between 70 and 80 teachers each year through attrition.

The first-year teachers were released as part of budget cutbacks approved by the board that totaled more than $754,000 for the 1976-77 school year. Included in the budget cuts were 30 teaching positions.

By law the board was required to notify any teacher not receiving a contract for the 1976-77 school year within 60 days of the end of the 1975-76 school year.

The released teachers were given the first consideration for positions that opened up for this fall.

Cop's shooting of youth hearing resumes Friday

The long-delayed hearing in the case of an Elk Grove Village policeman sued in connection with the shooting April 5, 1975 of a Mount Prospect youth will resume Friday.

Village Atty. Edward C. Hofert said further legal arguments are expected during the 2 p.m. hearing before Cook County Circuit Court Judge Raymond K. Berg in Chicago's Civic Center.

Patrolman William Jaworski allegedly shot Timothy Engelson, 19, of 308 Hi-Lusi Ave., Mount Prospect, during a scuffle while Jaworski was investigating a traffic accident. Engelson is suing Jaworski for $1 million in damages.

Jaworski has been drawing $1,328 a month pay although he has been relieved of duty while the incident is under investigation by Hofert. Hofert's investigation, which is to determine whether Jaworski should be reinstated or charged with violating department rules, has been hampered by Engelson's $1 million civil suit which charges Jaworski with battery, negligence and willful and wanton misconduct.

Hofert has said the village wants to be "perfectly satisfied" before returning Jaworski to active duty.

Engelson was shot in the stomach during the predawn incident.

The long look down Navy Pier leads to an impressive view of Chicago's skyline.

One good way to p(i)er at the skyline

by KURT BAER

Visitors to Chicago this summer will not need a boat for an off-shore view of the city's spectacular skyline, thanks to the renovation and reopening of the 660-foot-long Navy Pier.

The city has spent six months and $7 million remodeling the five-eighths mile pier at Ohio Street and the lake. A promenade has been constructed along the north side for a walk or bicycle ride out to the end of the pier where three buildings have been restored to their pre-World War I condition.

The main objective has been to fix up the 60-year-old pier as a recreational facility, said Jerome Butler, architect for the city of Chicago.

"THEIR PRIMARY activity has been to get the pier once again usable so people can get out on it. For the past several years it has been accessible only from a second-floor walkway on the dock side where people could see the ships.

"From the far east end, the view of the skyline is really spectacular," Butler said.

Navy Pier reopens next month as the site for the Chicago International Trade Exposition, July 1-18, sponsored by the Chicago Assn. of Commerce and Industry.

On the event of the trade show opening, June 30, the Chicago School of Architecture Foundation will sponsor a benefit ball inaugurating the glass-walled auditorium at the eastern tip of the pier.

"WE'VE MADE AN honest attempt to restore the buildings. We've re-installed the original streetlights and gone to great lengths to match the existing building materials," Butler said.

Old-fashioned trolley cars will run along the north side of the pier for persons who do not want to walk or bike the distance.

A floating stage is being constructed on a barge south of the pier with grandstand seats positioned on the south deck.

There are plans for a restaurant on the second floor of one of the buildings with a sheltered picnic area below.

During the International Trade Fair acarnival will be in operation.

"THIS IS BY NO means the complete restoration of the entire pier. It still requires upgrading of the exhibition halls (west of the auditorium)," Butler said.

Navy Pier was built in 1916 at a cost of $4.5 million. It was part of a 1912 master plan that called for five piers to make Chicago an inland port and to divert water from the Chicago River.

At the time it opened, it was the largest structure of its kind in the world.

Navy Pier's golden age ran from 1918 to 1930 when excursion boats, ferris wheels, penny arcades and dancing in the auditorium made the facility one of the city's best known attractions.

DURING WORLD WAR II, the pier was base for a series of Navy training schools that educated some 60,000 recruits from 1941-46.

In the 1950s, pier buildings functioned as the two-year campus of the Chicago undergraduate division of the University of Illinois.

Shipping activity at Navy Pier declined in recent years. Windows in the buildings were broken and the environment was generally inhospitable to visitors.

Shipping will go on at Navy Pier, principally along the west half of the south dock. There are also plans to relocate the Naval armory on the pier.

Butler calls Navy Pier "Chicago's answer to Boardwalk in Atlantic City." During the Bicentennial year he said he expects it to be the scene of numerous shows and special programs.
